Washington—A soldier bonus law will be enacted before adjournment of the present session of congress, according to a decision reached by a White House conference between President Harding and administration leaders in and out of congress.

Washington—Complete survey of the menace of the corn borer and examination of the fight which is now being waged against the pest is expected to be made by the national agricultural conference, to be called by Secretary H. C. Wallace.

Washington—The desire of a huge movie trust to gain governmental and congressional favors lies behind the offer to Postmaster General Will Hays of a $100,000 salary to become director of the combined film industries, Senator Pat Harrison declared to the senate.

Washington—The question of Philippine independence will receive attention from the senate when the four power pact comes up for ratification. Efforts will be made to write into the treaty a promise by the United States to free the islands and at the same time extract a guaranty from the other powers to respect their territorial integrity.

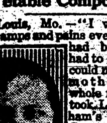
CRAMPS, PAINS AND BACKACHE

St. Louis Woman Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered with cramps and pains every month and had backache and had to go to bed as I could not work. My mother and my whole family always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for such troubles and they induced me to try it and it has helped me very much. I don't have cramps any more, and I can do my housework all through the month. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends for female troubles."—Mrs. DELLA SCHOLZ, 1412 Salisbury Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Just think for a moment. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use for nearly fifty years. It is prepared from medicinal plants, by the utmost pharmaceutical skill, and superior methods. The ingredients thus combined in the Compound correct the conditions which cause such annoying symptoms as had been troubling Mrs. Scholz. The Vegetable Compound exercises a restorative influence of the most desirable character, correcting the trouble in a gentle but efficient manner. This is noted by the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Virginia—Policemen and firemen of this city have accepted a 10 per cent cut in wages.

Windom—Barney Loughren, aged 92, resident of this section of the state since 1868, is dead.

St. Cloud—The St. Cloud police department made 598 arrests in 1921 as compared with 387 in 1920.

St. James—The Watonwan County Poultry association's annual show opened here with 350 birds entered.

Hibbing—The Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Trading association, incorporated for $50,000, has opened for business here.

Rochester — A. R. Ondler, charged with conducting an indecent dance at Douglas, this county, was acquitted by a jury in district court.

Thief River Falls—Morlan Bishop has resigned his position as examiner at the state banking department to accept a position as assistant cashier in the state treasurer's office.

Redwood Falls—C. A. Johnson, for the last eight years owner and editor of the Bellview Independent, has sold his business to G. H. McQuary of Sioux Falls, who has taken possession of the plant.

Winona — Bishop Charles Bayard Mitchell and G. A. Cahoon, district superintendent of the Winona district, assisted in dedicating a new $30,000 organ at the Central Methodist Episcopal church here.

Hibbing — Plans and specifications have been submitted to the city water and light board for addition to the municipal plant to cost from $100,000 to $150,000, and are to be acted on by the board at its next meeting.

Duluth—Juries that bring in verdicts right after the members have partaken of expensive meals at the county's expense were the subject of criticism by Judge W. A. Cant, who addressed petit jurors in district court here.

Fairmont—Failing to obtain $1,000 bail after being arraigned in court here on a charge of having hired Henry Johnson to burn down a cottage at Fox Lake last fall, Professor Robert Rockvam, a dancing master, was sent to the county jail.

Robbinsdale—Children of Robbinsdale established themselves in their new $140,000 school building following dedication exercises. Governor J. A. O. Preus, W. L. Nolan, Tom Girling and Mrs. May Dills, county superintendent of schools, were speakers.

St. Paul—Prices of farm machinery manufactured by the state of Minnesota at Stillwater prison will be cut heavily this year, the state board of control announced, when a delegation from the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation waited on the board to ask for the price reduction.

Jackson—When Sheriff O. C. Lee arrived at Albert Raut's home near this city to arrest Raut on a charge of attempting to set fire to his home, he found the house in flames. The sheriff smashed down the kitchen door and succeeded in rescuing the demented man and his wife.

Fergus Falls — A special election will be held here Jan. 31 to vote on the adoption of a new charter which has been prepared by the city charter commission. The new charter abolishes the present city council and provides for a commission form of government with a salaried city manager.

St. Paul—Attorney General Clifford L. Hilton was asked to fight elimination by the Twin City Rapid Transit company of the neutral streetcar fare zone between Minneapolis and St. Paul in a resolution passed by the Minnesota Agricultural society at its final session. Serious handicap to the State Fair by forcing visitors to pay two fares was cited in the resolution.

Fergus Falls—Senator Ole O. Sageng of Dalton announced himself a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in the ninth district, "subject to the indorsement of the republican district convention in Moorhead, March 30." He will oppose Congressman Halvor Steenerson of Crookston.

St. Paul—Minnesota historians, bent upon preserving for future generations the state's traditions, records and lore, are disseminating to their various communities plans for establishing historical societies in every Minnesota community. How best to establish these societies was discussed at the 73d annual meetin gof the Minnesota Historical society in the Historical building.

Minneapolis—With the achievements of Andrew Jackson as their beacon light, 200 men and women gathered at the Jackson day dinner of the Minnesota Democratic Club at the Leamington hotel and informally discussed plans for their next campaign.

Minneapolis — Wholesale price of butter dropped 3 cents and of eggs 5 cents at the exchange on commission row. Butter sold at 30 cents a pound, less than one-third of its wholesale price a year ago. It was 62 cents on Jan. 10, 1921. Eggs sold at 28 cents a dozen today, and for 60 cents a year ag

Slayton—Slayton will make a bid for a National Guard unit as soon as there is an opening.

Pipestone—Fire, caused by an overturned lantern, resulted in the destruction of the barn and death of 11 farm horses.

Red Wing—Mayor F. H. Kroeger has announced the appointment of Mrs. Zelisky of St. Paul as a regular member of the police force.

Red Wing—Births in this city in 1921 were 248 as against 131 in 1920. Marriage licenses issued for 1921 numbered 304, six more than in 1920.

Fairmont—Thirty large trucks have arrived here in readiness to begin work on a $42,000 graveling contract on the Blue Earth road leading east from this city.

Clarkfield—Rev. O. T. Storaasli, for the last 14 years pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church here, has accepted a call to become pastor of the church at Emmons, Minn.

Ellendale — Plans for a combined farmers' institute and corn show have been completed by committees in connection with the Steele county Farm Bureau offices for Jan. 20.

Olivia—Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Hodgdon, living near here, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They have resided on their farm since the day following their marriage.

St. Cloud—Albert G. Whitney, head of the St. Cloud Public Service company and affiliated enterprises, died suddenly of heart disease at Portland, Me.

Pipestone—When Police Captain Thompson attempted to arrest a member of a gang of four strangers, two of the gang threatened to shoot Thompson and all four then escaped in an auto.

Albert Lea — Three striking employes of Wilson & Co., packers, were fined and sentenced to jail upon conviction of having violated an injunction and restraining order restricting picketing.

Pipestone — The Boy Scouts here have received a letter from President Warren G. Harding thanking them for a peace pipe, made from the sacred red pipestone, which they sent to him as a holiday gift.

Pipestone — Jerry Hines, theater owner, has been indicted by the Pipestone county grand jury on a charge of arson. The charge holds that Hines attempted to destroy his $100,000 theater here by fire on the night of Nov. 14 last.

Winona — A building program, aimed to put Winona grade schools on a par with those in other cities of the state and the erection of a high school gymnasium and auditorium, was advocated at a meeting of business men.

Minneapolis—Approximately 300,000 tourists, more than half of them from outside of Minnesota, visited the hotels, summer resorts and communities of Minnesota in the last year, according to officials of the Ten Thousand Lakes association.

Fairmont — The statement of the Fairmont Canning company of business done in 1921 shows the company cleared about $25,000 on the year's business. The company paid almost $23,000 more for cans than the corn that was put in them.

Waseca—A carload of flour consigned to the Russian relief by the Echo mills here and an additional 130 barrels paid for by popular subscription, was started for New York, from where it will be shipped to Russia through the American Friends' society.

Minneapolis—Minnesota became an official link in the chain of states containing the longest highway in the world—the Glacier trail—when representatives of the association from five states gathered at Curtis hotel to perfect the organization and to lay plans for marking the highway from Breckenridge to Glacier National park this year.

St. Paul—Probate judges elected in Minnesota in 1920 hold over until Jan. 1, 1925, according to a decision of the state supreme court in a case brought to test this question. The people voted for a constitutional amendment at the 1920 election, extending probate judges' terms to four years, and the court holds that this applied to the judges chosen at the same election.

St. Paul—General optimism regarding the outlook for 1922 state and county fairs was expressed at the 63d annual meeting at the state capitol of members of the Minnesota Agricultural society and the Minnesota Federation of County Fairs. Figures and facts were submitted to show that, while 1921 state and county fairs were on the whole successful, 1922 fairs will be more successful.

Luverne — That co-operative shipping of livestock by the farmers of Rock county has proven beneficial is shown by the report delivered at the Luverne Livestock Shipping association meeting. In 1921 the association shipped 155 carloads of livestock, sold for $199,807.61, of which sum the individual feeders received $197,147.60, while the difference of $2,650.01 represents the cost of handling the 155 carloads of stock by the association.

St. Paul—Nearly 1,000 persons who lost property in the Cloquet fire, valued at $20,000,000 or more, will lose their right to recover damage unless they file suit on or before Feb. 28, according to a notification made public by the Cloquet Fire Reimbursement association.

St. Paul—C. W. Glotfelter of Waterville was elected president of the Minnesota Shorthorn Breeders' association at the annual meeting here. The meeting was attended by more than sixty-five members of the association who are here to attend the sixth Royal show and sale at South St. Paul

IRRIGATION IN NORTH DAKOTA

Charts Have Been Drawn of all the Irrigatable Lands in the State.

BETTER FARM LANDS

Millions of Acres Throughout the State Can Be Made Productive by Irrigation, States George H. McMahon, Engineer.

Bismarck, N. D.—North Dakota has close to a million acres of land that can be irrigated, according to George H. McMahon, assistant state engineer, especially in charge of irrigation projects in the state offices here. Much of the land in the central, northern and western parts of the state has some possibilities of being reached by water and at some points, the amount of land that might be reached by irrigation is limited by the amount of water available.

Interest in the irrigation projects in North Dakota has been increased at the present time by President Harding's recent address in which he advocated the reclamation of arid lands as a means of finding homes for soldiers of the world war who desired to engage in agriculture. North Dakota has a numebr of irrrigation projects, the most successful one from the standpoint of a large pumping station being the one at Williston. This was opened some years ago, closed for a time and then reopened during the war under a war time act that compelled all the farms benefitted by the project to become a part of the irrigation system. Most of the North Dakota projects are for pumping, but a number are for the gravity distribution of water.

In Burleigh County.

Local attention was called to an almost forgotten project, known in the annals of government engineering as the Bismarck projects, through the receipt of a letter from Congressman George Young, asking for the details of the plan. The local project was surveyed in 1904 and 1905 and the government reports were made at that time. The plan supported then was for a pumping station near the point where the Bismarck-Mandan bridge now stands. The project proposed the watering the bench of bottom land on the Bismarck side of the river, the higher bench known as the Fort Lincoln and a still higher elevation known as the penitentiary bench. The first bench, approximately 25 feet above extreme low water is subject to overflow ad contains about 7,000 acres. The Fort Lincoln bench has about 3,500 acres and the penitentiary bench about the same. The report of the government engineers shows that of the three benches, about 9,000 acres were considered available for irrigation. The engineers also charted the grade from the pumping station to Long Lake, to determine the feasibility of using that as a holding reservoir for lands to the south and east of the lake.

In connection with the Bismarck project, Mr. McMahon points out that as far as the land is concerned it is not a gamble. The floods that cover the bottom lands every few years when ice gorges force an overflow generally result in two good crops. For the two seasons, wheat yields from 30 to 40 bushels an acre, potatoes 250 and oats as high as 90. The production of hay is doubled for the two years.

Has Prepared Chart.

In the 1904-05 plans of the government for this project the original cost was placed at $27 an acre and the yearly operating cost at about $2.25 per acre. What this means in the increase in value of farm crops and land as compared to the cost has been attempted, according to Mr. McMahon. In the Williston project alone he has figures to show that production and land prices both increased from three to six times the former figures.

Mr. McMahon, who has drawn the chart of the irrigation possibilities of the state in intimate fashion and has an acquaintance with most of the land elevations and surface irregularities of the state believed that the greatest immediate prospect for irrigation is along the Little Missouri where there are little valleys or benches along the river of from 100 to 300 acres which lend themselves readily to irrigation projects. This land is especially available because of the greater ease of raising alfalfa by irrigation and the ready market for feed in that part of the state.

Use Best Seed for Planting.

Fargo.—"Many South Dakota crop growers are overlooking the possibilities of economical and profitable production by their failure to use the best seed of the proper varieties," states Ralph E. Johnston, extension agronomist at South Dakota State college. "The different varieties of any one farm crop are known to produce differently. To secure the best seed of the proper variety should be the aim of very grower. The extra price for this class of seed is far below its producing power."

Flying Automobile.

A flying automobile is the latest development in the French aero world. A successful demonstration of an ordinary automobile with folding wings, two engines, one of ten horsepower for land going and the other of 300 horsepower for air travel, was held recently at Buc, Seine-et-Oise. The machine performed all the usual feats of an airplane and also of an automobile.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Your Kidneys or Back Bother You?

Austin, Minn.—"Some time ago I caught a heavy cold which settled on my kidneys and affected my bladder. I suffered intensely and had to take to my bed. My mother recommended Dr. Pierce's Anuric (kidney and backache) Tablets and I took them to relieve the congestion in my kidneys and bladder. They soon gave me relief, and not only that, but they eventually restored me to my usual good health. I took six bottles of An-uric, but it was well worth it for my kidneys and bladder have been in perfect condition ever since."—Mrs. John Zook, 103 S. Jay St.

Since it is such a simple matter to step into a drug store and obtain Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets, anyone who earnestly desires to regain health and new life will waste no time in obtaining them.

CRAMPS, PAINS AND BACKACHE

St. Louis Woman Relieved by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

St. Louis, Mo.—"I was bothered with cramps and pains every month and had backache and had to go to bed as I could not work. My mother and my whole family always took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for such troubles and they induced me to try it and it has helped me very much. I don't have cramps any more, and I can do my housework all through the month. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends for female troubles."—Mrs. DELLA SCHOLZ, 1412 Salisbury Street, St. Louis, Mo.

Just think for a moment. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been in use for nearly fifty years. It is prepared from medicinal plants, by the utmost pharmaceutical skill, and superior methods. The ingredients thus combined in the Compound correct the conditions which cause such annoying symptoms as had been troubling Mrs. Scholz. The Vegetable Compound exercises a restorative influence of the most desirable character, correcting the trouble in a gentle but efficient manner. This is noted, by the disappearance, one after another, of the disagreeable symptoms.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Virginia—Policemen and firemen of this city have accepted a 10 per cent cut in wages.

Windom—Barney Loughren, aged 92, resident of this section of the state since 1868, is dead.

St. Cloud—The St. Cloud police department made 598 arrests in 1921 as compared with 387 in 1920.

St. James—The Watonwan County Poultry association's annual show opened here with 350 birds entered.

Hibbing—The Farmers' Co-operative Creamery Trading association, incorporated for $50,000, has opened for business here.

Thief River Falls—Morlan Bishop has resigned his position as examiner at the state banking department to accept a position as assistant cashier in the state treasurer's office.

Redwood Falls—C. A. Johnson, for the last eight years owner and editor of the Bellview Independent, has sold his business to G. H. McQuary of Sioux Falls, who has taken possession of the plant.

Winona — Bishop Charles Bayard Mitchell and G. A. Cahoon, district superintendent of the Winona district, assisted in dedicating a new $30,000 organ at the Central Methodist Episcopal church here.

Hibbing — Plans and specifications have been submitted to the city water and light board for addition to the municipal plant to cost from $100,000 to $150,000, and are to be acted on by the board at its next meeting.

Duluth—Juries that bring in verdicts right after the members have partaken of expensive meals at the county's expense were the subject of criticism by Judge W. A. Cant, who addressed petit jurors in district court here.

Fairmont—Failing to obtain $1,000 bail after being arraigned in court here on a charge of having hired Henry Johnson to burn down a cottage at Fox Lake last fall, Professor Robert Rockvam, a dancing master, was sent to the county jail.

Robbinsdale—Children of Robbinsdale established themselves in their new $140,000 school building following dedication exercises. Governor J. A. O. Preus, W. I. Nolan, Tom Girling and Mrs. May Dills, county superintendent of schools, were speakers.

St. Paul—Prices of farm machinery manufactured by the state of Minnesota at Stillwater prison will be cut heavily this year, the state board of control announced, when a delegation from the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation waited on the board to ask for the price reduction.

Jackson—When Sheriff O. C. Lee arrived at Albert Raut's home near this city to arrest Raut on a charge of attempting to set fire to his home, he found the house in flames. The sheriff smashed down the kitchen door and succeeded in rescuing the demented man and his wife.

Fergus Falls — A special election will be held here Jan. 31 to vote on the adoption of a new charter which has been prepared by the city charter commission. The new charter abolishes the present city council and provides for a commission form of government with a salaried city manager.

St. Paul—Attorney General Clifford L. Hilton was asked to fight elimination by the Twin City Rapid Transit company of the neutral streetcar fare zone between Minneapolis and St. Paul in a resolution passed by the Minnesota Agricultural society at its final session. Serious handicap to the State Fair by forcing visitors to pay two fares was cited in the resolution.

Fergus Falls—Senator Ole O. Sageng of Dalton announced himself a candidate for the republican nomination for congress in the ninth district, "subject to the indorsement of the republican district convention in Moorhead, March 30." He will oppose Congressman Halvor Steenerson of Crookston.

St. Paul—Minnesota historians, bent upon preserving for future generations the state's traditions, records and lore, are disseminating to their various communities plans for establishing historical societies in every Minnesota community. How best to establish these societies was discussed at the 73d annual meetin gof the Minnesota Historical society in the Historical building.

Minneapolis—With the achievements of Andrew Jackson as their beacon light, 200 men and women gathered at the Jackson day dinner of the Minnesota Democratic Club at the Leamington hotel and informally discussed plans for their next campaign.

Minneapolis — Wholesale price of butter dropped 3 cents and of eggs 5 cents at the exchange on commission row. Butter sold at 30 cents a pound, less than one-third of its wholesale price a year ago. It was 62 cents on Jan. 10, 1921. Eggs sold at 28 cents a dozen today. and for 60 cents a year ag

Slayton—Slayton will make a bid for a National Guard unit as soon as there is an opening.

Pipestone—Fire, caused by an overturned lantern, resulted in the destruction of the barn and death of 11 farm horses.

Red Wing—Mayor F. H. Kroeger has announced the appointment of Mrs. Zelisky of St. Paul as a regular member of the police force.

Red Wing—Births in this city in 1921 were 248 as against 131 in 1920. Marriage licenses issued for 1921 numbered 304, six more than in 1920.

Fairmont—Thirty large trucks have arrived here in readiness to begin work on a $42,000 graveling contract on the Blue Earth road leading east from this city.

Clarkfield—Rev. O. T. Storaasli, for the last 14 years pastor of the Norwegian Lutheran church here, has accepted a call to become pastor of the church at Emmons, Minn.

Ellendale — Plans for a combined farmers' institute and corn show have been completed by committees in connection with the Steele county Farm Bureau offices for Jan. 20.

Olivia—Mr. and Mrs. Orrin Hodgdon, living near here, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. They have resided on their farm since the day following their marriage.

St. Cloud—Albert G. Whitney, head of the St. Cloud Public Service company and affiliated enterprises, died suddenly of heart disease at Portland, Me.

Pipestone—When Police Captain Thompson attempted to arrest a member of a gang of four strangers, two of the gang threatened to shoot Thompson and all four then escaped in an auto.

Albert Lea — Three striking employes of Wilson & Co., packers, were fined and sentenced to jail upon conviction of having violated an injunction and restraining order restricting picketing.

Pipestone — The Boy Scouts here have received a letter from President Warren G. Harding thanking them for a peace pipe, made from the sacred red pipestone, which they sent to him as a holiday gift.

Pipestone — Jerry Hines, theater owner, has been indicted by the Pipestone county grand jury on a charge of arson. The charge holds that Hines attempted to destroy his $100,000 theater here by fire on the night of Nov. 14 last.

Winona — A building program, aimed to put Winona grade schools on a par with those in other cities of the state and the erection of a high school gymnasium and auditorium, was advocated at a meeting of business men.

Minneapolis—Approximately 300,000 tourists, more than half of them from outside of Minnesota, visited the hotels, summer resorts and communities of Minnesota in the last year, according to officials of the Ten Thousand Lakes association.

Fairmont — The statement of the Fairmont Canning company of business done in 1921 shows the company cleared about $25,000 on the year's business. The company paid almost $23,000 more for cans than the corn that was put in them.

Waseca—A carload of flour consigned to the Russian relief by the Echo mills here and an additional 130 barrels paid for by popular subscription, was started for New York, from where it will be shipped to Russia through the American Friends' society.

Minneapolis—Minnesota became an official link in the chain of states containing the longest highway in the world—the Glacier trail—when representatives of the association from five states gathered at Curtis hotel to perfect the organization and to lay plans for marking the highway from Breckenridge to Glacier National park this year.

St. Paul—Probate judges elected in Minnesota in 1920 hold over until Jan. 1, 1925, according to a decision of the state supreme court in a case brought to test this question. The people voted for a constitutional amendment at the 1920 election, extending probate judges' terms to four years, and the court holds that this applied to the judges chosen at the same election.

St. Paul—General optimism regarding the outlook for 1922 state and county fairs was expressed at the 63d annual meeting at the state capitol of members of the Minnesota Agricultural society and the Minnesota Federation of County Fairs. Figures and facts were submitted to show that, while 1921 state and county fairs were on the whole successful, 1922 fairs will be more successful.

Luverne — That co-operative shipping of livestock by the farmers of Rock county has proven beneficial is shown by the report delivered at the Luverne Livestock Shipping association meeting. In 1921 the association shipped 155 carloads of livestock, sold for $199,807.61, of which sum the individual feeders received $197,147.60, while the difference of $2,650.01 represents the cost of handling the 155 carloads of stock by the association.

St. Paul—Nearly 1,000 persons who lost property in the Cloquet fire, valued at $20,000,000 or more, will lose their right to recover damage unless they file suit on or before Feb. 28, according to a notification made public by the Cloquet Fire Reimbursement association.

St. Paul—C. W. Glotfelter of Waterville was elected president of the Minnesota Shorthorn Breeders' association at the annual meeting here. The meeting was attended by more than sixty-five members of the association who are here to attend the sixth Royal show and sale at South St. Paul

Efforts will be made to write into the treaty a promise by the United States to free the islands and at the same time extract a guaranty from the other powers to respect their territorial integrity.

IRRIGATION IN NORTH DAKOTA

Charts Have Been Drawn of all the Irrigatable Lands in the State.

BETTER FARM LANDS

Millions of Acres Throughout the State Can Be Made Productive by Irrigation, States George H. McMahon, Engineer.

Bismarck, N. D.—North Dakota has close to a million acres of land that can be irrigated, according to George H. McMahon, assistant state engineer, especially in charge of irrigation projects in the state offices here. Much of the land in the central, northern and western parts of the state has some possibilities of being reached by water and at some points, the amount of land that might be reached by irrigation is limited by the amount of water available.

Interest in the irrigation projects in North Dakota has been increased at the present time by President Harding's recent address in which he advocated the reclamation of arid lands as a means of finding homes for soldiers of the world war who desired to engage in agriculture. North Dakota has a numebr of irrigation projects, the most successful one from the standpoint of a large pumping station being the one at Williston. This was opened some years ago, closed for a time and then reopened during the war under a war time act that compelled all the farms benefitted by the project to become a part of the irrigation system. Most of the North Dakota projects are for pumping, but a number are for the gravity distribution of water.

In Burleigh County.

Local attention was called to an almost forgotten project, known in the annals of government engineering as the Bismarck projects, through the receipt of a letter from Congressman George Young, asking for the details of the plan. The local project was surveyed in 1904 and 1905 and the government reports were made at that time. The plan supported then was for a pumping station near the point where the Bismarck-Mandan bridge now stands. The project proposed the watering the bench of bottom land on the Bismarck side of the river, the higher bench known as the Fort Lincoln and a still higher elevation known as the penitentiary bench. The first bench, approximately 25 feet above extreme low water is subject to overflow ad contains about 7,000 acres. The Fort Lincoln bench has about 3,500 acres and the penitentiary bench about the same. The report of the government engineers shows that of the three benches, about 9,000 acres were considered available for irrigation. The engineers also charted the grade from the pumping station to Long Lake, to determine the feasibility of using that as a holding reservoir for lands to the south and east of the lake.

In connection with the Bismarck project, Mr. McMahon points out that as far as the land is concerned it is not a gamble. The floods that cover the bottom lands every few years when ice gorges force an overflow generally result in two good crops. For the two seasons, wheat yields from 30 to 40 bushels an acre, potatoes 250 and oats as high as 90. The production of hay is doubled for the two years.

Has Prepared Chart.

In the 1904-05 plans of the government for this project the original cost was placed at $27 an acre and the yearly operating cost at about $2.25 per acre. What this means in the increase in value of farm crops and land as compared to the cost has been attempted, according to Mr. McMahon. In the Williston project alone he has figures to show that production and land prices both increased from three to six times the former figures.

Mr. McMahon, who has drawn the chart of the irrigation possibilities of the state in intimate fashion and has an acquaintance with most of the land elevations and surface irregularities of the state believed that the greatest immediate prospect for irrigation is along the Little Missouri where there are little valleys or benches along the river of from 100 to 300 acres which lend themselves readily to irrigation projects. This land is especially available because of the greater ease of raising alfalfa by irrigation and the ready market for feed in that part of the state.

Use Best Seed for Planting.

Fargo.—"Many South Dakota crop growers are overlooking the possibilities of economical and profitable production by their failure to use the best seed of the proper varieties," states Ralph E. Johnston, extension agronomist at South Dakota State college. "The different varieties of any one farm crop are known to produce differently. To secure the best seed of the proper variety should be the aim of very grower. The extra price for this class of seed is far below its producing power."

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California' or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Your Kidneys or Back Bother You?

Austin, Minn.—"Some time ago I caught a heavy cold which settled on my kidneys and affected my bladder. I suffered intensely and had to take to my bed. My mother recommended Dr. Pierce's Anuric (kidney and backache) Tablets and I took them to relieve the congestion in my kidneys and bladder. They soon gave me relief, and not only that, but they eventually restored me to my usual good health. I took six bottles of An-uric, but it was well worth it for my kidneys and bladder have been in perfect condition ever since."—Mrs. John Zook, 103 S. Jay St.

Since it is such a simple matter to step into a drug store and obtain Dr. Pierce's Anuric Tablets, anyone who earnestly desires to regain health and new life will waste no time in obtaining them.

Wonderful Cuba Caves.

The wonderful caves of Bellamar, Cuba, to the east of Havana, attract the attention of the ambitious tourist. They are on a plateau as level as a table top, which presents no signs of the existence of such caves. After descending into the earth, however, a picture unfolds itself. Then come many passages, and at last the great "Gothic temple," 250 feet long and 84 feet wide.

Pay Your Bills by Check

One of our customers came into the bank not long ago and asked to see a certain check which he had issued, and which he described. It was one that he had paid in the settlement of a business account. Thru unintentional error he had not received proper credit for the amount.

He was given the check and with it proved that the bill had been paid. He was given credit for the amount because the check with the proper endorsement was accepted as a receipt. A checking account is the surest safeguard against paying an obligation a second time. We invite you to call and let us explain more fully the advantages of a checking account.

MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS

Read This Letter from Mrs. W. S. Hughes

Greenville, Del.—"I was under the impression that my eldest daughter had some internal trouble as ever since the first time her sickness appeared she had to go to bed and even had to quit school once for a week. I always take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound myself so I gave it to her and she has received great benefit from it. You can use this letter for a testimonial if you wish, as I cannot say too much about what your medicine has done for me and for my daughter."—Mrs. WM. S. HUGHES, Greenville, Delaware.

Mothers and oftentimes grandmothers have taken and have learned the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So they recommend the medicine to others.

The best test of any medicine is what it has done for others. For nearly fifty years we have published letters from mothers, daughters, and women, young and old, recommending the Vegetable Compound. They know what it did for them and are glad to tell others. In your own neighborhood are women who know of its great value.

Mothers—daughters, why not try it?

IRISH OFFICIALS TAKE OFFICE

Mansion House Continues to be Headquarters for Irish Republic.

NEED PEOPLES SUPPORT

Dublin.—The new Irish ministers now are installed in offices in the city hall. They are in the capacity of a provisional government, but the Mansion house continues the headquarters of the "Irish Republic." Arthur Griffith, president of the Dail Eireann, has has offices there. Although he has no post in the provisional government, he is keeping in close touch with all of its activities.

Armed sentries of the Irish republican army were on duty outside the city hall when members of the provisional government entered officially to occupy the premises. Michael Collins, head of the provisional government, was one of the first to arrive. Shortly afterward, Mr. Griffith entered and chatted for some time with Mr. Collins and other ministers.

The new government is being sharply pursued in the newspaper, the Irish Republic, of which Austin Stack is the principal director and editor, and Liam Mellowes and Erskins Childers are inspiring spirits. In its issue the Irish republic will discuss the legal position of the new government after the handling over of the powers at Dublin castle. It will argue that unless the ministers have been sworn in as privy councillors and given the powers provided for in the home rule act of 1920 their whole status is illegal.

It has been clearly recognized all along by lawyers that the new government cannot during the transition period depend on technical legal powers, but must depend on the willingness of the people to obey it. It has been suggested that later all its proceedings can be validated in an act indemnity.

EMPHASIZE NEED OF RELIEF

Confab Talkers Emphasize Immediate Relief of Farmers.

Washington.—Immediate relief must be given farmers in the present agricultural crisis, delegates to the national agricultural conference, which opened here today, were told by speakers representing every phase of this industry.

President Harding, who opened the conference with an address, Secretary Wallace, farmers and representatives of industries dependent of agriculture, emphasizedt he seriousness of the situation and suggested remedies.

Remedial measures outlined by the president and subsequently endorsed by many of the speakers included more adequate financial facilities, especially working capital, for the farmers on long time loans to provide for his turnover; extension of the co-operative marketing, buying and loan associations of farmers; development of waterway transportation ond power possibilities; more efficient machinery for collecting and distributing market information, including the demand and consumption outlook; development of the St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway project and assurance to agriculture of equal opportunity with all other industries.

Bryan Praises Bloc.

William J. Bryan, who was in the audience, was called to the platform and described the conference as one of the most important held in this country in a long time. Agriculture, he said, was in the worst condition in 30 years and he could not see how there could be any general prosperity until the condition of the farmer was improved.

Praising the agricultural bloc, he said it was different from other blocs because its members had "acted openly and the others acted secretly."

Pledge to Withdraw Japanese Troops in Siberia.

Washington.—A sweeping disclaimer of any designs against the territorial integrity of Russia coupled with a pledge to withdraw the Japanese troops stationed in Siberia as soon as orderly conditions are restored, was presented to the arms conference far eastern committee by the Japanese delegation, and was received with a general show of satisfaction by the representatives of the other principal powers.

Caucus Called on Bonus Bill.

Washington.—Call for a caucus of Republican members of the house on the soldier bonus question has been issued. Immediate action on an adjusted compensation bill has been demanded by a group of members who were in the military service during the war. At the Thursday night conference they plan to offer a resolution instructing the waysa nd means committee to proceed at once to the drafting of a bonus measure

REASON IN THIS ARGUMENT

Also Miss Katie Might Have Discerned Something Sounding Suspiciously Like a Compliment.

A faithful old servant in a southern family has recently become a grandmother. "What does Libby call her new baby, Mandy?" the old woman was asked.

"She named her 'Gabrielle,' miss—after you."

"Why, the idea, Mandy. You know my name is not Gabrielle. You've called me 'Miss Katie' all your life."

"Yas'm, Miss Katie—dat I does. But when it comes to naming babies after folkses, it ain't what dey is called it is what dey is like dat you names 'em foh. You shorely is mo' like 'Miss Gabrielle' dan you is like 'Miss Katie,' jes, like Libby says."

Just Making Sure.

Backward and forward Johnny marched before the garden gate. He had a brand-new rifle and was playing at being a soldier on sentry duty.

To him came the lady from next door, her eyes cold and hard.

"Johnny, did you break my window?" she demanded sternly, pointing as she spoke to her damaged property.

Johnny paused in his stride and eyed her thoughtfully.

"Did you see me do it?" he asked cautiously.

"No, I didn't, but—"

"Then I didn't."

And he resumed his marching.

Acceptable Advice.

"You get a great deal of gratuitous advice from your constituents, I dare say."

"Oh, yes," replied Senator Snortsworthy.

"Ever act on any of it?"

"Occasionally. Some of the most enjoyable vacations I ever had were taken at the suggestion of constituents who thought I was overworked."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Dusuns Have Women Priests.

Women priests dominate the Dusuns, a curious tribe of people inhabiting a section of British North Borneo.

Cole's Carbolisalve Quickly Relieves and heals burning, itching and torturing skin diseases. It instantly stops the pain of burns. Heals without scars. 30c and 60c. Ask your druggist, or send 30c to The J. W. Cole Co., Rockford, Ill., for a package.—Advertisement.

Clear Case.

"I don't take prohibition cases," said the lawyer.

"But I'm an innocent man, I tell you. I'm charged with having liquor in my possession, but I'm the person who called up the police department and stated that I had found twenty-four quarts of Scotch buried in my backyard."

"You say you called up the police and let them carry off that Scotch when you might have concealed it in a hundred different places and defied the true owner, to get possession of it?"

"Certainly."

"Well, you must be innocent. I'll engage to defend you."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

With a Reservation.

"Miss Smith—Belinda," sighed the young man passionately, "there's something I want to tell you—something that I—"

"What is it?" asked the girl, as she leaned back in her chair, with a bored expression on her face.

The young man drew a long breath, and his face turned to dull purple. "It is a question which is very near to my heart," he said awkwardly. "Could you—do you think you could ever marry a man like me?"

"Oh, yes," replied Belinda, quite calmly, "that is, if he wasn't too much like you."

Mean Thing!

Miss Olde—I fainted dead away last night.

Miss Keen—Who proposed?

Many ambitious men and women live only half a life—and don't know it

No person whose nerves are continually irritated, whose appetite and digestion are disturbed, or who doesn't sleep well has more than half his normal chance for success in life. For weakness, debility, anemia and general lack of tone are a serious handicap to anybody.

Those who drink tea or coffee are often sufferers from these conditions. Tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance which has a decided stimulant action on the nerves and brain cells.

Each cup of strong coffee contains about as large a dose of caffeine as your doctor would ordinarily give to a very sick person.

You can readily see that the effect of giving this stimulant regularly to a well person might finally have a tendency to make him sick.

If you want to avoid a very common cause of irritation and enjoy restful sleep, good digestion, and all the feeling of vigor and robust endurance that comes to healthy, normal people, quit tea and coffee, and drink Postum, instead. It is a rich, coffee-like cereal beverage—perfectly delicious!

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, aromatic beverage and see how much better you'll feel—able to do more without becoming fatigued—as thousands have discovered for themselves.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. Sold by all grocers.

Events of the Week

The week of February 6-10, 1922, promises to be an eventful one in the Red River Valley. Ever since the first Northwest School Farmers' Short Course was held, in 1910, this annual event has grown in scope and importance, showing in a very concrete way the wonderful progress that is being made in farming. It has brought state and national leaders to the Valley who have given messages of instruction and inspiration valuable to all.

The events of the week are:

FARM CROPS EXHIBITS, including corn, potatoes, grains and grasses, and corn and potato exhibits by Boys' and Girls' Club members. For this show premiums aggregating $1,500.00 are provided by Minnesota Red River Valley Development association, including $500.00 given by the Minnesota Crop Improvement association as special awards for the Red River Valley Crops Show. A corn and potato judging contest is also held in connection with this exhibit.

The Farm Crops Show is held on the first and second floors of the Live Stock Sales Pavilion, located next to the Armory.

LIVE STOCK SHOW, including pure bred beef and dairy cattle, swine and sheep of all the breeds, and a Junior Live Stock Show for exhibits of dairy and baby beef calves, sheep and swine by Boys' and Girls' Club members. For this show premiums aggregating $3,000.00 are provided by the Red River Valley Live Stock association, whose 1900 members own the three splendid buildings shown above, having a floor area of about 1½ acres.

The winter live stock show was begun in 1917 when 68 head were exhibited in a rented building. Over 500 head were entered in the 1921 show.

Sales of pure bred stock are held every day after the judging is completed. The 1919 sales aggregated over $100,000.

Live Stock judging contests are held every year for farm club [illegible] team members, high and consolidated school teams, and the Northwest School of Agriculture. Prominent live stock breeders and college experts do the judging in the sales arena, where hundreds have an opportunity of seeing the stock shown.

POULTRY SHOW, including poultry from the [illegible] farmers and poultry raisers in the state, and a Junior Department as well. For this show premiums aggregating $600.00 are provided by the Northern Minnesota Poultry association. The poultry exhibit will be held on the second floor of Annex B, facing Fourth Street.

INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITS [illegible] tractors, and all the equipment necessary for successful farming as well as household equipment, have become an important part of the week's shows.

EDUCATIONAL EXHIBITS [illegible] Experiment Station, Crookston; County Farm Bureaus of northwestern Minnesota counties, Boys' and Girls' Club work and other organizations and institutions form an increasingly important part of the week's enterprises.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Ortonville—Fire, fanned by a stiff breeze, in half an hour caused loss estimated at $100,000 in the business center.

Mankato—The village of North Mankato, just across the river from Mankato, in Nicollet county, has taken on the dignity of a fourth class city.

Winona—Archie M. Brown, Winona county treasurer, is dead at his home here. The cause of death was said by physicians to be a complication of diseases.

Stillwater—County attorneys from the various counties of Minnesota gathered here in annual convention of the County Attorneys Association of Minnesota.

Minneapolis—Resolutions opposing a democratic state convention were sent to the democratic state committee by the executive board of the Minneapolis Democratic club.

Worthington—Work has been started on the extensive road building program laid out by the Nobles county commissioners. Contracts aggregating $140,000 are to be pushed.

Chatfield—Ansil Hill, aged 32, a farmhand, walked 7 miles in the country farefooted and was picked up by a farmer with his feet frozen. He was adjudged insane and sent to Rochester.

Luverne—Judge N. R. Reynolds of the municipal court has announced that all persons brought before him for drunkenness and disorderly conduct will be given jail sentences at hard labor.

Currie—With only one dissenting vote, the council was authorized at a special election here to sell the electric light equipment owned by the village to the Citizens Light and Power company of Tracy.

Mabel—A cow belonging to the Mabel dairy, here, has given birth to and raised four calves in 11 months. She gave birth to twins twice, the first pair being born Jan. 1, 1921, and the second pair Dec. 2, 1921.

Minneapolis—Members of the Northwestern Lumbermen's association were unanimous upon the close of the 32d convention of the organization in Minneapolis that it had been one of the best in its history.

Granite Falls—Fishermen are making some good hauls on the river here, the largest of which was 9,500 pounds. Some of the fish weigh as much as eight pounds. Game Warden Warner is supervising the work of the fishermen.

Rochester—Because of some criticism of gambling conditions, said to exist here, Chief of Police McDermott has issued a statement in which he stated that while there was some gambling present, the department was doing all it could to eliminate it.

Minneapolis—Dancehalls are the greatest contributing factor to child delinquency, William Hodson, chairman of the child welfare bureau of the state board of control, told 50 members of the Minnesota Association of Probate Judges in annual convention.

Hutchinson—The Minnesota State Dairymen's association at the closing session of its annual convention here unanimously adopted a resolution addressed to Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, urging that he do all in his power to preserve the rights of the people in the high dam controversy.

St. Paul—Dividends to stockholders and patrons amounting to $19,124.22 were announced today by the Central Co-operative Commission association, which began business at South St. Paul Aug. 8 of last year and did a gross business of more than $5,000,000 between that time and Dec. 31. The dividends amount to 8 per cent on stock and 25 per cent as a patronage dividend, meaning refund of one-fourth of the commissions charged to patrons.

Minneapolis — The committee in charge of the State Meeting of Reserve Officers, National Guard Officers, Regular Army Officers, and all Officers of the World War of Minnesota announce that Assistant Secretary of War J. Mayhew Wainwright and Major General James G. Harbord, Deputy Chief of Staff, will attend the meeting at the Radisson Hotel, Minneapolis, February 7th. Secretary Wainwright will talk on the relation of the Regular Army, National Guard, and Organized Reserves in connection with the National Defense and the new military policy of the United States

Port Arthur, Ont.—Major Ray Miller, who was dispatched by Governor J. A. O. Preus of Minnesota to search for James Maher, Cook county commissioner, missing for more than two weeks, returned to his base after a two hour flight, but failed to bring any news of the missing man.

Minneapolis—Edward A. Purdy, postmaster here since May 13, 1914, who has been called the best postmaster in the United States by Will H. Hays, retiring postmaster general, announced he will resign from office about April 1 to become a vicepresident of the Wells Dickey company.

St. Paul, Minn.—"At different times I have taken Dr. Pierce's medicines and they proved very beneficial. I have taken the Favorite Prescription as a woman's tonic and found it very strengthening to the nervous system; and I have taken the Golden Medical Discovery as a blood purifier and a tonic to build me up when I was rundown. It also was very beneficial. These medicines of Dr Pierce's are both very good and I would certainly take them again should I need such medicines knowing the great help they have been to me in the past."—Mrs. Aaron Martz, 700 E. 6th St.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

GIRL'S BEAUTY BETRAYED HER

Fugitive From Justice, Once Convicted, Is Acquitted on Second Trial.

COP KNEW HER FACE

Jury Accepts Defense That She Killed Man in Defense of Honor—Fled After First Trial—Fugitive a Year.

Knoxville, Tenn.—Maude Moore, whose beauty betrayed her after she had been a fugitive from justice for more than a year, is innocent of the crime of killing Leroy B. Hart, of which she was accused. A jury has just so decreed. It was her second trial.

The verdict of not guilty gives the dark-haired, gray-eyed young woman the freedom for which she risked every danger and sacrificed all—except her beauty.

She handed away her liberty with a rose in Washington. It was after she had been sought for many months. Using the name of Helen Hope, she had married William Stubbs and settled in Tacoma like a good little housewife with a kitchen and a garden and a husband who never suspected for one instant that he had married a girl who was being hunted the length and breadth of America as an escaped murderess.

Mrs. William Stubbs was pruning rose bushes when a Tacoma policeman strutted along the street. He was just an ordinary policeman with an Irish laugh and an Irish eye for every roguish little peach on the beat.

He noticed the quaint white bungalow. He observed the bonny beauty in the sunbonnet. He stopped and glanced up.

"Have a rose?" she asked, cheerfully.

"Sure, and I thank you!"

Remembered Her Face.

The Irish policeman took away the rose and the memory of a pair of clear gray eyes, a bee-stung mouth and a dazzling smile. The memory stayed with him for hours—until he walked into headquarters and a head-on collision with the likeness of the lady of his thoughts tacked on the wall under the caption, "$2,000 Reward."

When the police came, Mrs. Stubbs confessed she was Maude Moore. They took her back to Knoxville and to trial for Leroy Harth's murder.

Maude Moore always had been a pretty girl. After graduation from business college she got a job in the first office she entered, a lawyer's. He beauty—then—was her trump card. Leroy Harth, just out of college, owner of a flashy racing car, "money to burn" saw her and fell in love with her when she was twenty. When he suggested a spin one night and she accepted, Harth set his racer streaming toward the lonely highway known to Knoxville's sporty set as "Lover's Lane."

"Have a Rose"

There, they said, she killed him. She was tried, convicted and sentenced to 21 years in the penitentiary.

Then She Fled.

Though a higher court granted a new trial she flung a few clothes into her bag at her mother's home and stumbled into the darkness.

Rarely in a long list of famous man hunts has there been such a hue and cry as followed. Her two bondsmen, R. E. Boring and Edward McNew, facing a forfeiture of $10,000, spurred the chase, which soon became a clamoring wolf pack on Maude Moore's trail.

In the first moment of her flight she determined to blot out Maude Moore as completely as nature would let her. The glossy black hair was snipped away. The surviving curls were given a peroxide bath that bleached them yellow. Hours were spent in perfecting a mincing walk in place of the old free stride. The musical contralto died; in its stead was born a nasal treble.

Starves Self to Death to Save Money.

Emporia, Kan.—Mrs. Katherine Swedenson starved herself to death to save money, according to her neighbors. Mrs. Swedenson was found dying in bed at her home. There was no fire in the house, and Mrs Swedenson was too weak to reach some food on the table. She owns some valuable farm property.

WHAT THE CHILDREN WANTED

One Might Think It Was Not Altogether Miss Willet's Golden Voice That Entranced Them.

An entertainment was being given in the village school. When the program was half over the faces of the scholars shone with agreeable anticipation, for the next item was to be a vocal solo by Miss Willet, who on many occasions had delighted the school with her singing.

Finally the chairman made the announcement: "I am very sorry to say, children, that Miss Willet has contracted a cold and will be unable to sing. She is willing, however, to recite a poem instead if you wish to hear it. Do you?"

Several heads in the rear of the room became grouped as if in earnest conversation. Then they evidently elected a spokesman. "Please, sir," said the boy, "if Miss Willet don't mind, we'd rather have her get up an' try to sing; and if her throat's too sore to make a noise she can make her funny faces while the pianner plays the tune."—London Tit-Bits.

BOTH GOOD AND BAD NEEDED

Rev. Sparrow Jones Had Ingenious Reasoning With Which to Satisfy Aunt Miranda.

Whenever Rev. Sparrow Jones called on Aunt Miranda, it was her custom to set a plate of gingerbread before him and then ply him with what she called "'ligious 'spoundings."

"What fo' does de Lawd send epidemics onto de land?" she asked him one day.

"When folks get so bad dey must be removed, some of 'em, Sister Miranda, den de Lawd permits de comin' of an epidemic," said the preacher; and he took a large bite of gingerbread.

"Uh," said Aunt Miranda. "Ef dat's so, how come de good people gits removed along wid de bad ones?"

"De good ones is summoned fo' witnesses," said Rev. Sparrow Jones. "De Lawd gibs every man a fair trial."—Philadelphia Ledger.

His Slowness.

"Doctor Rave, the popular evangelist, emphatically declares that there is a hell."

"Dear suzz!" answered J. Fuller Gloom. "Has he just found it out? Why, almost immediately after my marriage more than twenty years ago I advised my brother-in-law to go there!"—Kansas City Star.

Then why load up on handicaps for the day's work?

A good deal of food, unwisely chosen, does weigh the body down and clog the digestion, and dull the brain.

Why put on the hobbles?

Grape-Nuts is a breakfast or lunch-time dish for those who want food efficiency, and mind and body efficiency.

Grape-Nuts satisfies and nourishes. It delights the taste. It is ready to serve whenever you are ready to eat. And it digests easily, quickly and completely—leaving no handicap of heaviness and drowsiness.

Grape-Nuts is the food for health and action.

Rice Terraces Are World's Masterpieces

This is a photograph of the Ifugao Igorrot rice terraces, which are among the most remarkable of their kind in the world. They are one of the many marvelous sights for the tourist to see in the Philippine Islands and are to be found in the Ifugao district of the Mountain province, Northern Luzon.

The height of these terraces, which are held up by stone walls, is from 6 to 18 feet, averaging 8 feet high. It is estimated there are 12,121 miles of eight-foot stone walls in the Ifugao terraces, which is approximately half the distance around the world.

These terraces are skillfully irrigated by water brought in troughs along the precipitous mountain sides over long distances.

Farming Is a Business

And like every business, it requires forms, records and blanks that give you the facts about your farm, just as a business man has them about his business.

We print forms and letterheads (every business farmer should have his own letterhead) on Hammermill Bond, the Utility Business Paper.

Let Us Show You What We Can Do for You

Catarrh Cannot Be Cured

with LOCAL APPLICATIONS, as they cannot reach the seat of the disease. Catarrh is a local disease, greatly influenced by constitutional conditions, and in order to cure it you must take an internal remedy. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally and acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Hall's Catarrh Cure was prescribed by one of the best physicians in this country for years. It is composed of some of the best tonics known, combined with some of the best blood purifiers. The perfect combination of the ingredients in Hall's Catarrh Cure is what produces such wonderful results in catarrhal conditions. Send for testimonials, free.

Safety and Convenience

Do you know that nine-tenths of the business of the United States is done by some form of check? This convenient condition is possible because the banking system of this country has been placed on such a safe basis that corporations and individuals have faith in it. The welfare of the banks depends in a large measure upon maintaining this confidence.

A checking account with this bank is an absolutely safe proposition. Your money is safer than it is in your own pocket and your check is as good as your money in any business transaction. We shall be pleased to have you open a checking account with us. You will find your account to be a means to safety and convenience.

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

THE DIAMOND LIGHT

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline--Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

TECKTONIUS
"BEST SILO ON EARTH"
METHOD
Of Silo Building
INSTRUCTIONS

WHY experiment with an ordinary silo at any price when you can build a perfect wood silo by the TECKTONIUS METHOD?

TECKTONIUS Wood Silos are stronger and better than any other silos. They have none of the faults found in some silos built of other materials.

Consider quality first. You'll get that—and a 5-year guarantee with a TECKTONIUS built silo. You'll also get exclusive features found in no other silo.

TECKTONIUS doors which lock at all four corners are absolutely air-tight. TECKTONIUS automatic adjusting hoop fasteners take care of any expanding and contracting of the staves, due to weather conditions. These TECKTONIUS features, together with the wonderful super cable and base stave anchorage system place the TECKTONIUS Silo in a class far above all others.

Come in and let us show you the superior TECKTONIUS features. Five minutes inspection will convince you.

LAND GROWS RICH

Wonderful Development of Canada in Forty Years.

Four Decades Ago Little Considered, Today One of the Greatest Granaries and Dairying Centers.

The recent announcement that the sale of the first section of Canadian Pacific land was sold forty years ago, and when you read that the first carload of wheat was shipped from Winnipeg forty years ago, the changes that have taken place since then are matters of reminiscence, but yet of interest. What forty years ago was an unknown quantity, barren because but little production was attempted, is today one of the greatest granaries in the world. Then there was scarcely any farm live stock in the West. Dairying was not engaged in at all. Today there are 6,998,317 farm animals on the prairies, of which 881,899 are milch cows; and dairying is only second in importance to grain growing, in the West.

Forty years ago the shipment of one carload of grain was a notable exploit.

Today, Canada ranks as the second largest wheat-producing country in the world, with 329,185,300 bushels, 90 per cent of which was grown in the three prairie provinces, of which the province of Saskatchewan produced more than half. The Dominion is today the second largest producer of oats, with 530,710,000 bushels, of which 60 per cent was grown between Winnipeg and the Rocky mountains; and the fifth largest producer of barley with 63,311,000 bushels, of which the prairies yielded 65 per cent.

Forty years ago scarcely any of the rich soil had been brought under cultivation. The farm machinery of the time was crude; there were no competent advisers; government experimental farms were a blessing that came years later.

Yet these hardy pioneers stuck it out, and in forty years numbers of them are enjoying their declining days in the communities they wrested from the wilderness, prosperous, contented, with their children's families gathered about them or seeking their own fortunes still further westward or northward. They have seen civilization step in to the West and the wilderness swept out. Today are thriving cities and towns where bleaching buffalo bones marked the ox trails of forty years ago. Today are mighty freight trains, each with its thousand-ton cargo of wheat or merchandise, roaring down the roads where the old carts creaked. Today are schools within walking distance of every farmhouse, churches within driving distance of every home. Today are telephones and every modern convenience linking communities over vast distances by the common bond of the spoken word.

Forty years ago the Rockies were practically an impenetrable barrier, the Pacific coast being reached from the east by ships sailing round Cape Horn. The province of Manitoba had a population of 62,260, compared with 613,008 in 1921. Winnipeg was then a frontier town with 7,987 people, and Brandon, which was regarded as a far-flung outpost of the West, boasted of a few hundred in population. In 1891 it only had 3,778. Such places as Calgary and Edmonton were mere trading posts in the Northwest territories. Buffalo roamed the prairie in their native state.

Today on these plains are to be seen herds of cattle, bands of horses and droves of sheep, from any of which can easily be selected stock that can carry off premiums, sweepstakes and championships in competition with the best in any other part of the world.—Advertisement.

GERMAN REQUEST GOES TO ALLIES

Reparation Commision Decides to Transmit Proposals to Allied Governments.

U. S. IN CLOSE TOUCH

Letter Transmitting the German Note to the Allied Governments Asks Them to Decide as Soon as Possible.

Paris.—The allied reparations commission has decided to transmit Germany's latest reparations proposals to the allied governments and await their decision as to whether they will treat the question with Germany themselves or refer back to the commission to handle.

In a letter transmitting the German note to the allied governments the commission asks them to decide as soon as possible whether they will pass judgment or leave the matter entirely in the hands of the commission.

The letter which has been made public makes no recommendations, it is understood, but merely recalls the agreement recently reached at Cannes, providing for the payment of 31,000,000 gold marks by Germany every ten days, pending a decision by the allies upon the whole reparations issue.

U. S. to Get Copy.

Members of the commission refused to make any comment as to whether the note from Germany was satisfactory or not. The only comment in reparations circles was an expression of regret that the Germans did not state the exact length of time during which they desire freedom from cash payments and the actual amount of money they would be able to pay this year.

A copy of the note was given unofficially to Roland W. Boyden, the American unofficial representative on the commission, for transmission to the United States government, as the commission is anxious to keep America in closest touch with the current reparations situation.

The German government sent five lengthy annexes with its note, explaining in greatest detail the points made in the note itself. The annexes have not yet been given to the allied governments because of the time involved in translating them into French.

Press Dislikes Reply.

The French press is practically unanimous in the opinion that the German reply is unsatisfactory.

The Intransigent says: "The reply is made up of too many 'if's'—too much menace and too great demands."

"We have been surfeited with promises," says former Premier Clemenceau's Echo Nationale. "The allies now must give the reparations commission a free hand."

BRITISH EVACUATE IRELAND

British Armies Are Speedily Leaving Ireland.

Dublin.—British evacuation of Ireland is proceeding more speedily than was anticipated. Each day sees large batches of troops leave Dublin and other ports. Departure of the Dublin garrison is due to begin this week and the newspapers are speculating as to how the vacated barracks will be used. It is suggested that they may be employed to relieve the housing shortage. The new Irish government may need some of the barracks for the new Irish army, although nothing has yet been decided in regard to the size of that body. It is taken for granted that it will be established promptly and green uniforms are being manufactured in Dublin on a large scale.

It is noteworthy that the evacuation of the British has occured everywhere without manifestation, however, by the people. There has been no sign either of popular rejoicing or regret.

Big Penalties for Lawless.

The transition from one government to another has been rapid, but criminals have done their best to take advantage of any confusion arising from the change. There have been daring bank robberies and holdups but the new government is dealing vigorously with the criminal element.

Ambassadors Herrick and Harvey Have First Meeting With Poincare.

Paris.—Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador to France, and George Harvey, American ambassador to Great Britain, were in conversation with Premier Poincare for nearly 40 minutes. The American ambassadors said their talk was of a general nature and that it did not relate especially to the Genoa economic conference or to Franco-American relations.

Mine Explosion Kills Four.

Pineville, Ky.—A mine explosion killed four persons and may have killed or entombed many others at Layman, 20 miles from here. An explosion, heard a considerable distance, occured in the mine of the Layman-Calloway mines. The only report officials here have been able to get, because of poor telephonic communication, is that four were dead and that the mine rescue party was penetrating slowly into the mine.

MOVIE HOUSE ROOF CAVES IN

Snow to the Depth of Two Feet on the Roof of Movie House Causes it to Collapse.

TROOPS RESTORE ORDER

Scores of People Rushed to Hospital to Receive First Aid—Others Are Receive Nourishment Through Long Tubes.

Washington.—Fifteen persons at least are believed to have been killed and scores injured in the collapse under the weight of two feet of snow on the roof of the Knickerbocker theater, a motion picture house located in the heart of Washington's fashionable northwest section.

Two hours and a half after the crash, which occurred about 9 o'clock, definite information as to the number of dead and injured was wholly lacking as well as estimates of the number of those in the theater at the time—these estimates ranging from 150 to 500, although the theater, one of the finest motion picture houses in the city, had accommodations for more than 2,000 spectators.

The names of the dead had been ascertained by the police up to midnight in only a few instances and these follow: Mrs. B. H. Covell, Miss Costley, Wm. Travey, a member of the orchestra, and F. H. Ernest.

Two dead were identified, one carrying an envelope with a Wardman park hotel return address directed to W. P. Straw of Manchestr, N. H. Other dead included: Douglas Hillyer, Mrs. Marie Russell, W. S. Scofield of Danville, Va., and G. S. Freeman, musician.

Victims Rushed to Hospital.

All was confusion for hours after the crash while police, firemen, marines from the nearby barracks and soldiers from the Walter Reed military hospital strove to burrow beneath the mass of debris and bring forth those buried thereunder.

Scores had been removed from the edges of the debris and hurried to hospitals, but police, engaged for 24 hours in battling the worst snow storm to visit Washington in a decade, were unable to check up on the number of those taken to the hospitals or whether any or how many had died after reaching the hospitals.

Every fire station in the city was called upon to send its crew to the scene and the collection of firefighting apparatus only added to the confusion.

With the arrival of the marines, however, order began to be restored.

Apply Acetylene Torches.

Emergency hospitals were set up in the neighborhood, some of the homes of high officials of the government.

Finding the tons of concrete and steel of the roof was almost immovable and unseparable, the street railway companies of the city and the Washington navy yard was called upon to supply acetylene torches. With these more rapid progress was made and it was hoped that within a few hours it might be possible to reach those buried beneath the debris.

Representative Smithwick of Florida was painfully cut about the head and chest but not seriously hurt. Another of those injured was Nobile Tomasso Assereto, third secretary of the Italian embassy.

Attaches of the British embassy reported at midnight that a check had been made of the staff of that embassy and none found to have been in attendance at the theater. Belief was expressed in some quarters that the final list of injured and possibly that of the dead would contain names of well-known persons inasmuch as the theater was situated in a portion of the city in which many government officials lived.

The management of the theater, which was owned and operated by the Harry M. Crandall company, owner of a number of theaters in the city, declared that the building only recently had been inspected and approved and that the collapse of the roof only could have been caused by the tremendous weight imposed by the heaviest snowfall that has visited Washington since 1899.

Work Heedless of Danger.

The roof fell with such force as to drive three concrete pillars through the orchestra floor. Up near the stage, however, its force was arrested, so that the platform successfully acted as a buffer. For this reason, it was said, several of the musicians escaped.

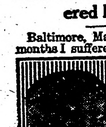
Every expedient was resorted to in the work of rescue, volunteers assisting the firemen, police and marines without regard to the possible collapse of the walls, a prospect which was regarded as all too imminent.

U. S. Leads in Waterpower.

New York.—Forty per cent of the developed waterpower of the world is in the United States, where water wheels having a capacity of 9,243,000 horsepower have been installed, according to a recent statement of the United States geological survey, department of the interior. The leading states in developed water power are New York, with 1,300,000 horsepower, and California with 1,111,000. These state totals compare favorably with those of other countries such as France, Sweden and Switzerland.

MONTHS OF SUFFERING

How a Baltimore Girl Recovered Her Health



Baltimore, Maryland.—"For several months I suffered with severe backache and general weakness. I could not sleep comfortably at night for pains in my back. I found your book at home one day and after reading it began at once to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have had very good results and some of my girl friends are taking it now. You may use this letter to help other girls, as the letters in your book helped me."—ROSE WAIDNER, 3018 Roseland Place, Baltimore, Md.

That is the thought so often expressed in letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. These women know what they have suffered, they describe their symptoms and state how they were finally made well. Just plain statements, but they want other women to be helped.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a medicine made from medicinal roots and herbs, and without drugs, to relieve the sickness women so often have, which is indicated by backache, weak feelings, nervousness, and no ambition to get anything done or to go anywhere. It has helped many women. Why not try it?

Help Your Kidneys

Is a cold or grip keeping you miserable? Are you tortured with dull, persistent backache and sharp, cutting pains? Likely your kidneys need help. Colds and grip fill the blood with poisons. Your overworked kidneys have become weakend filtering these poisons off. That's why you feel weak and depressed and suffer from headaches, dizzy spells and urinary disorders. Don't wait for serious kidney disease. Help your kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Minnesota Case

Mrs. Chas. H. Edwards, 1716 First Ave., Park Addition, Hibbing, Minn., says: "My kidneys did not act properly and I had a dull, steady ache across the small of my back which wore me out. When I stooped I had such a sharp pain it made me dizzy. Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of the trouble and I haven't been bothered since."

NERVOUS? SLEEPLESS?

Women at Every Age can be Benefited as Was This Woman

Minneapolis, Minn.—"Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is an excellent builder of a nervous and rundown system. During middle age I suffered a nervous breakdown—was so nervous I could not sleep or rest at night. I was very miserable when I began taking the Prescription and it did me a world of good. It relieved me of all the nervousness so that I could sleep and rest well. I can highly recommend Favorite Prescription as a nervine for women."—Mrs. Clem Hofer, 614 17th Ave., South.

D. O'Brien, St. Paul attorney, in behalf of several Midway firms.

Elmore—A few county schools in this vicinity have been closed because of the several cases of scarlet fever. In some cases nurses have been employed to look after the pupils in an effort to stamp out the disease.

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

SEMI-MOURNING, AS IT WERE

Offer of That Red Skirt Made Caroline Reconsider Her Demonstration of Sorrow.

Every Saturday Caroline used to go forth on a cleaning job. One day she appeared robed in black.

"What's the matter?" her employer asked.

"Oh, Miss Sophy," she moaned, "my uncle he is dead, and I'se gwine to mourn. I'se gwine to mourn for him four months."

The lady expressed sympathy and added:

"I had out that red skirt of mine for you. I thought you might like it; but of course you won't want it now."

"No, Miss Sophy; I'se gwine to mourn four whole months."

Next week brought Caroline as usual.

"I been thinkin' 'bout that red skirt, Miss Sophy," she said. "It's just the kind of a red skirt I like, and I believe from now on I'll mourn from the waist up."—Everybody's Magazine.

GOOD JOKE ON DANISH KING

Monarch Jumped Too Quickly to Conclusion That Eskimo Was Actuated by Loyalty.

An amusing story of the king of Denmark's recent visit to Greenland was recently told by M. Aagaard of the Danish legation, to members of the Danish club in London.

As the royal yacht was approaching Greenland a dark speck became visible on the open sea. It proved to be a solitary Eskimo in his little cayak (native canoe). The Eskimo came on board and his loyalty in having braved the perils of the sea in such a frail craft assured him the warmest of welcomes. The king presented him with a cigar and, what the Eskimos most highly prize, a rifle.

On landing, the king described the incident to the Danish commissioner in Greenland and asked him who the man was.

The commissioner, in accents of horror, replied: "The man's an escaped convict. He broke prison yesterday, stole a canoe and put to sea. We thought he had been drowned."

Funniest witticism loses all its point if it is greeted by "what?" for the third time.

Says Sam: It's a question which kills most people—germs or grouches.

DIDN'T SEE END OF INCIDENT

Gap Johnson Had More Important Thing to Attend to Than Witnessing a Hanging.

"While I was in Tumlinville yesterday," relates Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge, Ark., "a mob came r'arin' around a corner hauling along a gent with a rope around his neck, and flung the end of it over a limb within forty feet of me."

"Did they hang him?" interestedly asked an acquaintance.

"Dogged if I know! You see, just then a feller bantered me for a hoss swap and drug me off to look at his nag, and I didn't learn how the anecdote came out."

"What had the gent done?"

"Well, I heerd somebody say that he'd either been selling bone dry licker to the mob or else he'd refused to do so; I forgot to ask which."—Kansas City Star.

Didn't Think It Possible.

"In my opinion," ventured Mr. Meekton, mildly, "the ballot for women has not proved as successful as I hoped it would be."

"What has caused your doubt?"

"The candidate for whom my wife campaigned was overwhelmingly defeated. It's the only time I ever knew Henrietta to get the worst of an argument."

One third of your life is allotted to sleep. Do you get your share?

The most important period in the process of applying nutrition to the repair of the body is while you are asleep. For the most favorable transformation of digested food into nerve and cell tissue, so doctors tell us, sleep is absolutely essential.

Is it any wonder that those who suffer from lack of proper sleep are weak, pale and lacking in energy or ambition?

One of the causes of insomnia is nerve-irritation from tea and coffee drinking. Tea and coffee both contain caffeine, which has a tendency to cause undue stimulation. The irritating effect of caffeine often results in insomnia, depression, and a weakened nervous system.

You can easily overcome these troubles by drinking Postum instead of tea or coffee. Postum is a delicious, satisfying cereal beverage, and it is absolutely free from caffeine, or any other harmful substance.

Ask your grocer for Postum. Drink this delicious, refreshing beverage for ten days. Then see if you do not feel better and more clear headed, and if you do not sleep better at night—as so many other people have proved for themselves.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

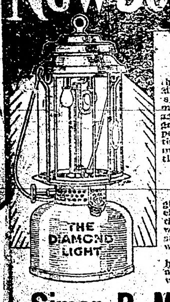
New 300 Candle Power Lantern



COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

The ORIOLE
By Booth Tarkington
Illustrations by Irwin Myers

A TALE of pure delight; one of the great American writer's immortal "kid" stories.

Fit to go along with "Penrod," "Seventeen" or "Too Gentle Julia"—in fact, it is woven about the same interesting characters as the latter.

"The Oriole" deals with "thirteen," that transition age between childhood and youth when one never knows what the young human offspring will be up to next. It is the age when imagination takes the most unexpected turns and fancy plays the queerest pranks.

In this narrative Mr. Tarkington brings to bear all his genius for character, situations and humor. Every line is either a laugh or a study in the delectable ways of the young; the whole is a work of unbounded joy.

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

The whole rural world is in a ferment of unrest, and there is an unparalleled volume and intensity of determined, if not angry, protest, and an ominous swarming of occupational conferences, interest groupings, political movements and propaganda. Such a turmoil cannot but arrest our attention. Indeed, it demands our careful study and examination. It is not likely that six million aloof and ruggedly independent men have come together and banded themselves into active unions, societies, farm bureaus, and so forth, for no sufficient cause.

Investigation of the subject conclusively proves that, while there is much overstatement of grievances and misconception of remedies, the farmers are right in complaining of wrongs long endured, and right in holding that it is feasible to relieve their ills with benefit to the rest of the community. This being the case of an industry that contributes, in the raw material form alone, about one-third of the national annual wealth production and is the means of livelihood of about 49 per cent of the population, it is obvious that the subject is one of grave concern. Not only do the farmers make up one-half of the nation, but the well-being of the other half depends upon them.

So long as we have nations, a wise political economy will aim at a large degree of national self-sufficiency and self-containment. Rome fell when the food supply was too far removed from the belly. Like her, we shall destroy our own agriculture and extend our sources of food distantly and precariously, if we do not see to it that our farmers are well and fairly paid for their services. The farm gives the nation men as well as food. Cities derive their vitality and are forever renewed from the country, but an impoverished countryside exports intelligence and retains unintelligence. Only the lower grades of mentality and character will remain on, or seek, the farm, unless agriculture is capable of being pursued with contentment and adequate compensation. Hence, to embitter and impoverish the farmer is to dry up and contaminate the vital sources of the nation.

The war showed convincingly how dependent the nation is on the full productivity of the farms. Despite herculean efforts, agricultural production kept only a few weeks or months ahead of consumption, and that only by increasing the acreage of certain staple crops at the cost of reducing that of others. We ought not to forget that lesson when we ponder on the farmer's problems. They are truly common problems, and there should be no attempt to deal with them as if they were purely selfish demands of a clear-cut group, antagonistic to the rest of the community. Rather should we consider agriculture in the light of broad national policy, just as we consider oil, coal, steel, dyestuffs, and so forth, as sinews of national strength. Our growing population and a higher standard of living demand increasing food supplies, and more wool, cotton, hides, and the rest. With the disappearance of free or cheap fertile land, additional acreage and increased yields can come only from costly effort. This we need not expect from an impoverished or unhappy rural population.

It will not do to take a narrow view of the rural discontent, or to appraise it from the standpoint of yesterday. This is peculiarly an age of flux and change and new deals. Because a thing always has been so no longer means that it is righteous, or always shall be so. More, perhaps, than ever before, there is a widespread feeling that all human relations can be improved by taking thought, and that it is not becoming for the reasoning animal to leave his destiny largely to chance and natural incidence.

Prudent and orderly adjustment of production and distribution in accordance with consumption is recognized as wise management in every business but that of farming. Yet, I venture to say, there is no other industry in which it is so important to the public—to the city-dweller—that production should be sure, steady, and increasing, and that distribution should be in proportion to the need. The unorganized farmers naturally act blindly and impulsively and, in consequence, surfeit and dearth, accompanied by disconcerting price-variations, harass the consumer. One year potatoes rot in the fields because of excess production, and there is a scarcity of the things that have been displaced to make way for the expansion of the potato acreage; next year the punished farmers mass their fields on some other crop, and potatoes enter the class of luxuries; and so on.

Agriculture is the greatest and fundamentally the most important of our American industries. The cities are but the branches of the tree of national life, the roots of which go deeply into the land. We all flourish or decline with the farmer. So, when we of the cities read of the present universal distress of the farmers, of a slump of six billion dollars in the farm value of their crops in a single year of their inability to meet mortgages or to pay current bills, and how, seeking relief from their ills, they are planning to form pools, inaugurate farmers' strikes, and demand legislation abolishing grain exchanges, private cattle markets, and the like, we ought not hastily to brand them as economic heretics and highwaymen, and hurl at them the charge of being seekers of special privilege. Rather, we should ask if their trouble is not ours, and see what can be done to improve the situation. Purely from self-interest, if for no higher motive, we should help them. All of us want to get back permanently to "normalcy;" but is it reasonable to hope for that condition unless our greatest and most basic industry can be put on a sound and solid permanent foundation? The farmers are not entitled to special privileges; but are they not right in demanding that they be placed on an equal footing with the buyers of their products and with other industries?

Report of Annual Meeting

The Mission church held its regular annual meeting on Monday afternoon and elected the following officers: Foreman, Rev. Strom; Treasurer, August Nass; Secretary, T. B. Folden; Trustees, Kittle Sollom and August Nass. Sunday School workers, Mr. and Mrs. Young. The foreman and trustees were appointed as a committee to look up the cost of a furnace and repairing the basement floor.

A resolution was passed by the meeting to extend their hearty thanks to the pastor, officers, Mr. and Mrs. Young for their faithful work in the Sunday School, and all those who have contributed with money and in so many ways towards the church work during the past year.

T. B. Folden, Secy.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Cure acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

The Disarmament Conference

The World's Disarmament Conference held at Washington, D. C. has come to a successful close. It was one of the most remarkable gatherings of its kind held in the history of the world. The disarmament, the ban on poison gas and unrestricted U boat warefare, the returning of Shantung Provience to China and all it implies, the settlement of Yap satisfactorily and many more questions that stand for peace were amicably settled. It is especially a victory for the United States and an untold blessing for the whole world.

SERVICE

The facilities which this bank offers to the banking public are of so many kinds that we can only mention a few of them to you. In making long time real estate loans, selling exchange on distant points, selling steamship tickets, writing insurance and conducting a general banking business, we are supplying a large variety of wants. There are very few people who do not need some kind of banking service in the course of a year, and we will appreciate your patronage, in whatever department of our business it may be.

We would like to have you visit us often, and to feel perfectly at home in this bank. We cannot expect to give our best service in this community if we do not get acquainted with the people; and we want the people to get acquainted with us. Call on us whenever you are in need of anything in the banking line.

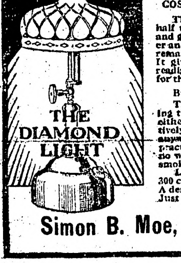
New 300 Candle Power Lamp



COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline—Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, in any position, to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

A Big Cut in Silo Prices

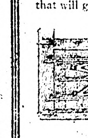
TECKTONIUS SILO

If you have been waiting for the prices of silos to come down before erecting yours, the time has now arrived for action.

Every day's delay means just that much more loss to you. A properly constructed silo will insure your crops against the enormous wastage you now suffer without one, also against early frosts and droughts. It affords a more succulent food for your stock, increases milk and butter production, adds weight to your beef cattle and enables you to feed more cattle on less acreage.

Tecktonius Silo Fixtures

And our superior quality staves have stood the acid test of experience and today are standing in a class all their own. They enable you to erect a silo that will give you lasting satisfaction, and which will prove a real investment.



The Famous Tecktonius Perfect Fitting Hinged Silo Door.
Note the substantial locking lever on all four corners.

Tecktonius Self-Adjusting Straight Pull Hoop Fastener. Takes care of all expansion and contraction of silo due to weather conditions.

This gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-Adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener, that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and you'll readily see why you can get a superior silo for less money in the TECKTONIUS.

A FRIEND IN NEED A FRIEND INDEED

Writes Mrs. Hardee Regarding Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Los Angeles, Calif.—"I must tell you that I am a true friend to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken it off and on for twenty years and it has helped me change from a delicate girl to a stout, healthy woman. When I was married I was sick all the time until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was in bed much of my time with pains and had to have the doctor every month. One day I found a little book in my yard in Guthrie, Oklahoma, and I read it through and got the medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and took eight bottles and used the Sanative Wash. I at once began to get stronger. I have got many women to take it just by telling them what it has done for me. I have a young sister whom it has helped in the same way it helped me. I want you to know that I am a 'friend indeed,' for you were a 'friend in need.'" —Mrs. GEORGE HARDEE, 1043 Byram St., Los Angeles, California

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound be a "friend indeed" to you.

The ORIOLE

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1921 by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

YOUNG AMERICA.

Edison says the intellect of Young America is becoming atrophied. Huh! He should read Booth Tarkington's, "The Oriole." It's dollars to doughnuts he'd apologize like a gentleman and a scholar. For there are no indications of atrophy about either the author or the "kids" he writes about in "The Oriole." No, sir. Quite the contrary. But what's the use—read it. It's about the same characters that figure in "Too Gentle Julia." Enough said.

PART ONE

By the end of October, with the dispersal of that foliage which has served all summer long as a pleasant screen for whatever small privacy may exist between American neighbors, we begin to get our autumn high tides of gossip. At this season of the year, in our towns of moderate size and ambition, where apartment houses have not yet condensed and at the same time sequestered the population, one may secure visual command of back yard beyond back yard, both up and down the street; especially if one takes the trouble to sit for an hour or so, daily, upon the top of a high board fence at about the middle of a block.

Of course an adult who followed such a course would be thought peculiar; no doubt he would be subject to undesirable comment, and presently might be called upon to parry severe if, indeed, not hostile inquiries; but boys are considered so inexplicable that they have gathered for themselves any privileges denied their parents and elders; and a boy can do such a thing as this to his full content, without anybody's thinking about it at all. So it was that Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen and a few months, sat for a considerable time upon such a fence, after school hours, every afternoon of the last week in October; and only one person particularly observed him or was stimulated to any mental activity by his procedure. Even at that, this person was affected only because she was Herbert's relative, and of an age sympathetic to his—and of a sex antipathetic.

In spite of the fact that Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., thus seriously disporting himself on his father's back fence, attracted only this audience of one (and she hostile at a rather distant window) his behavier really should have been considered piquantly interesting by anybody. After climbing to the top of the fence he would produce from interior pockets a small memorandum book and a pencil; seldom putting these implements to immediate use. His expression was gravely alert, his manner more than businesslike; yet nobody could have failed to comprehend that he was enjoying himself, especially when his attitude became tense—as at times it certainly did. Then he would rise, balancing himself at adroit ease, his feet aligned one before the other on the inner rail, a foot below the top of the boards, and with eyes dramatically shielded beneath a scoutish palm, he would gaze sternly in the direction of some object or motion which had attracted his attention; and then, having satisfied himself of something or other, he would sit again and decisively enter a note in his memorandum book.

He was not always alone; he was frequently joined by a friend, male, and, though shorter than Herbert, quite as old; and this companion was inspired, it seemed, by motives precisely similar to those from which sprang Herbert's own actions. Like Herbert, he would sit upon the top of the high fence, usually at a little distance from him; like Herbert he would rise at intervals, for the better study of something this side of the horizon; then, also concluding like Herbert, he would sit again and write firmly in a little notebook. And seldom in the history of the world have any sessions been invested by the participants with so intentional an appearance of importance.

That was what most injured their lone observer at the somewhat distant back window, upstairs at her own place of residence; she found their importance almost impossible to bear without screaming. Her provocation was great; the important importance of Herbert and his friend, impressively maneuvering upon their fence, was so extreme as to be all too plainly visible across four intervening broad back yards; in fact, there was almost reason to suspect that the two performers were aware of their audience and even of her goaded condition; and that they sometimes deliberately increased the outrageousness of their importance because they knew she was watching them. And upon the Saturday of that week, when the notebook writers were upon the fence at intervals throughout the afternoon, Florence Atwater's fascinated indignation became vocal.

"Vile things!" she said.

Her mother, sewing beside another window of the room, looked up inquiringly.

"What are, Florence?"

"Cousin Herbert and that nasty little Henry Rooter."

"Are you watching them again?" her mother asked.

"Yes, I am," said Florence, tartly. "Not because I care to, but merely to amuse myself at their expense."

Mrs. Atwater murmured deprecatingly, "Couldn't you find some other way to amuse yourself, Florence?"

"I don't call this amusement," the inconsistent girl responded, not without chagrin. "Think I'd spend all my days starin' at Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Junior, and that nasty little Henry Rooter, and call it amusement?"

"Then why do you do it?"

"Why do I do what, mama?" Florence inquired as if in despair of Mrs. Atwater's ever learning to put things clearly.

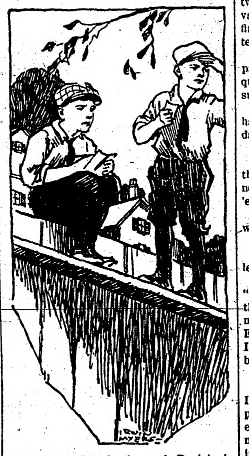
"Why do you 'spend all your days' watching them? You don't seem able to keep away from the window, and it appears to make you irritable. I should think if they wouldn't let you play with them you'd be too proud—"

"Oh, good heavens, mama!"

"Don't use expressions like that, Florence, please."

"Well," said Florence, "I got to use some expression when you accuse me of wantin' to 'play' with those two vile things! My goodness mercy, mama, I don't want to 'play' with 'em! I'm more than four years old, I guess; though you don't ever seem willing to give me credit for it. I don't haf to 'play' all the time, mama; and, anyway, Herbert and that nasty little Henry Rooter aren't playing, either."

"Aren't they?" Mrs. Atwater inquired. "I thought the other day you said you wanted them to let you play at being a newspaper reporter, or editor, or something like that, with them, and they were rude and told you to go away. Wasn't that it?"



He Would Sit Again and Decisively Enter a Note in His Memorandum Book.

Florence sighed. "No, mama, it cert'nly wasn't."

"They weren't rude to you?"

"Yes, they cert'nly were!"

"Well, then—"

"Mama, can't you understand?" Florence turned from the window to beseech Mrs. Atwater's concentration upon the matter. "It isn't 'playing!' I didn't want to 'play' being a reporter; they ain't 'playing'—"

"Aren't playing, Florence."

"Yes'm. They're not. Herbert's got a real printing press; Uncle Joseph gave it to him. It's a real one, mama, can't you understand?"

"I'll try," said Mrs. Atwater. "You mustn't get so excited about it, Florence."

"I'm not!" Florence turned vehemently. "I guess it'd take more than those two vile things and their old printin' press to get me excited! I don't care what they do; it's far less than nothing to me! All I wish is they'd fall off the fence and break their vile ole necks!"

With this manifestation of impersonal calmness, she turned again to the window; but her mother protested. "Do find something else to amuse you, Florence; and quit watching those foolish boys; you mustn't let them upset you so by their playing."

Florence moaned. "They don't 'upset' me, mama! They have no effect on me by the slightest degree! And I told you, mama, they're not 'playing.'"

"Then what are they doing?"

"Well, they're having a newspaper. They got the printing press and an office in Herbert's ole stable, and everything. They got somebody to give 'em some ole banisters and a railing from a house that was torn down somewheres, and then they got it stuck up in the stable loft, so it runs across with a kind of a gate in the middle of these banisters, and on one side is the printing press, and the other side they got a desk from that nasty little Henry Rooter's mother's attic; and a table and some chairs, and a map on the wall; and that's their newspaper office. They go out and look for what's the news, and write it down in ink; and then they go through the gate to the other side of the railing where the printing press is, and print it for their newspaper."

"But what do they do on the fence so much?"

"That's where they go to watch what the news is," Florence explained morosely. "They think they're so grand, sittin' up there, pokin' around. They go other places, too; and they ask people. That's all they said I could be!" Here the lady's bitterness became strongly intensified. "They said, maybe I could be one o' the ones they asked if I knew anything, sometimes, if they happen to think of it! I just respectf'ly told 'em I'd decline to wipe my oldest shoes on 'em to save their lives!"

Mrs. Atwater sighed. "You mustn't use such expressions, Florence."

"I don't see why not," the daughter objected. "They're a lot more refined than the expressions they used on me!"

"Then I'm very glad you didn't play with them."

But at this, Florence once more gave way to filial despair. "Mama, you just can't see through anything! I've said anyhow fifty times they ain't —aren't playing! They're getting up a real newspaper, and people buy it, and everything. They have been all over this part of town and got every aunt and uncle they have, besides their own fathers and mothers, and some people in the neighborhood, and Kitty Silver and two or three other colored people besides, that work for families they know. They're going to charge twenty-five cents a year, collect-in-advance because they want the money first; and even papa gave 'em a quarter last night; he told me so."

"How often do they publish their paper, Florence?" Mrs. Atwater inquired somewhat absently, having resumed her sewing.

"Every week; and they're goin' to have the first one a week from today."

"What do they call it?"

"The North End Daily Oriole. It's the silliest name I ever heard for a newspaper; and I told 'em so. I told 'em what I thought of it, I guess!"

"Was that the reason?" Mrs. Atwater asked.

"Was it what reason, mama?"

"Was it the reason they wouldn't let you be a reporter with them?"

"Pooh!" Florence exclaimed airily. "I didn't want anything to do with their ole paper. But anyway I didn't make fun o' their callin' it the North End Daily Oriole till after they said I couldn't be in it. Then I did, you bet!"

"Florence, don't say—"

"Mama, I got to say somep'm! Well, I told 'em I wouldn't be in their ole paper if they begged me on their bented knees; and I said if they begged me a thousand years I wouldn't be in any paper with such a crazy name; and I wouldn't tell 'em any news if I knew the President of the United States had the scarlet fever! I just politely informed 'em they could say what they liked if they was dying; I declined so much as wipe the oldest shoes I got on 'em!"

"But why wouldn't they let you be on the paper?" her mother insisted.

Upon this Florence became analytical. "Just so's they could act so important!" And she addded, as a consequence: "They ought to be arrested."

Mrs. Atwater murmured absently, but forbore to press her inquiry; and Florence was silent, in a brooding mood. The journalists upon the fence had disappeared from view, during the conversation with her mother; and presently she sighed and quietly left the room. She went to her own apartment, where, at a small and rather battered little white desk, after a period of earnest reverie, she took up a pen, wet the point in purple ink, and without any great effort or any critical delayings, produced a poem.

Great Men Once Book Agents.

Longfellow, Mark Twain and Bret Harte were among the subsequently famous authors who bridged poverty-stricken periods by peddling the works of already successful writers. Daniel Webster also hunted up orders for books, paying his second term's tuition at Dartmouth college by acting as agent for De Tocqueville's "America," and Bismarck in his early days at Heidelberg canvassed for one of Blumenbach's hand-books.—New York Evening Post.

IN BUYING ASPIRIN ALWAYS SAY "BAYER"

Look for the Name "Bayer" on Tablets, Then You Need Never Worry.

"Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" can be taken safely for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Joint Pains, Neuritis, and Pain generally.

To get quick relief follow carefully the safe and proper directions in each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin." This package is plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross."

The "Bayer Cross" means the genuine, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over twenty-one years.—Advertisement.

No Society News There.

Living a life of isolation on Palmyra island, a lonely atoll more than 700 miles south of Honolulu, a family composed of two men and one woman were discovered by the United States eagle boat No. 4, which recently returned from a visit and an aerial survey of the island. They were trying to start a copra plantation. The woman, who was ill, returned to Honolulu for medical treatment. The island is far outside the regular steamer paths and has no wireless or other regular communication with the outside world. —Dearborn Independent.

Gives Deaf Partial Hearing.

A new development by which partly deaf persons may be made to hear, was shown recently at a meeting of the Faraday society. Kilbur Scott exhibited crystals of rochelle salt, made artificially, which possessed the remarkable power of reproducing sounds. Mr. Scott explained that deaf persons could wear a small crystal behind the ear, connected with a little soundbox worn over the chest. The sounds of conversation would then be transmitted to the ear-drum in the form of vibrations which would enable them to hear.

MOTHER! OPEN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Your little one will love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" even if constipated, bilious, irritable, feverish, or full of cold. A teaspoonful never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the sour bile, and undigested food out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

THIN FRAIL PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE TANLAC

Hundreds of Men and Women All Over America Appear To Be Physical Wrecks Simply Because Their Systems Are Starving for Nourishment.

There are hundreds of thin, run-down, nervous men and women all over the United States who should be strong, sturdy and vigorous, with rich, red blood tingling through their veins and feeling brimful of life and energy, if they would only profit by the experience of others all over the United States and Canada, and assist nature to digest the food they eat, by simply taking Tanlac.

Millions of people have not only been relieved of the most obstinate forms of dyspepsia and indigestion by Tanlac after other remedies have failed, but large numbers of them have reported a remarkable and rapid increase in weight and a return to normal health and strength by its use.

In fact, so phenomenal have been the gains in weight by thin, frail people through the use of Tanlac that this remarkable preparation is now being proclaimed everywhere as the World's Greatest Tonic.

The food people eat does them absolutely no good unless they digest it properly. When you suffer from indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble, the food does you harm instead of good, because food which is not digested stays in the stomach and ferments, causing pains, swelling, gas on stomach, shortness of breath, bad taste in the mouth, dizziness and many other disagreeable symptoms. If this condition is permitted to run on for an indefinite period the entire system becomes saturated with poisons, the patient becomes thin and pale and in time various complications are apt to result.

Tanlac is a powerful reconstructive tonic and quickly overcomes this condition by aiding nature to eliminate the impurities from the system in a natural way and enable the vital organs to properly perform their functions. That is why it is called Nature's Medicine.

In fact, there is not a single portion of the body that is not benefited by the helpful action of Tanlac, which begins its work by stimulating the digestive and assimilative organs, thereby enriching the blood and invigorating the entire system. Next, it enables the weak, worn-out stomach to thoroughly digest its food and convert the nourishing elements into bone, blood and muscle. The result is you feel strong, sturdy and well with the proper amount of flesh, as Nature intended. Sold by all good druggists.

SEE REAL LINCOLN

Photographs Reveal Much of Rugged Personality.

Present Generation Need Not, as in the Case of Washington, Look for Character in Portraits.

Abraham Lincoln remains, and will remain, one of the most important possessions of the common people everywhere, partly because his rugged personality is so difficult for either writers or sculptors to standardize.

Fortunate it is for us that he lived in an age of photography—although no sensitized plate can reveal the entire mystery, the camera does not lie. We are not compelled to flounder hopelessly, comparing different portraits by different painters, as all must who make the vain endeavor to get before the eyes of their minds what George Washington was like.

The Lincoln who looks out from the pictures that have come down to us was caught in moments for which no solicitous friends had the opportunity to see that his clothes were pressed or that every stray lock of hair was plastered down. And so in his likeness we get something which has the virtue of being really "like."

In the National capital there is a Greek temple of marble, in Potomac park. It is windowless, surrounded by Doric columns, and is the Lincoln memorial. But this temple does not suggest the great human figure, whose acquaintance many have found.

AS LINCOLN MIGHT HAVE DONE

"The Spirit of Lincoln," portrayed by Dennis Connell of the Art Club Players of Washington, made a tour of the Capital city, visiting, among other places, the new Lincoln Memorial. The photo shows Mr. Connell in the character of Abraham Lincoln talking with children on the steps of the Memorial.

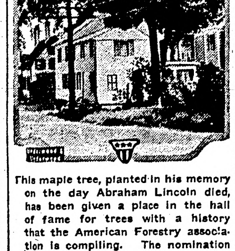
Justice to the great who have passed on is not the issue, since the present need is justice to the living. The firmament of human history is dotted thick with guiding stars, but they are oh, so very far away!

Heroes on a pedestal serve the present almost as little as ashes in an urn. The trouble is not that they lacked human nature, but that those who look for help are repelled by the cold marble which has been placed about them.

The greater lesson of Lincoln, the man of all the world, is that he is a magnificent illustration of what may be found, if only people will tear away the husks with which the kernel of truth is surrounded. The wrappings meet the eye and discourage the seeker, who must get beyond them in order personally to discover the spirit which gives life.

The tomb is not the man. This is the key to the secrets of history.

LINCOLN MEMORIAL TREE



This maple tree, planted in his memory on the day Abraham Lincoln died, has been given a place in the hall of fame for trees with a history that the American Forestry association is compiling. The nomination is made by Mrs. Allen Partridge of Augusta, Maine, before whose home the tree stands. The tree was planted on April 15, 1865, by Mrs. Ruben Partridge.

The Cameroons and Togoland, which are now under the mandate of Great Britain by authority of the treaty of Versailles, were handed over to Emperor William Iby a German professor whose ostensible interest in the black races was scientific.

Gustave Nachtigal (1824 to 1885) had made many exploring trips into Africa and brought back tales of commercial and other possibilities that strongly appealed to Bismarck. In 1884, the Iron Chancellor instructed Nachtigal to explore certain regions on behalf of the government, and when the scientist had arrived at his destination, a German officer who had accompanied him at the special direction of Bismarck, instructed him to plant the German flag on the roof of the hut of the greatest chief of the country and to declare the population subject to the scepter of the German kaiser.

Humility.

"It would appear," observes a Southern minister, "that humility, as a virtue, is in some quarters at least, fast disappearing. Our fathers used to preach humility to us—respect for our superiors, contentment with our humble station and so forth. The trouble with the money you give people for charity is that it brings them right back for more.

It may be cowardly to kick a man when he is down, but it's sometimes necessary in order to get him up.

Why does any healthy person want to be kicked into wakefulness in the morning?

Many people feel that they have to be agitated into wakefulness in the morning. They think that without the tea or coffee they take in the morning that they will not be able to meet the tasks and duties of the day.

Nothing could be more false than this reasoning. Any doctor can tell you this. For a healthy body does not require a stimulant. It gets all the stimulant it needs from food.

The thein and caffeine found in tea and coffee are irritating to the heart and nervous system. They jolt the nerves into undue activity. The result is a reaction. This is why regular tea and coffee drinkers think they must have their stimulant the first thing in the morning to wind them up for the day.

If you will stop using tea and coffee for a week, and drink Postum, the pure cereal beverage instead, it will give Nature an opportunity to rid the system of the irritating substances that harass your nerves, upset digestion, increase your heart action, and make you nervous and irritable.

Many people who have tried Postum say that inside of a week they wake in the morning without that "all gone" feeling that they used to have, and are full of energy, strength and endurance.

Order Postum from your grocer today, and make it according to directions. Your first sip of Postum will surprise and please you.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

II

Let us, then, consider some of the farmer's grievances, and see how far they are real. In doing so, we should remember that, while there have been, and still are, instances of purposeful abuse, the subject should not be approached with any general imputation to existing distributive agencies of deliberately intentional oppression, but rather with the conception that the marketing of farm products has not been modernized.

An ancient evil, and a persistent one, is the undergrading of farm products, with the result that what the farmers sell as of one quality is resold as of a higher. That this sort of chicanery should persist on any important scale in these days of business integrity would seem almost incredible, but there is much evidence that it does so persist. Even as I write, the newspapers announce the suspension of several firms from the New York Produce Exchange for exporting to Germany as No. 2 wheat a whole shipload of grossly inferior wheat mixed with oats, chaff and the like.

Another evil is that of inaccurate weighing of farm products, which, it is charged, is sometimes a matter of dishonest intention and sometimes of protective policy on the part of the local buyer, who fears that he may "weigh out" more than he "weighs in."

A greater grievance is that at present the field farmer has little or no control over the time and conditions of marketing his products, with the result that he is often underpaid for his products and usually overcharged for marketing service. The difference between what the farmer receives and what the consumer pays often exceeds all possibility of justification. To cite a single illustration: Last year, according to figures attested by the railways and the growers, Georgia watermelon-raisers received on the average 7.5 cents for a melon, the railroads got 12.7 cents for carrying it to Baltimore and the consumer paid one dollar, leaving 79.8 cents for the service of marketing and its risks, as against 20.2 cents for growing and transporting. The hard annals of farm-life are replete with such commentaries on the crudeness of present practices.

Nature prescribes that the farmer's "goods" must be finished within two or three months of the year, while financial and storage limitations generally compel him to sell them at the same time. As a rule, other industries are in a continuous process of finishing goods for the markets; they distribute as they produce, and they can curtail production without too great injury to themselves or the community; but if the farmer restricts his output, it is with disastrous consequences, both to himself and to the community.

The average farmer is busy with production for the major part of the year, and has nothing to sell. The bulk of his output comes on the market at once. Because of lack of storage facilities and of financial support, the farmer cannot carry his goods through the year and dispose of them as they are currently needed. In the great majority of cases, farmers have to entrust storage—in warehouses and elevators—and the financial carrying of their products to others.

Farm products are generally marketed at a time when there is a congestion of both transportation and finance—when cars and money are scarce. The outcome, in many instances, is that the farmers not only sell under pressure, and therefore at a disadvantage, but are compelled to take further reductions in net returns, in order to meet the charges for the service of storing, transporting, financing, and ultimate marketing—which charges they claim, are often excessive, bear heavily on both consumer and producer, and are under the control of those performing the services. It is true that they are relieved of the risks of a changing market by selling at once; but they are quite willing to take the unfavorable chance, if the favorable one also is theirs and they can retain for themselves a part of the service charges that are uniform, in good years and bad, with high prices and low.

While, in the main, the farmer must sell, regardless of market conditions, at the time of the maturity of crops, he cannot suspend production in toto. He must go on producing if he is to go on living, and if the world is to exist. The most he can do is to curtail production a little or alter its form, and that—because he is in the dark as to the probable demand for his goods—may be only to jump from the frying pan into the fire, taking the consumer with him.

Even the dairy farmers, whose output is not seasonal, complain that they find themselves at a disadvantage in the marketing of their productions, especially raw milk, because of the high costs of distribution, which they must ultimately bear.

Farmers Before You Buy a Silo Investigate the TECKTONIUS "BEST SILO ON EARTH" METHOD Of Silo Building

WHY experiment with an ordinary silo at any price when you can build a perfect wood silo by the TECKTONIUS METHOD?

TECKTONIUS Wood Silos are stronger and better than any other silos. They have none of the faults found in some silos built of other materials.

Consider quality first. You'll get that—and a 5-year guarantee with a TECKTONIUS built silo. You'll also get exclusive features found in no other silo.

TECKTONIUS doors which lock at all four corners are absolutely air-tight. TECKTONIUS automatic adjusting hoop fasteners take care of any expanding and contracting of the staves, due to weather conditions. These TECKTONIUS features, together with the wonderful super cable and base stave anchorage system place the TECKTONIUS Silo in a class far above all others.

Come in and let us show you the superior TECKTONIUS features. Five minutes inspection will convince you.

Buy your lumber and fixtures here at a fair price. Get a silo that makes perfect silage right up to the wall—one that will stand for years with very little attention.

Miss Marie Mork was married in Red Lake Falls last week Friday to Perry Gay of that city. The marriage ceremony was performed by the Probate Judge of Red Lake county. They came to Holt Saturday for an over Sunday visit with her parents.

The old officers were re-elected at the annual creamery meeting, as follows: T. B. Folden, Louis Wegge and John Engstrom, directors; J. A. Sorum, secretary.

We publish their annual report in another column. Read it, it shows the creamery is steadily growing and that it furnishes its patrons a steady revenue. There is no better source of income for the farmer than the dairy cow, and this country needs lots more of them.

Minnesota good roads work during 1921 spread lasting benefits on 3,393 miles of main highways and patrol and maintenance service on 6,855 miles of the 7,000 mile system of state trunk highways, all exclusive of betterments on the secondary or so called farmer roads.

Paving built last year measured 109 miles, compared with 112 laid in previous years combined; and 765 miles of grading and 497 miles of gravel-surfacing were added to the respective 1499 and 1371 mile total listed as graded and gravelled when the state took over the trunk routes for improvement and perpetual upkeep. In addition, state maintenance forces re-shaped 1,337 miles and re-surfaced 885 miles on the trunk system.

The Minnesota Highway Department last year planned and supervised projects representing an outlay of $16,321,238.60, of which amount $12,556,821.79 was used on the state trunk highways.

Take Notice

The School would like the Co-operation of parents in not sending their children back to school for the afternoon session before fifteen minutes of one o'clock. Such action is desirable for various reasons. The children will then have ample time for their meal and yet they need not be late. There will be less mischief and trouble which often occurs during the long noon intermission. The observance of this rule should not prove any hardship, but operate for the good of all concerned.

SERVICE

The facilities which this bank offers to the banking public are of so many kinds that we can only mention a few of them to you. In making long time real estate loans, selling exchange on distant points, selling steamship tickets, writing insurance and conducting a general banking business, we are supplying a large variety of wants. There are very few people who do not need some kind of banking service in the course of a year, and we will appreciate your patronage, in whatever department of our business it may be.

We would like to have you visit us often, and to feel perfectly at home in this bank. We cannot expect to give our best service in this community if we do not get acquainted with the people; and we want the people to get acquainted with us. Call on us whenever you are in need of anything in the banking line.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

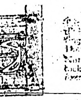
A Big Cut in Silo Prices

If you have been waiting for the prices of silos to come down before erecting yours, the time has now arrived for action.

Every day's delay means just that much more loss to you. A properly constructed silo will insure your crops against the enormous wastage you now suffer without one, also against early frosts and droughts. It affords a more succulent food for your stock, increases milk and butter production, adds weight to your beef cattle and enables you to feed more cattle on less acreage.

Tecktonius Silo Fixtures

And our superior quality staves have stood the acid test of experience and today are standing in a class all their own. They enable you to erect a silo that will give you lasting satisfaction, and which will prove a real investment.



The Famous Tecktonius Perfect Fitting Hinged Silo Door.

Note the substantial backing [illegible] on all four sides.

Tecktonius Self-Adjusting Straight Pull Hoop Fastener. Takes care of all expansion and contraction of silo due to weather conditions.

This gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-Adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener, that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and you'll readily see why you can get a superior silo for less money in the TECKTONIUS.

Have You Indigestion, Gas or Stomach Trouble?

READ THIS REMARKABLE CASE

Albert Lea, Minn.—"For over fifteen years I suffered with stomach trouble. I would have spells of acute indigestion and would suffer untold agony. Nothing I ate agreed with me, gas would form, and my food did not nourish me. I also had a lingering cough that was very annoying. I was down sick in bed when a friend advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It not only got me up out of my sick bed, but has rid me of my cough and completely cured me of my stomach trouble so that I can eat anything I choose without any bad effect."—Mrs. E. F. Diamond of Immense Value.

A diamond said to be even larger than the world-famous "Kohinoor" was brought to New York recently by W. J. Lavarre, a Washington (D. C.) scientist, who said the gem was discovered in British Guinea by a negro helper during a diamond-hunting expedition. Lavarre was accompanied by James McDonald of Harvard university. They had been in search of a diamond vein of rumored fabulous worth, "somewhere in Guinea." He said he did not find the vein, but located the one large stone. The diamond was taken to the customs office for appraisal.

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

What She Really Wanted.

A fond father was desirous of announcing to his little daughter that the fairies had visited the house and brought a beautiful gift.

"Well, darling," he said affably, "the fairies have brought somethinf to mother which you will love as much as mother and I do."

Eagerly the child looked up and appealed: "Oh, daddy, do tell me what it is."

Father, looking very solemn, said: "I'll give you one guess. What is it you want from mother more than anything else in the world"—and then collapsed as the darling, clapping hands, shrieked "Guinea pigs!"

If charity that begins at home is the real thing, it soon contracts the travel habit.

Back Bad Since the Grip?

Has a cold or grip sapped your strength? Do you suffer constant backache, feel nervous and depressed? Then look to your kidneys! Many cases of kidney trouble are the result of infectious disease. The kidneys have broken down under the strain of filtering disease-created poisons from the blood. That's why a cold or grip often leaves backache, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"THE ORGANEST."

Synopsis.—Proud possessor of a printing press, and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so.

It was, in a sense, an original poem; though, like the greater number of all literary offerings, it was so strongly inspirational that the source of its inspiration might easily become manifest to a cold-blooded reader. Nevertheless, to the poetess herself, as she explained later in good faith, the words just seemed to come to her—doubtless with either genius or some form of miracle involved; for sources of inspiration are seldom recognized by inspired writers themselves. She had not long ago been party to a musical Sunday afternoon at her great-uncle Joseph Atwater's house where Mr. Clairdyce, that amiable and robust baritone, sang some of his songs over and over again, as long as the requests for them held out. Florence's poem may have begun to coagulate within her then.

THE ORGANEST
By Florence Atwater

The organest was seated at his organ
in a church,
In some beautiful woods of maple and birch,
He was very weary while he played upon the keys,
But he was a great organest and always played with ease,
When the soul is weary,
And the wind is dreary,
I would like to be an organest seated all day at the organ,
Whether my name might be Fairchild or Morgan,
I would play music like a vast amen,
The way it sounds in a church of men.

Florence read her poem over seven or eight times, the deepening pleasure of her expression being evidence that repetition failed to denature this work, but, on the contrary, enhanced an appreciative surprise at its singular merit. Finally she folded the sheet of paper with a delicate carefulness unusual to her, and placed it in her skirt pocket. Then she went downstairs and out into the back yard. With thoughtful and determined eyes she obliqued her gaze over the intervening fences to the repellent skyline formed by the too-simple profile of her cousin Herbert's father's stable. Her next action was straightforward and anything but prudish; she climbed the high board fences, one after the other, until she came to a pause at the top of that whereon the two journalists had lately made themselves so odiously impressive.

Before her, if she had but taken note of them, were a lesson in history and the markings of a profound transition in human evolution. Beside the old frame stable was a little brick garage, obviously put to the daily use intended by its designer. Quite as obviously the stable was obsolete; anybody would have known from its outside that there was no horse within it. Here, visible, was the end of the pastoral age, it might be called, from the Heidelberg jawbone to Marconi. The new age begins with machines that do away with laboring animals and will proceed presently to machines doing away with laboring men, although it is true that cows may remain in vogue for some time. In spite of the fact that they are already milked by electricity, the milk itself must yet be constructed by the cow.

All this was lost upon Florence. She sat upon the fence, her gaze unfavorably, though wistfully, fixed upon a sign of no special esthetic merit above the stable door:

THE NORTH END DAILY ORIOLE.
ATWATER & ROOTER OWNERS AND PROPREITORS.
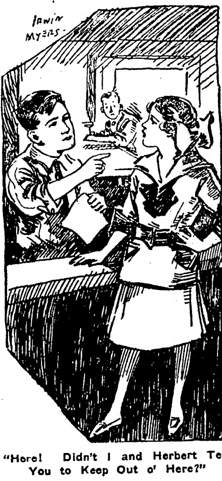
SUBSCRIBE NOW 25 CENTS.

The inconsistency of the word "daily" did not trouble Florence; moreover she had found no fault with "Oriole" until the "Owners and Propreitors" had explained to her in the plainest terms known to their vocabularies that she was excluded from the enterprise. Then, indeed, she had been reciprocally explicit in regard, not only to them and certain personal characteristics of theirs which she pointed out as fundamental, but in regard to any newspaper which should deliberately call itself an "Oriole." The partners remained superior in manner, though unable to conceal a natural resentment; they had adopted "Oriole," not out of sentiment for the distant city of Baltimore, nor, indeed, on account of any ornithologic interest of their own, but as a relic from an abandoned club, or secret society, which they had previously contemplated forming, its members to be called "The Orioles" for no reason whatever. The two friends had talked of their plan at many meetings throughout the summer, and when Herbert's great-uncle, Mr. Joseph Atwater, made his nephew the unexpected present of a printing press, and a newspaper consequently took the place of the club, Herbert and Henry still entertained an affection for their former scheme and decided to perpetuate the name. They were the more sensitive to attack upon it by an ignorant outsider and girl like Florence, and her chance of ingratiating herself with them, if that could be now her intention, was not promising.

It would be inaccurate to speak of her as hoping to placate them, however; her mood was inscrutable. She descended from the fence with pronounced inelegance, and, approaching the old double doors of the "carriage-house," which were open, paused to listen. Sounds from above assured her that the editors were editing—or at least that they could be found at their place of business. Therefore, she ascended the cobwebby stairway to the loft, and made her appearance in the printing room of the North End Daily Oriole.

Herbert, frowning with the burden of composition, sat at a table beyond the official railing, and his partner was engaged at the press, painfully setting type. This latter person, whom Florence for several months had named not once otherwise than as "That nasty little Henry Rooter," was of strangely clean and smooth fair-haired appearance, for his age. She looked him over.



"Here! Didn't I and Herbert Tell You to Keep Out o' Here?"

His profile was of a symmetry he had not himself yet begun to appreciate; his dress was scrupulous and modish; and though he was short nothing outward about him explained the more sinister of Florence's two adjectives. Yet she had true occasion for it, because on the day before she began its long observance he had made her uneasy lest an orange seed she had swallowed should take root and grow up within her to a size inevitably fatal. Then, with her cousin Herbert's stern assistance, Florence had realized that her gullibility was not to be expected in anybody over seven years old, after which age such legends are supposed to be encountered with the derision of experienced people.

Her fastidiousness aroused, she decided that Henry Rooter had no business to be talking about what would happen to her insides, anyhow; and so informed him at their next meeting, adding an explanation which absolutely proved him to be no gentleman. And her opinion of him was still perfectly plain in her expression as she made her present intrusion upon his working hours. He seemed to reciprocate.

"Here! Didn't I and Herbert tell you to keep out o' here?" he demanded, even before Florence had developed the slightest form of greeting. "Look at her, Herbert! She's back again!"

"You get out o' here, Florence," said Herbert, abandoning his task with a look of pain. "How often we haf to tell you we don't want you around here when we're in our office like this?"

"For heaven's sake!" Henry Rooter thought fit to add. "Can't you quit running up and down our office stairs once in a while, long enough for us to get our newspaper work done? Can't you give us a little peace?"

The pinkiness of Florence's altering complexion was justified; she had not been near their old office for four days. She stated the fact with heat, adding: "And I only came then because I knew somebody ought to see that this stable isn't ruined. It's my own uncle and aunt's stable, and I got as much right here as anybody."

"You have not!" Henry Rooter protested hotly. "This isn't, either, your ole aunt and uncle's stable."

"It isn't!"

"No, it is not! This isn't anybody's stable. It's my and Herbert's newspaper building, and I guess you haven't got the face to stand there and claim you got a right to go in a newspaper building and say you got a right there when everybody tells you to stay outside of it, I guess!"

"Oh, haven't I?"

"No, you haven't—I!" Mr. Rooter maintained bitterly. "You just walk downtown and go in one of the newspaper buildings down there and tell 'em you got a right to stay there all day long when they tell you to get out o' there! Just try it! That's all I ask!"

Florence uttered a cry of derision. "And pray, whoever told you I was bound to do everything you ask me to, Mister Henry Rooter?" And she concluded by reverting to that hostile impulse, so ancient, which in despair of touching an antagonist effectively, reflects upon his ancestors. "If you got anything you want to ask, you go ask your grandmother!"

"Who'll make me?" she inquired.

"You got to behave like a lady as long as you're in our newspaper building, anyway," Herbert said ominously. "If you expect to come up here after you been told five dozen times to keep out—"

"For heaven's sakes!" his partner interposed. "When we go'n' to get our newspaper work done? She's your cousin; I should think you could get her out!"

"Well, I'm goin' to, ain't I?" Herbert protested plaintively. "I expect to get her out, don't I?"

"Oh, you do?" Miss Atwater inquired, with severe mockery. "Pray, how do you expect to accomplish it, pray?"

Herbert looked desperate, but was unable to form a reply consistent with some rules of etiquette and gallantry which he had begun to observe during the past year or so. "Now, see here, Florence," he said. "You're old enough to know when people tell you to keep out of a place, why, it means they want you to stay away from there."

Florence remained cold to this reasoning. "Oh, poot!" she said.

"Now, look here!" her cousin remonstrated, and went on with his argument. "We got our newspaper work to do, and you ought to have sense enough to know newspaper work like this newspaper work we got on our hands here isn't—well, it ain't any child's play."

His partner appeared to approve of the expression, for he nodded severely and then used it himself. "No, you bet it isn't any child's play!" he said.

"No, sir," Henry Rooter again agreed. "Newspaper work like this isn't any child's play at all!"

"It isn't any child's play, Florence," said Herbert. "It ~~ain't~~ any child's play at all, Florence. If it was just child's play or something like that, why it wouldn't matter so much your always pokin' up here, and—"

"Well," the partner interrupted, judicially, "We wouldn't want her around, even if it was child's play."

"No, we wouldn't; that's so," Herbert agreed.

"We wouldn't want you around, anyhow, Florence." Here his tone became more plaintive. "So, for mercy's sakes, can't you go on home and give us a little rest? What you want, anyhow?"

"Well, I guess it's about time you was askin' me that," she said, not unreasonably. "If you'd asked me that in the first place, instead of actin' like you'd never been taught anything, and was only fit to associate with hoodlums, perhaps my time is of some value, myself!"

The lack of rhetorical cohesion was largely counteracted by the strong expressiveness of tone and manner; at all events, Florence made perfectly clear her position as a person of worth, dealing with the lowest of all her inferiors. She went on, not pausing:

"I thought, being as I was related to you, and all the family and everybody else goin' to haf to read your ole newspaper, anyway it'd be a good thing if what was printed in it wasn't all a disgrace to the family, because ~~the name of our family's got mixed up~~ with this newspaper; so here!"

Thus speaking, she took the poem from her pocket and with dignity held it forth to her cousin.

"What's that?" Herbert inquired, not moving a hand. He was but an amateur, yet already enough of an editor to have his suspicions.

"It's a poem," Florence said. "I don't know whether I exackly ought to have it in your ole newspaper or not, but on account of the family's sake I guess I better. Here, take it."

> "You can have your poem in our newspaper for twenty cents, Florence."

A SWEET LITTLE BABY BOY

Makes a Bright Spot in Every Home. A Comfort in Years to Come

Park Rapids, Minnesota.—"I have taken your medicine — Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound — when I was a girl for pains and before and after my marriage. I now have a sweet little baby boy and will send you his picture if you wish to publish it. My sisters also take your medicine and find it a great help, and I recommend it to those who suffer before their babies are born."—Mrs. Wm. Johnson, Box 155, Park Rapids, Minn.

To marry and arrive at middle age without children is a great disappointment to many women. Think of the joy and comfort other women have in their children as they grow older.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to bring great happiness to many families by restoring women to health. Often the childless home is due to a run down condition of the wife, which may be helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It brought health and happiness into the home of Mrs. Johnson. Why not to yours?

Solving Difficulties.

I read in a newspaper lately, writes a contributor to the Manchester Guardian, that the American housewife had solved many difficulties by calling her maids "home workers" instead of allowing them to be labeled "servants."

It reminds me of a recent experience of my own. I advertised for a "general maid," stated my requirements, and did not get a single answer.

But on redrafting the advertisement, substituting "domestic help" for "general," I got 19 answers.—Scotsman.

"Sugar" From Old Linen.

A London periodical says that in pre-war days the Germans used to make quite a lot of "sugar" by treating old linen with sulphuric acid which turned it into dextrine. It was then washed with lime water and treated with more acid, until it crystallized into glucose.

OF HIGH ESTATE

Washington's Ancestors Distinguished for Centuries.

High Ideals of the First President a Heritage From Men Who Had Made England Great.

February 22 is the birthday of that son of Virginia and of old stock of the British Isles, without whose high endeavor and fortitude there would possibly not be upon the earth today a United States of America.

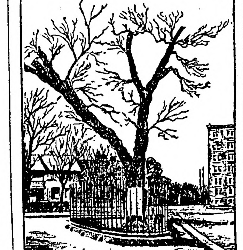
It is worth our while from time to time, even in an irreverent and forgetful age, to remind ourselves what price was paid by those who went before us for the heritage we enjoy—and what virtues were practiced by them to make that payment possible and to complete their purchase.

Washington was of a type that might fare ill at the polls these days. He was austere with an austerity that some of his contemporaries termed arrogance. He was dignified with a dignity that would ill fit the manners of the hustings and appeals for votes today. He believed in the leadership of those whose attainments qualified them for leadership. He thought that education and experience in handling large private affairs were useful to men intrusted with large public affairs.

Under the control of an iron will he had violent passions, which now and again flamed out at cowardice or demagoguery or corruption.

He possessed what was then the largest private fortune in the thirteen colonies. He traced his blood for centuries through a line of English "country gentlemen," and he maintained the use of a coat-of-arms granted his forebears—a coat of arms perpetuated by its suggestion of the coat of arms and flag of the American Union.

He was moral heir of the barons who exacted the Great Charter from King John at Runnymede, of the school of John Hampden and the earlier Oliver Cromwell, rather than of Harrison and Barebones. He would have been at home with the men who ousted James II rather than with those who finally beheaded Charles the First. There was nothing in him tolerant of the Wat Tylers that England has bred along with her Sidneys and Drakes and Fairfaxes and Lovelaces.



The Washington Elm at Cambridge, Mass., Under Which the General Took Command of the Continental Army, July 3, 1775.

He believed in the propriety of great possessions. Social justice in his time did not exact of Americans the attention given to economic justice—the right to work and trade, and be properly paid for the doing and that in turn gave way in the public mind to the related rule of political justice.

So it came about that the American Revolution was initiated, fought and won on the ancient principle of the British constitution "No taxation without representation" which the colonists declared should govern this side of the Atlantic as well.

Washington believed that great possessions of mind or of matter imposed great obligations. He believed that the "able-man" owed a debt to his fellows in the measure of his ability. And he carried into his public service a fortitude which no disaster could break, a sense of duty that no opposition could swerve, and a conscience which willingly risked "life," "fortune" and "sacred honor" for the public cause in which he was enlisted. He set no store on lofty station save as it gave opportunity to help his country and his countrymen, and for the self-seeker and the time server he entertained the stern contempt visited likewise upon the poltroon and the charlatan.

Accused Man Could Do With One Lawyer and Use the Other One as a Witness.

Not so long ago a Quaker city lawyer found a formidable phalanx opposed to him in the trial of a case. Presumably the other side was not strong, at least in the lawyer's estimation, in point of witnesses, and when he came to sum up, the attorney detailed the following to the jury as illustrative of the predicament of the other side:

A negro was brought before the court to plead to an offence.

"Sam Jackson, you are in custody of the law," announced the judge. "The state provides counsel for those who lack it. I hereby appoint these two gentlemen present in court to defend you. Have you anything to say?"

Sam's face brightened at the judge's words.

"Two lawyers, yo honah!" he exclaimed delightedly . . . and then with an engaging grin: "Yes, suh, yo honah . . . but ef it ain't crowdin' the law, cain't I swop off one of dem lawyers for a witness?"

With the brutal frankness of childhood the answer came: "Aw, gee! If you think she's cute you ought to see my aunt's baby."—Exxchange.

Examination of old records, especially official records, reveal many humorous writings. On Page 211 of the first marriage record book in the office of the county clerk is one such. In that day, which was 1833, it was the custom for the clergyman or the justice of the peace or whoever performed the ceremony to come to the clerk's office and personally write into the records the fact that so and so had been married by him. On this page the following inscription appeared in ink:

"Be it known that on the thirty first day of August A. D., one thousand eight hundred and thirty three, a marriage license issued to Jacob Hushaw and Nancy Ayres, both of Marion county and of lawful age."

Beneath this, written apparently by the clerk, appeared the additional statement in pencil:

"This lady declined the honor."—Indianapolis News.

NO STIMULANT ABOUT THAT

Fainting Man Not Unnaturally Objected to Poor Imitation of the Potent Spirit.

Observing a poorly dressed man stagger and fall prostrate on the sidewalk, a passing physician hurried to his side and began to feel for his pulse. Apparently the man was unconscious and the physician was about to draw his hypodermic syringe from his medicine bag when a workman with a dinner pail in his hand stepped forward from the group of surrounding spectators. "Here, give him some of this!" he said, exhibiting a whisky flask in his hand.

Grabbing this the physician poured part of its contents into the victim's throat, whereupon the victim suddenly raised his head and spat it out, gasping, "Wot're you doin'?"

"Reviving you with whisky," said the doctor.

"That ain't whisky, it's cold tea."

Adv. in Vermont Paper—"If you have any prospects, I have a nice willow carriage for sale." Boston Transcript.

To win a race a Jockey doesn't put extra weight on the horse that helps him succeed

No man or woman who wants to succeed in the race of life can afford the handicap of headaches, insomnia, indigestion and debility. Nor can they afford to take anything that may keep up a continual irritation of the nervous system.

Yet this is what many people do who drink excessive amounts of tea or coffee. For tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance that is sometimes very injurious. Many doctors say that caffeine raises the blood pressure, irritates the kidneys, and over stimulates the entire nervous system. Also that it is especially bad for growing children, or for any one who has any tendency to nervousness or insomnia.

If you want to avoid a possible cause of headaches, insomnia, or nervousness, it might be well to stop taking tea and coffee for awhile, and drink rich, satisfying Postum, instead.

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, healthful beverage for awhile and see if you will not feel brighter, more active, and more resistant to fatigue—as so many thousands of others have felt.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

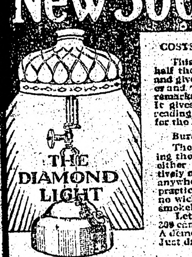
New 300 Candle Power Lamp



COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline--Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

III

Now that the farmers are stirring, thinking, and uniting as never before to eradicate these inequalities, they are subjected to stern economic lectures, and are met with the accusation that they are demanding, and are the recipients of, special privileges. Let us see what privileges the government has conferred on the farmers. Much has been made of Section 6 of the Clayton Anti-Trust Act, which purported to permit them to combine with immunity, under certain conditions. Admitting that, nominally, this exemption was in the nature of a special privilege,—though I think it was so in appearance rather than in fact,—we find that the courts have nullified it by judicial interpretation. Why should not the farmers be permitted to accomplish by co-operative methods what other businesses are already doing by co-operation in the form of incorporation? If it be proper for men to form, by fusion of existing corporations or otherwise, a corporation that controls the entire production of a commodity, or a large part of it, why is it not proper for a group of farmers to unite for the marketing of their common products, either in one or in several selling agencies? Why should it be right for a hundred thousand corporate shareholders to direct 25 or 30 or 40 per cent of an industry, and wrong for a hundred thousand co-operative farmers to control a no larger proportion of the wheat crop, or cotton, or any other product?

The Department of Agriculture is often spoken of as a special concession to the farmers, but in its commercial results, it is of as much benefit to the buyers and consumers of agricultural products as to the producers, or even more. I do not suppose that anyone opposes the benefits that the farmers derive from the educational and research work of the department, or the help that it gives them in working out improved cultural methods and practices, in developing better yielding varieties through breeding and selection, in introducing new varieties from remote parts of the world and adapting them to our climate and economic condition, and in devising practical measures for the elimination or control of dangerous and destructive animal and plant diseases, insect pests, and the like. All these things manifestly tend to stimulate and enlarge production, and their general beneficial effects are obvious.

It is complained that, whereas the law restricts Federal Reserve banks to three months' time for commercial paper, the farmer is allowed six months on his notes. This is not a special privilege, but merely such a recognition of business conditions as makes it possible for country banks to do business with country people. The crop farmer has only one turnover a year, while the merchant and manufacturer have many. Incidentally, I note that the Federal Reserve Board has just authorized the Federal Reserve banks to discount export paper for a period of six months, to conform to the nature of the business.

The Farm Loan banks are pointed to as an instance of special government favor for farmers. Are they not rather the outcome of laudable efforts to equalize rural and urban conditions? And about all the government does there is to help set up an administrative organization and lend a little credit at the start. Eventually the farmers will provide all the capital and carry all the liabilities themselves. It is true that Farm Loan bonds are tax exempt; but so are bonds of municipal light and traction plants, and new housing is to be exempt from taxation, in New York, for ten years.

On the other hand, the farmer reads of plans for municipal housing projects that run into the billions, of hundreds of millions annually spent on the merchant marine; he reads that the railways are being favored with increased rates and virtual guaranties of earnings by the government, with the result to him of an increased toll on all that he sells and all that he buys. He hears of many manifestations of governmental concern for particular industries and interests. Rescuing the railways from insolvency is undoubtedly for the benefit of the country as a whole, but what can be of more general benefit than encouragement of ample production of the principal necessaries of life and their even flow from contented producers to satisfied consumers?

While it may be conceded that special governmental aid may be necessary in the general interest, we must all agree that it is difficult to see why agriculture and the production and distribution of farm products are not accorded the same opportunities that are provided for other businesses; especially as the enjoyment by the farmer of such opportunities would appear to be even more contributory to the general good than in the case of other industries. The spirit of American democracy is unalterably opposed, alike to enacted special privilege and to the special privilege of unequal opportunity that arises automatically from the failure to correct glaring economic inequalities. I am opposed to the injection of government into business, but I do believe that it is an essential function of democratic government to equalize opportunity so far as it is within its power to do so, whether by the repeal of archaic statutes or the enactment of modern ones. If the anti-trust laws keep the farmers from endeavoring scientifically to integrate their industry while other industries find a way to meet modern conditions without violating such statutes, then it would seem reasonable to find a way for the farmers to meet them under the same conditions. The law should operate equally in fact. Repairing the economic structure on one side is no injustice to the other side, which is in good repair.

We have traveled a long way from the old conception of government as merely a defensive and policing agency; and regulative, corrective, or equalizing legislation, which apparently is of a special nature, is often of the most general beneficial consequences. Even the First Congress passed a tariff act that was avowedly for the protection of manufacturers; but a protective tariff always has been defended as a means of promoting the general good through a particular approach; and the statute books are filled with acts for the benefit of shipping, commerce, and labor.

COSTS LESS THAN 1c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working day of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

DOES LAUNDRY WORK AND HOUSEWORK TOO

Surprised to Find Herself Feeling So Well

Taunton, Mass.—"I used to have pains in my back and legs so badly, with other troubles that women sometimes have, that my doctor ordered me to stay in bed a week in every month. It didn't do me much good, so one day after talking with a friend who took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for about the same troubles I had, I thought I would try it also. I find that I can work in the laundry all through the time and do my housework, too. Last month I was so surprised at myself to be up and around and feeling so good while before I used to feel completely lifeless. I have told some of the girls who work with me and have such troubles to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I tell them how it has helped me. You can use my testimonial for the good of others."—Mrs. BLANCHE SILVIA, 59 Grant St., Taunton, Mass.

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

THE POETESS.

Synopsis.—Proud possessor of a printing press, and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance.

Herbert at once withdrew a few steps, placing his hands behind him. "Listen, here," he said, "you think we got time to read a lot o' writin' in your ole handwritin' that nobody can read anyhow, and then go to work and toil and moil to print it on the printin' press? I guess we got work enough printin' what we wrote for our newspaper our own selves! My goodness, Florence, I told you this isn't any child's play!"

Florence appeared to be somewhat baffled. "Well," she said. "Well, you better put this poem in your ole newspaper if you want to have anyhow one thing in it that won't make everybody sick that reads it."

"I won't do it!" Herbert said, more firmly.

"What you take us for?" his partner added, convincingly.

"He will not take it back. I already did tell him how you keep pokin' around tryin' to run everything, and we just worried our lifes out tryin' to keep you away. He said he bet it was a hard job; that's what Uncle Joseph said. So go on, tell him anything you want to. You don't get yor ole poem in our newspaper!"

"Not if she lived to be two hundred years old!" Henry Rooter added. Then he had an afterthought. "Not unless she pays for it."

"How do you mean?" Herbert asked, puzzled.

Henry's brow had become corrugated with no little professional impressiveness. "You know what we were talkin' about this morning," he said. "How the right way to run our newspaper, we ought to have some advertisements in it and everything. Well, we want money, don't we? We could put this poem in our newspaper like an advertisement; that is, if Florence has got any money, we could."

Herbert frowned. "If her ole poem isn't too long. I guess we could. Here, let's see it, Florence." And, taking the sheet of paper in his hand, he studied the dimensions of the poem, though without paining himself to read it. "Well, I guess, maybe we can do it," he said. "How much ought we to charge her?"

This question plunged Henry Rooter into a state of calculation, while Florence observed him with veiled anxiety; but after a time he looked up, his brow showing continued strain. "Do you keep a bank, Florence—for nickels and dimes and maybe quarters, you know?" he inquired.

It was her cousin who impulsively replied for her. "No, she don't," he said.

"Not since I was about seven years old!" Florence added sharply, though with dignity. "Do you still make mud pies in your back yard, pray?"

"Now, see here!" Henry objected. "Try and be a lady anyway for a few minutes, can't you? I got to figure out how much we got to charge you for your ole poem, don't I?"

"Well, then," Florence returned, "you better ask me somep'm about that, hadn't you?"

"Well," said Henry Rooter, "have you got any money at home?"

"No, I haven't."

"Have you got any money with you?"

"Yes, I have."

"How much is it?"

"I won't tell you."

Henry frowned. "I guess we ought to make her pay about two dollars and a half," he said, turning to his partner.

Herbert felt deferential; it seemed to him that he had formed a business association with a genius, and for a moment he was dazzled; then he remembered Florence's financial capacities, always well known to him, and he looked depressed. Florence, herself, looked indignant.

"Two dollars and a half!" she cried. "Why, I could buy this whole place for two dollars and a half, printing press, railing, and all—yes, and you thrown in, Mister Henry Rooter!"

"See here, Florence," Henry said earnestly, "haven't you got two dollars and a half?"

"Of course she hasn't!" his partner assured him. "She never had two dollars and a half in her life!"

"Well, then," said Henry gloomily, "what we goin' to do about it? How much you think we ought to charge her?"

Herbert's expression became noncommittal. "Just let me think a minute," he said; and with his hand to his brow stepped behind the unsuspicious Florence.

"I got to think," he murmured; then with the straightforwardness of his age, he suddenly seized his damsel cousin from the rear and held her in a tight but far from affectionate embrace, pinioning her arms. She shrieked, "Murder!" and "Let me go!" and "Help! Hay-yulp!"

"Look in her pocket," Herbert shouted. "She keeps her money in her skirt pocket when she's got any. It's on the left side of her. Don't let her kick you! Look out!"

"I got it!" said the dexterous Henry, retreating and exhibiting coins. "It's one dime and two nickels—twenty cents. Has she got any more pockets?"

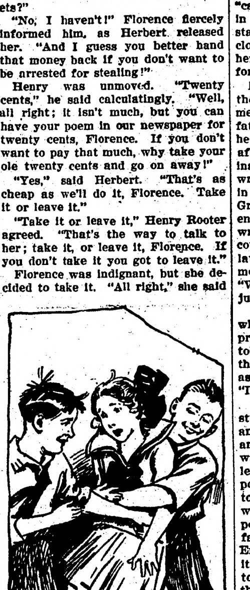
"No, I haven't!" Florence fiercely informed him, as Herbert released her. "And I guess you better hand that money back if you don't want to be arrested for stealing!"

Henry was unmoved. "Twenty cents," he said calculatingly. "Well, all right; it isn't much, but you can have your poem in our newspaper for twenty cents, Florence. If you don't want to pay that much, why take your ole twenty cents and go on away!"

"Yes," said Herbert. "That's as cheap as we'll do it, Florence. Take it or leave it."

"Take it or leave it," Henry Rooter agreed. "That's the way to talk to her; take it, or leave it, Florence. If you don't take it you got to leave it."

Florence was indignant, but she decided to take it. "All right," she said coldly. "I wouldn't pay another cent if I died for it."



"Look In Her Pocket," Herbert Shouted. "Don't Let Her Kick You!"

"Well, you haven't got another cent, so that's all right," Mr. Rooter remarked; and he honorably extended an open palm, supporting the coins, toward his partner. "Here, Herbert; you can have the dime, or the two nickels, whichever you rather have. It makes no difference to me; I'd as soon have one as the other."

Herbert took the two nickels, and turned to Florence. "See here, Florence," he said, in a tone of strong complaint. "This business is all done and paid for now. What you want to hang around here any more for?"

"Yes, Florence," his partner faithfully seconded him, at once. "We haven't got any more time to waste around here today, and so what you want to stand around in the way and everything for? You ought to know yourself we don't want you."

"I'm not in the way," said Florence hotly. "Whose way am I in?"

"Well, anyhow, if you don't go," Herbert informed her, "we'll carry you downstairs and lock you out."

"I'd just like to see you!" she returned, her eyes flashing. "Just you dare to lay a finger on me again!" And she added, "Anyway, if you did, those ole doors haven't got any lock on 'em. I'll come right straight in and walk right straight up the stairs again!"

Herbert advanced toward her. "Now you pay attention to me," he said. "You've paid for your ole poem, and we got to have some peace around here. I'm goin' straight over to your mother and ask her to come and get you."

Florence gave up "What difference would that make, Mister Taddletale?" she inquired mockingly. "I wouldn't be here when she came, would I? I'll thank you to notice there's some value to my time, myself; and I'll just politely ask you to excuse me, pray!"

With a proud air, she crushingly departed; and returned to her own home, far from dissatisfied with what she had accomplished. Moreover, she began to expand with the realization of a new importance; and she was gratified with the effect upon her parents, at dinner that evening, when she informed them that she had written a poem which was to be published in the prospective first number of the North End Daily Oriole.

"Written a poem?" said her father. "Well, I declare! Why, that's remarkable, Florence!"

"I'm glad the boys were nice about it," said her mother. "I should have feared they couldn't appreciate it, after being so cross to you about letting you have anything to do with the printing press. They must have thought it was a very good poem."

"Where is the poem, Florence?" Mr. Atwater asked. "Let's read it and see what our little girl can do."

Unfortunately Florence had not a copy, and when she informed her father of this fact, he professed himself greatly disappointed as well as anxious for the first appearance of the Oriole, that he might felicitate himself upon the evidence of his daughter's heretofore unsuspected talent. Florence was herself anxious for the newspaper's debut, and she made her anxiety so clear to Atwater & Rooter, Owners & Proprietors," every afternoon after school, during the following week, that by Thursday further argument and repartee on their part were felt to be indeed futile, and in order to have a little peace around there they carried her downstairs. At least they defined their action as "carrying," and, having deposited her in the yard, they were obliged to stand guard at the doors, which they closed and contrived to hold against her until her strength was worn out for that day.

Florence consoled herself. During the week she dropped in on all the members of "the family"—her grandfather, uncles and aunts and cousins, her great-uncles—and in each instance, after no protracted formal preliminaries, lightly remarked that she wrote poetry now; her first to appear in the forthcoming Oriole. And when Great-Aunt Carrie said, "Why, Florence, you're wonderful! I couldn't write a poem to save my life. I never could see how they do it," Florence laughed, made a deprecatory little side motion with her head, and responded: "Why, Aunt Carrie, that's nothing! It just kind of comes to you."

This also served as her explanation when some of her school friends expressed their admiration, after being told the news in confidence; though to the teachers she said, smiling ruefully, as in remembrance of midnight oil, "It does take work, of course!"

When opportunity offered, upon the street, she joined people she knew—and even rather distant acquaintances—and walked with them a little way, and with unaffected directness led the conversation to the subject of poetry, including her own contribution to that art. Altogether, if Florence was not in a fair way to become a poetic celebrity it was not her own fault but entirely that of the North End Daily Oriole, which was to make its appearance on Saturday, but failed to do so, on account of too much enthusiasm on the part of Atwater & Rooter in manipulating the printing press. It broke, had to be repaired; and Florence, her nerves upset by the accident, demanded her money back. This was impossible, and the postponement proved to be an episode; moreover it gave time to let more people know of the treat that was coming.

Among these was Noble Dill, Florence's Ideal. Until the Friday following her disappointment she had found no opportunity to acquaint this being with the news; and but for an encounter, partly due to chance, he might not have heard of it. Mr. Dill was twenty-two, but that was his only perceptible distinction. He was kind, usually, and not unpleasant in appearance or attire; yet he had neither beauty nor that look of power which is said to joggle women from their natural poise. He was the most everyday young man in all the town; and Florence's selection of him to be her Ideal still awaits a precise explanation. Nevertheless, it had happened; and a sentimental enrichment of color in her cheeks was the result of her catching sight of him, as she was on the point of opening and entering her own front door that Friday afternoon on her return from school. He was passing the house, walking somewhat dreamily.

Florence stepped into the sheltering vestibule, peeping round it with earnest eyes to watch him as he went by; obviously he had taken no note of her. Satisfied of this, she waited until he was at a little distance, then ran lightly to the gate, hurried after him, and joined him.

"Why, Mr. Dill!" she exclaimed, in her mother's most polished manner. "How surprising to see you! I presume, as we both happen to be walking in the same direction, we might just as well keep together."

Mr. Noble Dill inquires about Aunt Julia.

New Use for Old Clock.

Little brass or fancy clocks, which were very popular a while back, but which have lost their "going" powers and stay stopped, the face indicating a time that is wholly wrong all the time, can be saved for a new purpose by taking out the glass crystal with ease, inserting a picture and pressing it back in. Thus the little clock will be transformed into a picture frame and its prettiness will still adorn the mantel shelf.

DIZZY SPELLS?

If You Have Heat Flashes or Smothering Spells, You Should Not Overlook One Word of This

Winona, Minn.—"At middle life I was terribly distressed with heat flashes and smothering spells. I would become quite dizzy at times, too. I bought a bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and felt the benefit right away, so I kept on taking it until I was safely thru that critical period. It was really remarkable how quickly Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription relieved me of all my distress and I came thru middle life in excellent health. W. N. U., FARGO, NO. 8--1922.

Adrian—The Adrian village council has decided to gravel several of the principal streets of the village to connect up with the state and county graveled highways.

Crookston—Kittson county farmers clubs won the four highest places in the annual farmers club livestock judging contest in connection with the 12th annual Red river valley winter shows.

Sauk Center—At a special election the voters of Sauk Center voted, 328 to 22, to issue $100,000 of bonds to install a modern, up to date water works system, to be municipally owned and operated.

Northfield—W. F. Schilling's new barn is the largest in this county, and so far as known it is the largest in the state. The new structure is 36 by 160 feet, and is furnished with all modern equipment and conveniences. It was completed in record time following a fire which destroyed the old barn which had been the home of so many nationally famous Holsteins.

Minneapolis—Dr. H. L. Williams, former head football coach at the University of Minnesota, announced that he had accepted the position of advisory coach in football, tendered him by the board of regents.

Sauk Center—Delegates to the 13th annual convention of the Central Minnesota Dairymen's and Buttermakers' association were welcomed to the city at the opening session, by the mayor of Sauk Center, to which response was made by George Boltes of Melrose, president of the organization.

Minneapolis—Grocers and retail merchants of Minnesota, attending the opening sessions of their 26th annual convention at the West hotel, predicted that 1922 would be one of the biggest years in the history of the association. Between 400 and 500 delegates are in attendance.

St. Cloud—The Central labor union has purchased the entire furniture and fixtures of the St. Cloud's Camel's lodge, Inc. Possession of the hall and clubrooms will be given March 1. All affiliated unions will have their meetings there. The halls will be called the Labor temple.

Winona—Spring Grove, Wis., won the high school debating championship of the first district by defeating Albert Lea in a contest at Spring Grove.

Thief River Falls—As soon as road conditions permit in the spring an auto bus line will be established between Thief River Falls and Warroad.

Willmar—Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tait celebrated their golden wedding anniversary at their farm home near here.

Albert Lea—The Albert Lea Shipping association has filed articles of incorporation and is ready to do business.

Mankato—Crushed beneath a tree he was cutting, Henry C. Yaeger, aged 50 years, a farmer living near here, was killed.

Hibbing—Hibbing voters went on record as favoring a $2,000,000 refunding bond to put the village on a cash basis.

St. James—Mrs. Elizabeth Mandry, aged 90, a resident of this section of the state since 1881, died at the home of her daughter.

Sleepy Eye—For the purpose of making the volunteer department more efficient, the city council has purchased a fire alarm system.

Cottonwood—The St. Lucus Norwegian church, nine miles northwest of here, was destroyed by fire, the loss being estimated at $8,000.

Faribault—Harry C. Grant, for the last 12 years head of the farm of the state school for the blind, died at a local hospital, as the result of the kick from a horse. Peritonitis developed yesterday.

St. Peter—Following receipt of a ruling of the Minnesota supreme court by J. A. Loehl, judge of probate, North Mankato was declared a city of the fourth class.

Chisholm—The local Red Cross will cease its activities this week. During the life of the organization $1,176 was spent for relief of unemployed out of $1,250 received.

Morristown—The Morristown Farmers Shipping association completed the year of 1921 with receipts of approximately $125,000, according to a report made at the annual meeting here.

Winona—An egg laid by a hen owned by Mrs. A. V. McGuire of this city, weighed slightly more than 3 1-2 ounces, and measured 7 inches as its largest circumference and 6 inches as its smallest.

St. Paul—A good year in 1922; a far better year than 1921, was the slogan of more than 1,000 hardware store owners of Minnesota who attended the 26th annual hardware show at the St. Paul auditorium.

St. Cloud—St. Cloud will have its first automobile show in the new armory Feb. 24 and 25. All of the floor space has been taken except a section of the main floor, which is being reserved for dancing.

Browns Valley—Otto Gilling, aged 50, long time resident of this city, was found dead with his throat cut. Mystery surrounds his death and it has not been determined whether he was slain or killed himself.

St. Cloud—The Cass Lake high school debating team won from St. Cloud in a district debate, the judge's decision being 2 to 1. By reason of the victory Cass Lake won the championship of the sixth district.

Barnesville—Disappointed in his love affair Arthur Gaethke, aged 22, living west of this city, committed suicide by shooting himself through the temple. His body was found on the road with a letter indicating his sweetheart did not return his love.

Minneapolis—Construction of a psychopathic hospital at the University of Minnesota, establishment of a state constabulary and development of a state system of parks weer urged by Governor Preus in an address before the Minnesota Editorial association at the Radisson.

Granite Falls—Gantenbein brothers, fishermen working on the Minnesota river between here and Cottonwood, made a record haul when they pulled in their seine, containing more than forty thousand pounds of fish. Nearly half of the fish in the net were game fish and had to be put back into the water.

Slayton—Between 400 and 500 tax payers, mostly farmers, attended the annual meeting of the Murray County Taxpayers league in the courthouse. The aim of the meeting was to reduce taxation burdens and to insist upon a greater economy in the expenditure of money by public officials.

Fairbanks—War on moonshiners and bootleggers has been declared by residents of Bessett and Fairbanks townships in St. Louis county and Toimi township in Lake county. At a mass meeting attended by more than 100 here, a vigilance committee of nine men, three from each of the townships represented, was organized. The committee will investigate cases of alleged illicit liquor traffic. Others promised to furnish the proper information to operatives from the county sheriff's office.

St. Paul—Minnesota in 1920-1921 produced only 7,900,000 pounds of cheese, or about 2 per cent of the total cheese produced in the United States against Wisconsin's output in the same period of time of 260,000,000 pounds or 70 per cent. These figures were announced by J. P. Keithley of the dairy division of the university farm in connection with the opening of the fourth and last dairy division short course, to show the extent Minnesota is lagging behind Wisconsin. The course will continue until March 11.

Adrian—The Adrian village council has decided to gravel several of the principal streets of the village to connect up with the state and county graveled highways.

Crookston—Kittson county farmers clubs won the four highest places in the annual farmers club livestock judging contest in connection with the 12th annual Red river valley winter shows.

Sauk Center—At a special election the voters of Sauk Center voted, 328 to 22, to issue $100,000 of bonds to install a modern, up to date water works system, to be municipally owned and operated.

Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.—advertisement.

Rabbits and Mosquitoes.

Careful observations have been made, in France, of the extent to which mosquitoes are attracted to domestic animals in preference to human beings. It was proved experimentally that mosquitoes have a strong predilection for the blood of rabbits, stronger than for that of any other domestic animal. The discovery has been practically applied to many parts of France as a protection from mosquitoes, and particularly from those that carry germs of malaria and similar diseases.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

MERELY MONKEYS, AFTER ALL

Scientists Unduly Agitated Over the Reported Discovery of New Human Race in India.

Recently there was announced the discovery of a new human race in the Himalaya mountains. They were the "abominable men of the snows," particularly hideous, haired ferocious beings, of whom an explorer had revealed traces.

Well, these abominable men, says the Petit Parisien, are no men at all, but big monkeys, already known by science. One of them can be seen in the galleries of the museum. To tell the truth this langur (such is its name) is stuffed, which, however, does not prevent its having been alive and its having come from the regions of the Himalayas, where its fellows are living in numerous troops.

This revelation, so unpleasant for the manufacturers of prodigious adventures, comes from Mr. Goodwin-Austin, who has given in La Nature the most complete details about this monkey of Tibet, which for a moment was promoted to the superior rank of man.—New York Tribune.

MORE THAN SHE COULD STAND

Most People Will Be Inclined to Sympathize With Complaint Made by Young Mother.

The Woman was surprised and distressed when she stopped in to see the young mother the other day to find that usually cheerful little person with tear-stained cheeks.

"Jim and I have simply got to have a little place of our own," wailed the young mother, in answer to the Woman's unspoken question. "Jim's mother is a dear, and I love her, but now the baby has come we simply can't live together."

"Don't you agree about the way to bring up children?" queried the Woman, with wisdom born of the experience of her friends.

"Oh, it isn't that," almost sobbed the young mother. "But she seems to think the baby belongs to her. She calls him mamma's boy, and the other day, after she had been cuddling him, she passed him over to me and said, 'Go to auntie.'"—Chicago Journal.

ISLANDERS SHOULD BE HAPPY

Fortunate Inhabitants of Lundy Altogether Free From Visitations of the Tax Collector.

The stipend of £60 ($300) a year offered by the ecclesiastical commissioners to any clergyman disposed to take spiritual charge of Lundy Island seems a fair one, in view of the fact that the island measures only three and a half miles by one mile and numbers barely two hundred inhabitants.

The people of Lundy pay neither rates nor taxes; there are no poor, because all the inhabitants have work found for them; and there are no police, because there are no law-breakers.

Lundy has twice been in the hands of foreigners—once when captured by a band of Turkish pirates, and again, in the time of William III, when French privateers gained temporary possession.—London Tit-Bits.

The Dub—Do you consider it sinful to play golf on Sunday?

The Old-Timer—Mebbe it is. But don't let it worry you. What you play can hardly be classed as golf.

Save the bird in hand—
The others may be hard to catch

With enough money, enough time and enough luck, a man may get back the health he has lost—or part of it.

It takes patience, too.

And then there may be no success, or only a little.

It's better to save what you have than hunt for what you've lost—as the most successful health-restorers will tell you.

Much of the loss of health is due to faulty, careless diet. Wrong meals at all times and right meals at wrong times load the long-suffering digestive organs with elements of destruction, or starve the tissues and glands of needed elements.

Grape-Nuts is a delicious cereal food which has the qualities of scientific nutrition. It supplies the full richness of those splendid food grains, wheat and malted barley, together with the vital mineral elements, so often lacking from foods. Served with cream or good milk, Grape-Nuts gives full nourishment without over-loading the stomach.

A splendid thought for breakfast or lunch, for those who would keep health—

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline—Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

IV

Now, what is the farmer asking? Without trying to catalogue the remedial measures that have been suggested in his behalf, the principal proposals that bear directly on the improvement of his distributing and marketing relations may be summarized as follows:—

First: storage warehouses for cotton, wool, and tobacco, and elevators for grain, of sufficient capacity to meet the maximum demand on them at the peak of the marketing period. The farmer thinks that either private capital must furnish these facilities, or the state must erect and own the elevators and warehouses.

Second: weighing and grading of agricultural products, and certification thereof, to be done by impartial and disinterested public inspectors (this is already accomplished to some extent by the federal licensing of weighers and graders), to eliminate underpaying, overcharging, and unfair grading, and to facilitate the utilization of the stored products as the basis of credit.

Third: a certainty of credit sufficient to enable the marketing of products in an orderly manner.

Fourth: the Department of Agriculture should collect, tabulate, summarize, and regularly and frequently publish and distribute to the farmers, full information from all the markets of the world, so that they shall be as well informed of their selling position as buyers now are of their buying position.

Fifth: freedom to integrate the business of agriculture by means of consolidated selling agencies, co-ordinating and co-operating in such way as to put the farmer on an equal footing with the large buyers of his products, and with commercial relations in other industries.

When a business requires specialized talent, it has to buy it. So will the farmers; and perhaps the best way for them to get it would be to utilize some of the present machinery of the largest established agencies dealing in farm products. Of course, if he wishes, the farmer may go further and engage in flour-milling and other manufactures of food products. In my opinion, however, he would be wise to stop short of that. Public interest may be opposed to all great integrations; but, in justice, should they be forbidden to the farmer and permitted to others? The corporate form of association cannot now be wholly adapted to his objects and conditions. The looser co-operative form seems more generally suitable. Therefore, he wishes to be free, if he finds it desirable and feasible, to resort to co-operation with his fellows and neighbors, without running afoul of the law. To urge that the farmers should have the same liberty to consolidate and co-ordinate their peculiar economic functions, which other industries in their fields enjoy, is not, however, to concede that any business integration should have legislative sanction to exercise monopolistic power. The American people are as firmly opposed to industrial as to political autocracy, whether attempted by rural or by urban industry.

For lack of united effort the farmers as a whole are still marketing their crops by antiquated methods, or by no methods at all, but they are surrounded by a business world that has been modernized to the last minute and is tirelessly striving for efficiency. This efficiency is due in large measure to big business, to united business, to integrated business. The farmers now seek the benefits of such largeness, union and integration.

The American farmer is a modern of the moderns in the use of labor saving machinery, and he has made vast strides in recent years in scientific tillage and efficient farm management, but as a business in contact with other businesses agriculture is a "one horse shay" in competition with high power automobiles. The American farmer is the greatest and most intractable of individualists. While industrial production and all phases of the huge commercial mechanism and its myriad accessories have articulated and co-ordinated themselves all the way from natural raw materials to retail sales, the business of agriculture has gone on in much the one man fashion of the backwoods of the first part of the nineteenth century, when the farmer was self sufficient and did not depend upon, or care very much, what the great world was doing. The result is that the agricultural group is almost as much at a disadvantage in dealing with other economic groups as the jay farmer of the funny pages in the hands of sleek urban confidence men, who sell him acreage in Central Park or the Chicago city hall. The leaders of the farmers thoroughly understand this, and they are intelligently striving to integrate their industry so that it will be on an equal footing with other businesses.

As an example of integration, take the steel industry, in which the model is the United States Steel Corporation, with its iron mines, its coal mines, its lake and rail transportation, its ocean vessels, its by-product coke ovens, its blast furnaces, its open hearth and Bessemer furnaces, its rolling mills, its tube mills and other manufacturing processes that are carried to the highest degree of finished production compatible with the large trade it has built up. All this is generally conceded to be to the advantage of the consumer. Nor does the steel corporation inconsiderately dump its products on the market. On the contrary, it so acts that it is frequently a stabilizing influence, as is often the case with other large organizations. It is master of its distribution as well as of its production. If prices are not satisfactory the products are held back or production is reduced or suspended. It is not compelled to send a year's work to the market at one time and take whatever it can get under such circumstances. It has one selling policy and its own export department. Neither are the grades and qualities of steel determined at the caprice of the buyer, nor does the latter hold the scales. In this single integration of the steel corporation is represented about 40 per cent of the steel production of America. The rest is mostly in the hands of a few large companies. In ordinary times the steel corporation, by example, stabilizes all steel prices. If this is permissible (it is even desirable, because stable and fair prices are essential to solid and continued prosperity) why would it be wrong for the farmers to utilize central agencies that would have similar effects on agricultural products? Something like that is what they are aiming at.

Some farmers favored by regional compactness and contiguity, such as the citrus-fruit-raisers of California, already have found a way legally to merge and sell their products integrally and in accordance with seasonal and local demand, thus improving their position and rendering the consumer a reliable service of ensured quality, certain supply, and reasonable and relatively steady prices. They have not found it necessary to resort to any special privilege, or to claim any exception under the anti-trust legislation of the state or nation. Without removing local control, they have built up a very efficient marketing agency. The grain, cotton, and tobacco farmers, and the producers of hides and wool, because of their numbers and the vastness of their regions, and for other reasons, have found integration a more difficult task; though there are now some thousands of farmer's co-operative elevators, warehouses, creameries, and other enterprises of one sort and another, with a turn-over of a billion dollers a year. They are giving the farmers business experience and training, and, so far as they go, they meet the need of honest weighing and fair grading; but they do not meet the requirements of rationally adjusted marketing in any large and fundamental way.

The next step, which will be a pattern for other groups, is now being prepared by the grain-raisers through the establishment of sales media which shall handle grain separately or collectively, as the individual farmer may elect. It is this step—the plan of the Committee of Seventeen—which has created so much opposition and is thought by some to be in conflict with the anti-trust laws. Though there is now before congress a measure designed to clear up doubt on this point, the grain-producers are not relying on any immunity from anti-trust legislation. The desire, and they are entitled, to co-ordinate their efforts just as effectively as the large business interests of the country have done. In connection with the selling organizations the United States Grain Growers Incorporated is drafting a scheme of financing instrumentalities and auxiliary agencies which are indispensable to the successful utilization of modern business methods.

It is essential that the farmers should proceed gradually with these plans, and aim to avoid the error of scrapping the existing marketing machinery, which has been so laboriously built up by long experience, before they have a tried and proved substitute or supplementary mechanism. They must be careful not to become enmeshed in their own reforms and lose the perspective of their place in the national system. They must guard against fanatical devotion to new doctrines, and should seek articulation with the general economic system rather than its reckless destruction as it relates to them.

The Passing of Two Aged Ladies

Mrs. P. G. Sorter passed away at 4 o'clock Monday afternoon at the farm home northeast from Holt.

She had been confined to her bed for about five weeks with a severe attack of the asthma, which disease was the cause of her death. Mrs. Sorter had been a sufferer from the asthma for the past three years, and had also suffered from rheumatism and poor health for several years.

The funeral services were conducted by Rev. Raaum at the Ringbo church Thursday afternoon.

Obituary next week.

Mrs. E. A. Johnson passed away at her home in this village at 5 o'clock Wednesday morning. She has been a great sufferer for several months from a complication of diseases.

Mrs. Johnson was born in Sweden Oct. 1st. 1860 and at the time of her death was 61 years and 5 months old.

The funeral services will be held in the Holt Free Mission church at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon Rev. Myhrer officiating.

SERVICE

The facilities which this bank offers to the banking public are of so many kinds that we can only mention a few of them to you. In making long time real estate loans, selling exchange on distant points, selling steamship tickets, writing insurance and conducting a general banking business, we are supplying a large variety of wants. There are very few people who do not need some kind of banking service in the course of a year, and we will appreciate your patronage, in whatever department of our business it may be.

We would like to have you visit us often, and to feel perfectly at home in this bank. We cannot expect to give our best service in this community if we do not get acquainted with the people; and we want the people to get acquainted with us. Call on us whenever you are in need of anything in the banking line.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN 2c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

The ORIOLE

By Booth Tarkington

THE POEM.

Synopsis.—Proud possessor of a printing press, and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. Thereupon she appoints a publicity committee of one.

Noble looked puzzled. "'Surprising to see me?'" he said vaguely. "I haven't been away anywhere in particular, Florence." Then, at a thought, he brightened hopefully, "I'm glad to see you, Florence. Do you know if any of your family or relatives have heard when your Aunt Julia is coming home?"

"Aunt Julia? Why, she's out of town," said Florence. "She's visiting different people she used to know when she was away at school."

"Yes, I know," Mr. Dill returned. "She's been gone six weeks."

"Oh, I don't believe it's that long," Florence said, casually; then with more earnestness: "Mr. Dill, I was goin' to ask you somep'm; it's kind of a funny question for me to ask, but—"

"Yes, she has," Noble interrupted, though not sensible that his remark was an interruption, for he had been unaware of Florence's voice in action after the word "long." "Oh, yes, she has," he said. "It was six weeks, day-before-yesterday afternoon. I saw your father downtown this morning, and he said he didn't know that any of the family had heard just when she was coming home. I thought maybe some of your relatives had a letter from her by this afternoon's mail, maybe."

"I guess not," said Florence. "Mr. Dill, there was a question I thought I'd ask you—it's kind of a funny question for me to—"

"Are you sure nobody's heard from your Aunt Julia today?" Noble insisted.

"I guess they haven't. Mr. Dill, I was goin' to ask you—"

"It's strange," he murmured. "I don't see how people can enjoy visits that long. I should think they'd get anxious about what might happen at home."

"Oh, grandpa's all right; he says he kind of likes to have the house nice and quite to himself; and anyway Aunt Julia enjoys visiting," Florence assured him; "Aunt Fanny saw a newspaper from one of the places where Aunt Julia's visiting her school room-mate, that had her picture in it and called her 'the famous Northern Beauty;' it was down South somewhere. Well, Mr. Dill, I was just sayin' I believed I'd ask you—"

But a sectional rancor seemed to affect the young man all at once. "Oh, yes. I heard about that," he said. "Your Aunt Fanny lent my mother the newspaper. Those people in that part of the country—well—" He paused, remembering that it was only Florence he addressed; and he withheld from utterance his opinion that the Civil war ought to be fought all over again. "Your father said your grandfather hadn't heard from her for several days, and even then she hadn't said when she was coming home."

"No, I expect she didn't," said Florence. "Mr. Dill, I was goin' to ask you somep'n—it's kind of a queer kind of question for me to ask, I guess—" she paused. However, he did not interrupt her, seeming preoccupied with gloom; whereupon Florence permitted herself a deprecatory laugh and continued: "It might be you'd answer yes, or it might be you'd answer no; but anyway I was goin' to ask you—it's kind of a funny question for me to ask, I expect—but do you like poetry?"

"What?"

"Well, as things have turned out lately I guess it's kind of a funny question, Mr. Dill; but do you like poetry?"

Noble's expression took on a coldness; for the word brought to his mind a thought of Newland Saunders. This was a poet of Noble's age, who wrote verses to Julia—that too-lovely, absent aunt of Florence's. "Do I like poetry?" said Noble. "No, I don't."

Florence was momentarily discouraged but at her age people usually possess an invaluable faculty which they lose later in life; and it is a pity they do lose it. At thirteen—especially the earlier months of thirteen—they are still able to set aside and dismiss from their minds almost any facts, no matter how audibly those facts have asked for recognition. Children superbly allow themselves to become deaf, so to speak, to undesirable circumstances; most frequently, of course, to undesirable circumstances in the way of parental direction; so that fathers, mothers, nurses, or governesses, not comprehending that this mental deafness is for the time being entirely genuine, are liable to hoarseness both of throat and temper. Thirteen is an age when the fading of this gift or talent—one of the most beautiful of childhood—begins to impair its helpfulness, under the mistaken stress of discipline; but Florence retained something of it. In a moment or two Noble Dill's disaffection toward poetry was altogether as if it did not exist.

She coughed, inclined her head a little to one side, in her mother's manner of politeness to callers, and, repeating her deprecatory laugh, remarked, "Well, of course it's kind of a funny question for me to ask, of course."

"What is, Florence?" Noble inquired absently.

"Well—what I was saying was that 'course it's sort of queer me askin' if you liked poetry, of course, on account of my writing poetry the way I do now."

She looked up at him with a bright readiness to respond modestly to whatever exclamation his wonder should dictate; but Noble's attention had straggled again. He failed to comprehend what she had set before him.

"Has she written your mother lately?" he asked.

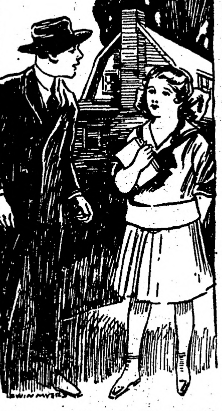
Florence's expression denoted a mental condition slightly disturbed. "No," she said. "It's goin' to be printed in the North End Daily Oriole."

"What?"

"My poem. It's about a vast amen—anyhow that's prob'ly the best thing in it, I guess—and they're goin' to have it tomorrow, or else they'll have to settle with me; that's one thing certain! I'll bring one over to your house and leave it at the door for you, Mr. Dill."

Noble had but a confused notion of what she thus generally promised. However, he said, "Thank you," and nodded vaguely.

"Of course, I don't know as it's so awful good," Florence admitted insincerely. "The family all seem to think it's something pretty much; but I don't know if it is or not. Really, I don't!"



Noble Looked Puzzled. "Surprising to See Me?" He Said Vaguely.

"No," said Noble, still confused. "I suppose not."

"I'm half way through another one I think myself'll be a good deal better. I'm not goin' as fast with it as I did with the other one, and I expect it'll be quite a ways ahead of this one." She again employed the deprecatory little laugh. "I don't know how I do it, myself. The family all think it's sort of funny; I don't know how I do it myself; but that's the way it is. They all say if they could do it they're sure they'd know how they did it; but I guess they're wrong. I presume if you can do it, why it just comes to you? Don't you presume that's the way it is, Mr. Dill?"

"I—guess so." They had reached his gate, and he stopped. "You're sure none of your family have heard anything today?" he asked anxiously.

"From Aunt Julia? I don't think they have."

He sighed, and opened the gate. "Well, good evening, Florence."

"Good evening." Her eyes followed him wistfully as he passed within the inclosure; then she turned and walked quickly toward her own home; but at the corner of the next fence she called over her shoulder, "I'll leave it with your mother for you, if you're not home when I bring it."

"What?" he shouted, from the vicinity of his front door.

"I'll leave it with your mother."

"Leave what?"

"The poem!"

"Oh!" said Noble.

His mother handed him a copy of the first issue of the North End Daily Oriole, the next day when he came home to lunch. He read it without edification; there was nothing about Julia in it.

Such, as is sometimes said, was the first issue, complete, of the North End Daily Oriole. Florence was not immediately critical of some distortions of meaning in the body of her poem, due partly to Atwater & Rooter's natural lack of experience in a new and exacting trade; partly to their enviable unconsciousness of any necessity for proofreading; and somewhat to their haste in getting through the final, and least interesting stage of their undertaking, Florence's poem being, in fact, so far as the printers were concerned, mere hack work and anti-climax.

And as they later declared, under fire, anybody that could make out more than three words in five of her ole handwriting was welcome to do it. Besides, what did it matter if a little bit was left out at the end of one or two of the lines? They couldn't be expected to run the lines out over their margin, could they? And they never knew anything crazier than makin' all this fuss because: What if some of it wasn't printed just exactly right, who in the world was goin' to notice it, and what was the difference of just a few words different in her ole poem, anyhow?

Washington—General J. J. Pershing laid before the house subcommittee on army appropriations a plan for peace time maintenance of all branches of the army.

Washington—By a vote of 5 to 3, the republican subcommittee of the house ways and means committee voted against a sales tax as a means of raising the soldier bonus.

Washington—The long standing dispute between North and South Carolina as to which state produced Andrew Jackson was debated in the house, but there was no decision.

Washington—Modifications to "clear the intent of the offer" made by Henry Ford for purchase and lease of the government's properties at Muscle Shoals, Ala., have been agreed to by the Detroit manufacturer.

Washington—Sharp reductions in the railroad freights on livestock were urged in the Interstate Commerce Commission's general rate hearings here by producers of cattle and hogs and the National Livestock exchange.

Washington—The legislative bill carrying $12,490,000 for expenses of Congress next year was passed by the Senate and sent to conference. It was the third of the regular supply measures to get through both branches of Congress.

Washington—Because of the Roma disaster President Harding postponed the army and navy reception, which was to have been conducted at the White House, until April 19. Invitations had been issued to 4,000 prospective guests.

Washington—What provision for financing the soldiers' bonus would be proposed for a vote of the full committee was a matter of speculation as the seven Republicans of the House ways and means committee having the question in hand met to reduce the problem to some solution.

Washington—A bill by Senator P. J. McCumber (rep., N. D.), providing $5,000,000 for government loans to farmers to buy seed grain and feed for livestock was reported favorably by the senate agriculture committee. It is designed principally to aid farmers of North Dakota and Montana in drought stricken regions

Washington—Approval of final plans for a magnificent building to George Washington to be erected by the Masons of the United States at Arlington, Va., seven miles from here on a ridge commanding a view of the capital, was given at the annual meeting of the George Washington National Memorial association. The structure and surrounding grounds will cost approximately $2,000,000.

Domestic

Providence—Two troops of cavalry reached Pontiac, R. I., to quell rioting textile strike sympathizers.

Chicago—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri urged that George Harvey, American ambassador to England, be recalled, in an address.

New York—Reversing the decision of the lower court, the United States circuit court of appeals ruled that sweet cider was not taxable as a beverage.

New York—A thousand debutantes and former debutantes took charge of the Hotel Biltmore for the benefit of the Society for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

New York—Colonel R. G Cholmeley-Jones, formerly director of the bureau of war risk insurance, died at the Presbyterian hospital. He had been ill at the hospital since Oct. 30 last.

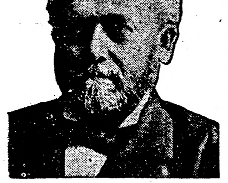
Shave With Cuticura Soap The New Way Without Mug



FIFTY YEARS AGO

A young man who practiced medicine in Pennsylvania became famous and was called in consultation in many towns and cities because of his success in the treatment of disease. This was Dr. Pierce, who finally made up his mind to place some of his medicines before the public, and moving to Buffalo, N. Y., put up what he called his "Favorite Prescription," and placed it with the druggists in every state.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has long been recognized as a tonic for diseases peculiar to womankind. After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged-down by weaknesses of her sex—a woman is quickly restored to health by its use. Thousands of women testify that Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has entirely eradicated their distressing ailments.

More recently that wonderful discovery of Dr. Pierce's, called An-uric (for kidneys and backache), has been successfully used by many thousands who write Dr. Pierce of the benefits received—that their backache, rheumatism, and other symptoms of uric acid deposits in joints or muscles have been completely conquered by its use.

Send 10c to Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., for trial pkg. of any of his remedies, or write for free medical advice.

GUMMER GETS LIFE SENTENCE

Gummer to Serve Life Sentence For First Degree Murder.

BROWN IS BEING HELD

Brother and Sister Hear Sentence Passed, Both Weeping Silently—Gummer Receives Sentence in Silence.

Fargo.—Judge Charles M. Cooley, who sat in the trial of William Gummer, who was found guilty by a jury in the Barnes county district court at Valley City Saturday of murdering Marie Wick in the Prescott hotel in Fargo on June 7, formally sentenced the convicted youth to spend the remainder of his life in the state penitentiary. Although he looked somewhat paler than usual and seemed to have lost the jaunty air which has been with him during the trial, Gummer received the sentence in silence.

Case to Be Appealed.

Under the state law, Gummer can expect no pardon or parole for 20 years. He will remain in the Barnes county jail, where he was confined during the trial for a few days longer, in order that his attorney, Judge J. H. Barnett of Fargo may prepare for the appeal of the case to the state supreme court.

Gummer's parents and a brother and sister were in the court room when the sentence was pronounced. They made no particular demonstration, but gree. Brown was arraigned before

While Gummer sits in the Barnes county jail awaiting commitment to the state prison, his pal, Andy Brown, is just beginning the court procedure that will bring him to trial on the same charge, murder in the first degree. Brown will be arraigned before Justice H. F. Miller early this week. Brown was kept in the Barnes county jail with Gummer during the trial and called as a state witness. He, like Gummer, maintains his innocence. Brown was brought back to Fargo as soon as Gummer was found guilty, a warrant charging him with first degree murder having been served on him in his cell in the jail.

Green to Rest Up.

State's Attorney W. C. Green has gone to the farm of his parents at Stephen, Minn., to rest after his strenuous duty of the Gummer prosecution, and it is likely that the Brown trial will be held up for two or three weeks if he asks for a preliminary hearing.

EGYPT BOYCOTTS ENGLAND

Egypt Declares a Boycott Against English Goods.

Alexandria, Egypt—In declaring a boycott against all goods which are of English manufacture, the Egyptians have adopted the tactics of the Nationalists of India. They have heard that the Indians have been successful in their attempt to boycott British goods and are endeavoring to use the same means to bring the British government to terms.

As yet the extent of the boycott is not clear. However, many Egyptian merchants are now refusing to buy English goods and salesmen calling on Egyptian customers are promptly told that he wishes no quotations on such merchandise.

But the great majority of importers and exporters are foreigners who desire to continue to buy and sell in the best markets.

If the Egyptians are able to hold together on the boycott program and force the importers to no longer deal in English cotton piece goods, iron and steel products, the result may be serious for English factories in Lancashire and Birmingham.

British banks are included in the boycott. It is stated that considerable sums of money have been withdrawn from English banks in Egypt and placed in other foreign banks.

School boys have boycotted the schools and the native bar association voted to suspend all work.

It has been proposed also to restrict the cultivation of Egyptian cotton, which would be of interest to the cotton growers of the United States. It has even been suggested that the Egyptians should refuse to export onions to England which now takes 80 per cent of the Egyptian onion crop.

Certain members of the Effendi class, Egyptians of leisure, have announced that they would cease to drink English whiskey and refuse to wear short-cropped mustaches as the English do. Various other boycotting plans have been proposed.

To Confer on Waterway Plan.

Washington—Waterways transportation problems extending from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico will occupy the attention of five important waterways organizations which will hold sessions here this week. These include the National Rivers and Harbors congress, the National Merchant Marine association, South Atlantic States association, Middlewest Merchant Marine committee, and the Mississippi Valley association.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

St. Cloud—The newly organized athletic club of St. Cloud has 69 members after an existence of 10 days.

Willmar—Rasmus Korth, aged 80, who has resided in the vicinity of Willmar for the last 50 years, died at his home here.

Anoka—The Anoka County Farm bureau had its annual banquet here. The bad weather cut the attendance down to about 200.

Balaton—Louisa B. Shequen has just celebrated her 103d birthday anniversary. Mrs. Shequen is the oldest person in this part of the state.

Rushmore—The Rushmore Gun club has been spreading out grain for food for the game birds wintering in this section. A number of clubs in other towns also have been carrying on the work.

Fergus Falls—William A. Langevin, aged 50, a merchant of the village of Kent, committed suicide there by shooting with a rifle. The bullet passed through his heart. No reason is known for the act.

Red Wing—The Red Wing Co-operative Creamery company's business for the year 1921 totaled $140,285.43, according to reports submitted at the annual meeting in this city. This is an enormous increase over the year 1920.

Minneapolis—Table clinics and lectures devoted to a symposium on preventive dentistry with special reference to taking care of children's teeth marked the closing sessions of the Minnesota State Dental association.

Gonvick—Fire which started in the attic, destroyed the Gonvick Trading company, with an estimated loss of $30,000, and damaged the Gonvick Banner, newspaper office, to the extent of $8,000. Both losses are partially covered by insurance.

St. James—H. A. Drake, living a few miles south of here, sold 42 head of Chester White sows at his sale at an average price of $61 a head. It is believed this is the best record so far reported in this state for sows at any sale of that breed.

Albert Lea—Harry Hanson, a traveling salesman of St. Paul, was seriously injured and ten other persons were severely shaken up when a bus, running between Albert Lea and Austin rolled off the grade, pinning the occupants under the machine.

Minneapolis—David Posnick, convicted in the Minneapolis-Winnipeg whisky conspiracy case has begun his sentence of a year and a day in the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, according to Edward Rustad, deputy United States marshal in Minneapolis.

Sauk Rapids—Citizens are circulating a petition here for a mass meeting to consider closing the local high school. A certain element in the town alleges that the cost of running the high school is responsible for the high taxes. This is denied by the board of education. One proposition would have the students sent to St. Cloud and pay per capita tuition.

Minneapolis—Ways and means of financing farmers' co-operative grain elevators, a general review of business conditions and a comprehensive explanation of the War Finance corporation's system were given by C. T. Jaffray in an address before the fifteenth annual convention of the Farmers' Grain Dealers' association of Minnesota in the West hotel.

Minneapolis—To keep pace with the growth of the beekeeping industry in Minnesota, the University of Minnesota extension division will offer a short course in beekeeping at the university farm May 23 to 26, Dr. A. V. Strom, director, said. The course will include instruction and experimental work, given by the college faculty and professional beekeepers.

Duluth—Contentions that neither the state nor federal constitutions are violated by the occupation tax, which levies a 6 per cent assessment on iron ore produced or mined, and denials that it is a property or an income tax, were set forth in an answer by the state of Minnesota filed in United States district court here in reply to the suit of the Oliver Iron Mining company and 31 independent concerns to restrain collection of the tax. Privilege is given counsel for the mining companies to file paper of dispute within 10 days.

Minneapolis—Frank T. Heffelfinger, president of the Minneapolis Civic & Commerce association, was named chairman, and Senator J. M. Hackney of St. Paul, vice chairman, of the executive committee to have charge of arrangements in the Twin Cities for the National Dairy show to be held next fall. No definite date was mentioned.

Luverne—Rock county shipped three cars of corn to aid the famine sufferers in Russia. The corn was consigned to relief headquarters in Chicago, where it will be prepared and milled into food.

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

YOUNG GIRLS NEED CARE

Mothers, watch your Daughters' Health

Health Is Happiness

From the time a girl reaches the age of twelve until womanhood is established, she needs all the care a thoughtful mother can give.

The condition that the girl is then passing through is so critical, and may have such far-reaching effects upon her future happiness and health, that it is almost criminal for a mother or guardian to withhold counsel or advice.

Many a woman has suffered years of prolonged pain and misery through having been the victim of thoughtlessness or ignorance on the part of those who should have guided her through the dangers and difficulties that beset this period.

Mothers should teach their girls what danger comes from standing around with cold or wet feet, from lifting heavy articles, and from overworking. Do not let them over-study. If they complain of headache, pains in the back and lower limbs, they need a mother's thoughtful care and sympathy.

A Household Word in Mother's House writes Mrs. Lynd, about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was 14 years old for troubles girls often have and for loss of weight. Then after I married I took the Vegetable Compound before each child was born and always when I felt the least run down. Both my sister and sister-in-law take it and have only the highest praise for it. It has been a household word in my mother's house for years."—Mrs. KATHERYN LYND, 2401 Gladys Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Little Book Helped Her to Decide

Milwaukee, Wis.—"My daughter took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as she was so weak and did not feel like going to school. She was like that for a whole year before taking your Vegetable Compound. I found a little book of yours in our mail-box and decided to give her your medicine. She is now strong and well and attends school every day. We recommend your Vegetable Compound to all mothers with weak daughters. You may use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. E. KLUCZNY, 917 20th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

"I was always feeling tired and sleepy, was losing in weight and would faint at times. I had other troubles too, that made me feel badly. I read your little books and heard friends talk about the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done them, so I have taken it too. The results are most satisfactory, for I have gained in weight and my bad symptoms are gone. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may make whatever use you like of this letter."—GLORIA RAMIREZ, 1116 9th Ave., Tampa, Florida.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Ask Your Dealer or Decorator about the ALABASTINE OPALINE PROCESS

Beautiful walls! Harmonies never before imagined! A blending of tints and tones, a magic interweaving of colors which will transform your walls into a rich fabric unsurpassed in its charm and cheerfulness—and at a cost well within your means.

ANY good decorator can do the work—nearly all stores dealing in paints can supply the material—anyone can now afford to have Tiffanized walls formerly the exclusive privilege of the very wealthy.

Alabastine

Instead of Kalsomine or Wall Paper

All that is necessary is just Alabastine, the same nationally accepted wall tint which for forty years has been used in homes, apartments, offices and public buildings of all kinds—the same sanitary, durable, economical and artistic wall coating sold by the best stores and used by the best decorators. With Alabastine, regularly applied you get the exact color to match your rugs and draperies. Through the Alabastine-Opaline-Process you obtain a combination of colors most pleasing and satisfactory. Before decorating ask to see samples of the Alabastine-Opaline-Process.

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline—Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Some Aspects of the Farmers' Problems

By BERNARD M. BARUCH

V

To take a tolerant and sympathetic view of the farmers' strivings for better things is not to give a blanket endorsement to any specific plan, and still less to applaud the vagaries of some of their leaders and groups. Neither should we, on the other hand, allow the froth of bitter agitation, false economics, and mistaken radicalism to conceal the facts of the farmers' disadvantages, and the practicability of eliminating them by well-considered measures. It may be that the farmers will not show the business sagacity and develop the wise leadership to carry through sound plans; but that possibility does not justify the obstruction of their upward efforts. We, as city people, see in high and speculatively manipulated prices, spoilage, waste, scarcity, the results of defective distribution of farm products. Should it not occur to us that we have a common interest with the farmer in his attempts to attain a degree of efficiency in distribution corresponding to his efficiency in production? Do not the recent fluctuations in the May wheat option, apparently unrelated to normal interaction of supply and demand, offer a timely proof of the need of some such stabilizing agency as the grain growers have in contemplation?

It is contended that, if their proposed organizations be perfected and operated, the farmers will have in their hands an instrument that will be capable of dangerous abuse. We are told that it will be possible to pervert it to arbitrary and oppressive price-fixing from its legitimate use of ordering and stabilizing the flow of farm products to the market, to the mutual benefit of producer and consumer. I have no apprehensions on this point.

In the first place, a loose organization, such as any union of farmers must be at best, cannot be so arbitrarily and promptly controlled as a great corporation. The one is a lumbering democracy and the other an agile autocracy. In the second place, with all possible power of organization, the farmers cannot succeed to any great extent, or for any considerable length of time, in fixing prices. The great law of supply and demand works in various and surprising ways, to the undoing of the best laid plans that attempt to foil it. In the third place, their power will avail the farmers nothing if it be abused. In our time and country power is of value to its possessor only so long as it is not abused. It is fair to say that I have seen no signs in responsible quarters of a disposition to dictate prices. There seems, on the contrary, to be a commonly beneficial purpose to realize a stability that will give an orderly and abundant flow of farm products to the consumer and ensure reasonable and dependable returns to the producer.

In view of the supreme importance to the national well-being of a prosperous and contented agricultural population, we should be prepared to go a long way in assisting the farmers to get an equitable share of the wealth they produce, through the inauguration of reforms that will procure a continuous and increasing stream of farm products. They are far from getting a fair share now. Considering his capital and the long hours of labor put in by the average farmer and his family, he is remunerated less than any other occupational class, with the possible exception of teachers, religious and lay. Though we know that the present general distress of the farmers is exceptional and is linked with the inevitable economic readjustment following the war, it must be remembered that, although representing one-third of the industrial product and half the total population of the nation, the rural communities ordinarily enjoy but a fifth to a quarter of the net annual national gain. Notwithstanding the taste of prosperity that the farmers had during the war, there is today a lower standard of living among the cotton farmers of the South than in any other pursuit in the country.

In conclusion, it seems to me that the farmers are chiefly striving for a generally beneficial integration of their business, of the same kind and character that other business enjoys. If it should be found on examination that the attainment of this end requires methods different from those which other activities have followed for the same purpose should we not sympathetically consider the plea for the right to co-operate, if only from our own enlightened self interest, in obtaining an abundant and steady flow of farm products?

In examining the agricultural situation with a view to its improvement, we shall be most helpful if we maintain a detached and judicial viewpoint, remembering that existing wrongs may be chiefly an accident of unsymmetrical economic growth instead of a creation of malevolent design and conspiracy. We Americans are prone, as Professor David Friday well says in his admirable book, "Profits, Wages and Prices," to seek a "criminal intent behind every difficult and undesirable economic situation." I can positively assert from my contact with men of large affairs, including bankers, that, as a whole, they are endeavoring to fulfill as they see them the obligations that go with their power. Preoccupied with the grave problems and heavy tasks of their own immediate affairs, they have not turned their thoughtful personal attention or their constructive abilities to the deficiencies of agricultural business organization. Agriculture, it may be said, suffers from their preoccupation and neglect rather than from any purposeful exploitation by them. They ought now to begin to respond to the farmers' difficulties, which they must realize are their own.

On the other hand, my contacts with the farmers have filled me with respect for them—for their sanity, their patience, their balance. Within the last year, and particularly at a meeting called by the Kansas State Board of Agriculture and at another called by the Committee of Seventeen, I have met many of the leaders of the new farm movement, and I testify in all sincerity that they are endeavoring to deal with their problems, not as promoters of a narrow class interest, not as exploiters of the hapless consumer, not as merciless monopolists, but as honest men bent on the improvement of the common weal.

We can and must meet such men and such a cause half way. Their business is our business—the nation's business.

The snow is going, and spring is coming.

Sudden Death of Tilford Ellestead

Everyone was shocked and grieved to learned that Tilford, the nine year old son of Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ellestead had died quite suddenly at about five o'clock Saturday afternoon from an attack of acute dilation of the heart. He was taken slightly ill the previous night, but was not in much pain and his case was not considered serious. Only an hour or two before he died he was sitting up in a chair and said he was not sick. When it became apparent he was worse, Dr. Fisher was sent for but the boy died before he arrived. Upon his arrival Dr. Fisher made a thorough examination but was unable to find just what caused the attack of the heart.

Tilford Raymond Ellestad was born August 29th. 1912, at Elgin North Dakota. He had always been a strong healthy boy, and the only sickness he had was caused by swollen tonsils which had been cured. He was an exemplary boy, dearly loved in the home, much loved by his friends and schoolmates and his sudden departure, leaves his parents, sister, and brother broken hearted and fills the the hearts of his friends with sorrow. The funeral services were held Wednesday afternoon at the Synod church and Rev. Ordahl spoke comforting words to all present.

The church was filled to overflowing with sympathizing friends and neighbors. The school was closed during the funeral and the teachers and pupils attended in a body.

The interment was made in the Holt cemetery.

The News joins the friends of the family in extending to them the deepest sympathy in their hour of sorrow.

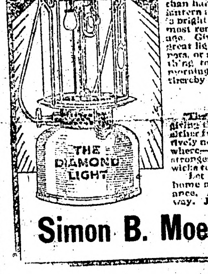
New 300 Candle Power Lantern



COSTS LESS THAN 1/2c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

This Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

The ORIOLE

By Booth
Tarkington

PRETTY PATTY.

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative."

For, by the time these explanations (so to call them) took place, Florence was indeed makin' a fuss. Her emotions, at first, had been happily stimulated at sight of "By Florence Atwater." A singular tenderness had risen in her—a tremulous sense as of something almost sacred coming at last into its own; and she had hurried to distribute, gratis, among relatives and friends, several copies of the Oriole, paying for them, too (though not without injurious argument) at the rate of two cents a copy. But upon returning to her own home, she became calm enough (for a moment or so) to look over the poem with attention to details. She returned hastily to the newspaper building, but would have been wiser to remain away, since all subscribers had received their copies by the time she got there; and under the circumstances little reparation was practicable.

She ended her oration—or professed to end it—by declaring that she would never have another poem in their ole vile newspaper as long as she lived.

"You're right about that," Henry Rooter agreed heartily. "We wouldn't let another one in it. Not for fifty dollars! Just look at all the trouble we took moiling and toiling to get your ole poem printed as nice as we could, so it wouldn't ruin our newspaper, and then you comin' over here and goin' on this way, and all this and that, why, I wouldn't go through it again for a hundred dollars. We're makin' good money anyhow, with our newspaper, Florence Atwater. You needn't think we depend on you for our living!"

"That's so," his partner declared. "We knew you wouldn't be satisfied anyway, Florence. Didn't we, Henry?"

"I should say we did!"

"Yes, sir!" said Herbert. "Right when we were havin' the worst time tryin' to print it and make out some o' the words, I said right then, we were just throwing away our time. I said, 'What's the use? That ole girl's bound to raise Cain anyhow, so what's the use wastin' a whole lot of our good time and brains like this, just to suit her? Whatever we do, she's certain to come over here and insult us.' Isn't that what I said, Henry?"

"Yes, it is; and I said then you were right, and you are right!"

"Cert'nly I am," said Herbert. "Didn't I tell you she'd be just the way some of the family say she is? A good many of 'em say she'd find fault with the undertaker at her own funeral. That's just exactly what I said!"

"Oh, you did?" Florence burlesqued a polite interest. "How virry considerate of you! Then, perhaps you'll try to be a gentleman enough for one simple moment to allow me to tell you my last remarks on this subject. I've said enough—"

"Oh, have you?" Herbert interrupted with violent sarcasm. "Oh, no! Say not so! Florence, say not so!"

At this, Henry Rooter loudly shouted with applausive hilarity; whereupon Herbert, rather surprised at his own effectiveness, naturally repeated his mot.

"Say not so, Florence! Say not so! Say not so!"

"I'll tell you one thing!" his lady cousin cried, thoroughly infuriated. "I wish to make just one last simple remark that I would care to soil myself with in your respects, Mister Herbert Illingsworth Atwater and Mister Henry Rooter!"

"Oh, say not so, Florence!" they both entreated. "Say not so! Say not so!"

"I'll just simply state the simple truth," Florence announced. "In the first place you're goin' to live to see the day when you'll come and beg me on your bented knees to have me put poems or anything I want to on your ole newspaper, but I'll just laugh at you! 'Indeed?' I'll say! 'So you come beggin' around me, do you? Ha, ha!' I'll say—'I guess it's a little too late for that! Why I wouldn't—'"

"Oh, say not so, Florence! Say not so!"

"'Me allow you to have one of my poems? I'll say, 'Much less than that!' I'll say, 'because even if I was wearing the oldest shoes I got in the world I wouldn't take the trouble to—'"

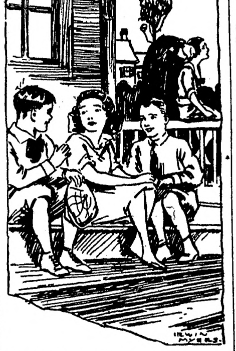
Her conclusion was drowned out. "Oh, Florence, say not so! Say not so, Florence! Say not so!"

The hateful entreaty still murmured in her resentful ears that night, as she fell asleep; and she passed into the beginnings of a dream with her lips slightly dimpling the surface of her pillow in belated repartee. And upon waking, though it was Sunday, her first words, half slumbrous in the silence of the morning, were, "Vile things!" Her faculties became more alert, during the preparation of a toilet which was to serve not only for breakfast, but with the addition of gloves, a hat, and a blue velvet coat, for church and Sunday school as well; and she planned a hundred vengeances. That is to say, her mind did not occupy itself with plots possibly to make real; rather it dabbled among those fragmentary visions that love to overlap and displace one another in the shifty retina of the mind's eye.

But in all of these pictures, wherein prevailingly she seemed some sort of deathly powerful Queen of Poetry, the postures assumed by the figures of Messrs. Atwater and Rooter (both in an extremity of rags) were miserably suppliant. So she soothed herself a little—but not long. Herbert in the next pew in church, and Henry in the next beyond that, were perfect compositions in smugness. They were cold, contented, aristocratic; and had an imperturbable understanding between themselves—quite perceptible to the sensitive Florence—that she was a nuisance now capably disposed of by their beautiful discovery of "Say not so!" Florence's feelings were unbecoming to the place and occasion.

But at four o'clock that afternoon she was assuaged into a milder condition by the arrival, according to an agreement made in Sunday school, of the popular Miss Patty Fairchild.

Patty was thirteen and a half; an exquisite person with gold-dusted hair, eyes of perfect blue, and an alluring air of sweet self-consciousness. Henry Rooter and Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., out gathering news, saw her entering Florence's gate, and immediately forgot that they were reporters. They become silent and gradually moved toward the house of their newspaper's sole poetess.



It Was Not Lost Upon Her, However, That Her Withdrawal Had Little Depressing Effect Upon Her Guests.

Florence and Patty occupied themselves indoors for half an hour; then went out into the yard to study a mole's tunnel that had interested Florence recently. They followed it across the lawn at the south side of the house, discussing the habits of moles and other matters of zoology; and finally lost the track near the fence, which was here the "back fence," higher than their heads. Patty looked through a knothole to see if the tunnel was visible in the next yard, but without reporting upon her observations she turned, as if carelessly, and leaned back against the fence, covering the knothole.

"Florence," she said, in a tone softer and lovelier than she had been using heretofore— "Florence, do you know what I think?"

"No. Could you see any more tracks over there?"

"Florence," said Patty—"I was just going to tell you something—only maybe I better not."

"Why not?" Florence inquired. "Go on and tell me."

"No," said Patty, gently "You might think it was silly."

"No, I won't."

"Yes, you might."

"I promise I won't."

"Well, then—oh, Florence, I'm sure you'll think it's silly!"

"I promised I wouldn't."

"Well—I don't think I better say it."

"Go on," Florence urged. "Patty, you got to."

"Well, then, if I got to," said Patty. "What I was going to say, Florence: Don't you think your cousin Herbert and Henry Rooter have got the nicest eyes of any boy in town?"

"Who?" Florence was staggered.

"I do," Patty said in her charming voice. "I think Herbert and Henry've got the nicest eyes of any boy in town."

"You do?" Florence cried incredulously.

"Yes, I really do, Florence. I think Herbert Atwater and Henry Rooter have got just the nicest eyes of any boy in town."

"Well, I never heard anything like this before!" Florence declared.

"But don't you think they've got the nicest eyes of any boy in town?" Patty insisted, appealingly.

"I think," said Florence, "Their eyes are just horrable!"

"What?"

"Herbert's eyes," continued Florence ardently, "are the very worst lookin' ole squinty eyes I ever saw, and that nasty little Henry Rooter's eyes—"

But Patty suddenly became fidgety; she hurried away from the fence. "Come over here, Florence," she said. "Let's go over to the other side of the yard and talk."

And it was time for her to take some such action if she wished to show any tact. Messrs. Atwater and Rooter, seated quietly together upon a box on the other side of the fence (though with their backs to the knothole) were beginning to show signs of inward disturbance. Already flushed with unexpected ineffabilities, their complexions had grown even pinker upon Florence's open-hearted expressions of opinion. Slowly they turned their heads to look sternly at the fence, upon the other side of which stood the maligner of their eyes. Not that they cared what that ole girl thought—but she oughtn't to be allowed to go around talking like this and perhaps prejudicing everybody that had a word to say for them.

"Come on over here, Florence," called Patty huskily, from the other side of the yard. "Let's talk over here."

Florence was puzzled, but consented. "What you want to talk over here for?" she asked.

"Oh, I don't know," said Patty. "Let's go out in the front yard."

She led the way around the house, and a moment later uttered a cry of surprise as the firm of Atwater & Rooter, passing along the pavement, hesitated at the gate. Their celebrated eyes showed some doubt for a moment, then a brazenness; Herbert and Henry decided to come in.

"Isn't this the funniest thing?" cried Patty. "After what I just a while ago—you know, Florence. Don't you dare to tell 'em."

"I cert'nly won't!" her hostess promised, and, turning inhospitably to the two callers, "What on earth you want 'round here?" she inquired.

Herbert chivalrously took the duty of response upon himself. "Look here; this is my own aunt and uncle's yard, isn't it? If I want to come in it, I got a perfect right to."

"I should say so," his partner said warmly.

"Why, of course!" the cordial Patty agreed. "We can play some nice Sunday games, or something. Let's sit on the porch steps and think what to do."

"I just as soon," said Henry Rooter. "I got nothin' p'ticular to do."

"I haven't, either," said Herbert.

Thereupon, Patty sat between them on the steps. "This is per-fickly grand!" she cried. "Come on, Florence, aren't you going to sit down with all the rest of us?"

"Well, pray kindly excuse me!" said Miss Atwater; and she added that she would neither sit on the same steps with Herbert Atwater and Henry Rooter, nor, even if they entreated her with accompanying genuflections, would she have anything else whatever to do with them. She withdrew to the railing of the porch at a point farthest from the steps, and, seated there, swung one foot rhythmically and sang hymns in a tone at once plaintive and inimical.

It was not lost upon her, however, that her withdrawal had little depressing effect upon her guests. They chattered gaily and Patty devised, or remembered, harmless little games which could be played by a few people as well as by many; and the three participants were so congenial and noisy and made so merry that, before long, Florence was unable to avoid the impression that, whether she liked it or not, she was giving quite a party.

> "Henry Rooter—Herbert, too—they make sick—that's what they do."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

Feel Stiff and Achy After Every Cold?

Do You Have Constant Backache? Feel Old and Lame and Suffer Sharp, Rheumatic Pains? Then Look to Your Kidneys!

DOES every cold, chill or attack of grip leave you worn-out and utterly miserable? Do you feel old and lame, stiff and rheumatic? Does your back ache with a dull, unceasing throb, until it seems you just can't stand it any longer?

Then look to your kidneys! Grip, colds and chills are mighty hard on the kidneys. They fill the blood with poisons and impurities that the kidneys must filter off. The kidneys weaken under this rush of new work; become congested and inflamed.

It's little wonder, then, that every cold leaves you with torturing backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and annoying bladder irregularities.

But don't worry! Simply realize that your kidneys are overworked at such times and need assistance. Get a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and give your weakened kidneys the help they need. Assist them, also, by drinking pure water freely, eating lightly and getting plenty of fresh air and rest. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"Use Doan's," Say These Grateful Folks:

M. A. Rivett, 1108 Cheyenne Ave., Grand Forks, N. Dak., says: "I take Doan's Kidney Pills whenever I have attacks of backache and they are all that is claimed for them for such trouble. I have to do a good deal of lifting and being exposed to all kinds of weather, I frequently take cold. This settles in my kidneys and causes a severe lameness in my hips and through the small of my back. I become so lame I can hardly stoop or lift but Doan's Kidney Pills never fail to cure me of this trouble. I certainly recommend them highly."

Mrs. Mary Green, Ellendale, N. D., says: "I have so much trouble from backache and pains in my side at times, especially if I exert myself or take cold. My back gets lame and aches just something dreadful and there are times when about my work if I stoop over or get up I get such sharp dizzy spells it almost blinds me. It is then I get Doan's Kidney Pills. After taking a few of them, the trouble will leave me. I certainly do not hesitate to recommend Doan's for they are a reliable medicine."

HIS CRITICISM RATHER HASTY

Possibly Mr. Newlywed Will Make Discreet Inquiries Before He Makes Another Complaint.

A few weeks ago I was invited to dine with a couple of old schoolmates who had been married for some time. I was asked to bring a friend who had also attended school with us.

The dinner looked appetizing, and was progressing smoothly with all of us in good spirits.

Suddenly, Jack, my married friend, turned to his wife and said: "Vera, what's the matter with these biscuits?"

She made some sort of reply, whereupon he answered they were not fit to eat, that his mother could do better baking, and asked who baked them.

Vera, with an injured expression, answered: "Why, Jack, dear, your mother sent them over this evening."

Both, I know, wished the dinner over, and I found I had a pressing engagement directly afterward.—Chicago Tribune.

WORKS FOR CHILD MUST KEEP WELL

Mothers in a Like Situation Should Read This Letter from Mrs. Enrico

Chicago, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a serious trouble. I had tried doctors and all said the same—an operation. At first I only felt the pain on my left side, but later I seemed to feel it on both sides. I am a power sewing-machine operator and have a little girl to support. I work in a tailor shop and that line of work has been very slack this year and I am home part of the time. I do not like to take any chances, so I consulted my friends, and one lady said, 'Take Lydia Pinkham's medicine,' so I did. I have felt better right along and am in good enough health to go to work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash to all."—Mrs. MARY ENRICO, 459 N. Carpenter St., Chicago, Illinois.

Often the mother is obliged to support her children and good health is necessary. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine you can depend upon. It is a medicine for women's ailments and the relief it brought Mrs. Enrico it may bring to you. Keep well by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Taking the Joy Out of Art.

An artist from New York was visiting an old Southern family in Alabama. One day while they were riding in their automobile, which their former coachman, an old negro, was driving, the hostess pointed out a majestic tree that stood alone in a meadow. The artist went into rapture over it and with hands clasped turned to her hostess.

"Oh, isn't it superb!" she breathed. "A perfect example of a Corot!"

"'Scuse me, mistis," said the privileged old servant. "Dat ain't no Corot. Hit's jest one of dese hyuh sugarberry trees."—Youth's Companion.

HOUSE REFUSES TO PASS BILL

Bill Appropriating Money For Drough Stricken Farmers Lacks Majority.

NO. DAK. IS EFFECTED

Representative Mondell Urges Passage of Bill, Stating the Country Would Benefit More Than the Farmers Individually.

Washington.—By a close vote the house refused to suspend its rules and pass a bill authorizing an appropriation of $1,000,000 for the purchase of seed grain to be used in the drought stricken areas of the Northwest.

With five members voting "present" the vote was 191 to 99, or six votes short of the two-thirds needed for passage.

Sharp debate preceded the vote. Proponents of the bill declared the situation in the Northwest was critical and contended the government should lend assistance. Opponents of the measure, most of whom were Democrats, held, however, that it had not been shown that the farmers affected were destitute or had exhausted their credit resources.

Are Fighting for Homes.

Representative Mondell of Wyoming, Republican leader, urging passage of the bill, said that settlers in North Dakota, Montana, Idaho and Washington, the four states chiefly affected by the legislation, were carrying on a "great experiment" to determine whether crops could be grown on their land or whether the soil was good only for grazing purposes.

"The situation is, are they to abandon their homes and their struggle, or are they to be given the opportunity to pursue the experiment, which means more to the country as a whole than to them individually or collectively," Mr. Mondell stated.

Speaking in opposition to the measure, Representative Garrett of Tennessee, Democratic leader, declared it was time for the Republican majority in congress that is "making a pretense at economy," to use more discretion in advocating bills that call for government expenditures. He said that no evidence had been presented to the agricultural committee, which reported the bill, that farmers in the Northwest were in destitute circumstances.

No Seed Purchase Provided.

The agricultural appropriation bill last year carried $2,000,000 for the purchase of seed grain to be loaned farmers in the Northwest. Representative Buchanan of Texas, a Democratic member of the appropriations committee, told the house that at hearings before the subcommittee preparing this year's agricultural appropriation bill, it was brought out that only $600,000 of the $2,000,000 loaned farmers last spring had been repaid.

The agricultural bill reported to the house carried no provision for the purchase of seed grain. The senate recently passed a bill appropriating $5,000,000. This amount was cut to $2,000,000 by the house agriculture committee and was further decreased to $1,000,000 when the bill came up for consideration.

Proponents of the measure planned to bring it up again under a rule which would require only a majority vote for passage.

ACTIVITIES OF 66th CONGRESS

Large Number of Bills Offered—Few Laws Enacted.

Washington.—Analysis of the proceedings of the sixty-sixth congress discloses the fact that during its session 16,239 public bills were introduced in the house and more than 5,000 in the senate. In addition, 481 joint resolutions were introduced. As a result, 470 new laws became part of the national statutes, not including 124 private bills which were enacted.

The facts answer the criticism sometimes aimed at the press by congress that it fails adequately to report the activities of the national legislature and certainly provide food for thought for those critics of congress who say it is not sufficiently active.

Many members of the national legislature are alive to the waste of time and effort involved in the mere presentation of so many bills, few of which can ever receive consideration or be made into law. The physical limitations of hours in a day and days in a session should, they contend, be considered and some means found to make it possible to decrease the large number of bills presented. Large as the number above quoted is it is less than that of some previous years, which, as the country is growing, is in itself an indication that the vast majority of bills offered are unnecessary and an obstruction to vital legislation.

Railroad Wage Fight

Chicago.—The six railroad shop crafts and labor unions representing 500,000 employes were the first group of railroad workers on the program at the opening of the fight over the present scale of wages between railroad labor and the nation's largest transportation lines before the United States railroad labor board. Petitions asking for a 10 per cent wage reduction have been placed before the board by 114 roads, while the shopmen have asked increases of 13 cents an hour over the present scale.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Fairmont—American Legion officers here assert that Fairmont veterans now have the finest clubrooms in the state.

Alexandria — The new National Guard armory for Company L, Sixth Minnesota, was opened here with a formal ball. The structure cost $30,000.

Luverne—By a unanimous vote of the directors of the Rock County Farm Bureau association, M. E. Teeter was re-elected as county agent of Rock county for the coming year.

Walnut Grove—Fire destroyed the warehouse of the McComb Fur & Hide company here, with an estimated loss of $10,000. A large stock of mink and skunk hides valued at nearly $5,000 was consumed.

St. Paul—Hascal R. Brill, Ramsey county district judge, died here. Judge Brill was in the midst of his eighth consecutive term on the Ramsey county Bench, having served continuously since March 1, 1875.

Pipestone—Concrete paving will be put in on a mile of State Highway No. 6 through Pipestone the coming summer. When this work has been completed, Pipestone's paving system will cover nearly 14 miles.

Red Wing—March 1 started the closed season on crappies, pike, pickerel, perch, sunfish and bass. For all the above except bass, the season will open again May 1. The bass season does not open until May 30.

Lake Benton—When a coasting sled on which three young men were riding turned over on a hill west of this city, Clarence Stevens was caught under a runner of the sleigh and one of his legs was broken above the knee.

Worthington—Plans are now being made for the $50,000 armory to house the two units of Minnesota National Guards located here. The city will furnish $10,000 for the purchase of a suitable site for the new structure.

Butterfield—Henry Schawab, village marshal, who was severely burned a few weeks ago while throwing a switch on a highpower transformer, has a fighting chance to recover. Physicians have amputated one foot in an effort to save his life.

Red Wing—Red Wing's American Legion will be known hereafter as Leo C. Peterson post, in honor of a soldier of that name, who was killed in action in the fall of 1918 in France. Peterson had no parents living and his body is buried in France.

Fulda—O. C. Reusse of Fulda claims to have the record for length of service as chief of a fire department and mayor of Minnesota. Mr. Reusse has been at the head of the Fulda department for 24 years, and 20 years of the time has been mayor of the city.

Waseca—A gang of 15 boys, all between the ages of 12 and 16, who have been breaking into houses, stealing and destroying property, have been arrested and will be tried in the juvenile court. One of the gang's acts was the wrecking of the St. Mary's township schoolhouse.

Minneapolis—Plans are focused on the co-operation of city, council and state associations to make the 1922 National Dairy show at the State Fair grounds, Oct. 7 to 14, the banner event of its kind, following a meeting of the Minnesota Dairy show executive committee at the Minneapolis club.

Windom—Large crews of telegraph and telephone line men have been engaged in rebuilding the lines torn down in the storm in this section of the state. It is reported that in this part of Minnesota alone more than 2,000 poles were broken down by the storm and the damage will amount to $100,000.

St. Paul—Minnesota co-operative creameries will be compelled to pay an increase of $250,000 in freight charges on their products, if the proposals of the national perishable freight committee are carried out. H. B. Nickerson, Elk River, president of the Minnesota Co-operative Creamery association, said on his return from the meeting of the committee at Chicago. Mr. Nickerson and D. D. Heaton, director of the dairy marketing department, American Farm Bureau federation, appeared before the committee to protest against these increases. Heretofore, the railroad company paid for the icing of these cars, Mr. Nickerson said.

Thief River Falls—After five hours deliberation the jury in the case of Gundar Gunderson against Ole Uereson returned a verdict for the defendant, finding him not guilty of alienation of affection. Suit for $15,000 had been brought.

Minneapolis—Jealousy of another woman's alleged affections toward her husband was indicated in a note found in the bathrobe worn by Mrs. William Carlson, who committed suicide after shooting Mr. Carlson through the head. Mr. Carlson, although in a serious condition was reported slightly improved at General hospital.

"When the Devil Was Sick—"

Two old gobs had been at odds ever since the day of their enlistment. They were due for discharge within a few days, when one of them was taken seriously ill and the doctors broke the news to him that he had small chance to live. He summoned his old-time enemy to his bedside.

"Mac," he said plaintively, "they tells me I'm goin' to kick over. If I do, will yer fergit our fights and sort of let bygones be bygones?"

"That'll be a'right," said Mac, in great embarrassment.

"And, Mac"—here the old gob's voice grew stronger—"if I ever get well and ye remind me I ever said that, I'll knock that fat wooden block off her shoulders."

PURE WATER WITHOUT COLOR

Has Blue Tint Only When a Large Quantity of It Is Under One's Observation.

Water in its purest state is practically colorless, except that it has a blue tint when a considerable amount of it is viewed together. The water of Loch Katrine in Scotland is nearly pure chemically, although it contains a vey small amount of carboniferous matter, which gives it a faint brown tinge. Water, under some circumstances, looks as if it was full of color, and this happens when light thrown upon it is reflected back again, as in the case of a soap bubble and of a rainbow, the latter being formed of drops of rain that reflect back the sunlight, broken up into its different parts which resemble the colors of a rainbow. Stagnant or "bad" water seems to have colors on it because of the different forms of life growing on its surface and forming layers which reflect the light back and forth. The waves of light interfere with each other and cause colors. Perfectly pure water has a taste from the salts dissolved in it and from the atmospheric gases, nitrogen, oxygen and carbon dioxide which it contains.

Libel on American "Kiddies."

In America children are even more "modern" than they are in this country. Two American children had a very bad effect on a family living quietly in Sussex.

After these two children had gone back to the States, the vicar called and said, quite playfully, to the youngest daughter of the house: "Well, my dear, and what do they call you?"

"Cut that out," was the reply. "I guess you ought to know, Mr. Preacher. You put the christening dope across me."—London Tit-Bits.

THERE WAS THAT POSSIBILITY

And Virginia Lad Might Have Seen Something of the Sort Happen Occasionally.

A Virginian, recently elected judge and feeling keenly the responsibilities of his exalted position, was coming on horseback along a road in a remote section of his district. He saw a smoke on a hillside.

"Boy," he said to a lad who was loafing alongside the road, "is that smoke up there from a still?"

"Yes, sir, I reckon it is," the boy replied.

"What are they making up there?"

"Might be makin' some apple brandy."

The judge jumped from his horse. "Here, boy," he said, "hold this horse. I'm going up there and stop that. They can't flout the law in that manner in my district."

The boy took the reins and the judge climbed the fence and started toward the smoke. After he had gone a few steps the boy shouted.

"Oh mister!"

"What is it?" asked the judge.

"Effen you don't come back, what must I do with the horse?"—Saturday Evening Post.

Too much dignity is dangerous.

Unworthy Son.

A certain senator, who is a close student of American dialects, thought he had detected from the speech of the driver of the coach in which he was driving through the Yellowstone park the region from which the reinsman came.

"You come from Missouri, do you not?" the senator asked.

The driver pulled in his four horses, set his brake with his foot, and turned impressively toward the senator.

"Senator," he said, "my father 'n' mother onct went to Missouri on a visit, and they visited there twenty years. During the time I was born; but I want to tell you right now thet I'm no, derned Missourian!"—Harper's Magazine.

In Doubt.

A clergyman was in the habit of going up to his little girl's bedside each evening and telling her a story before she went to sleep.

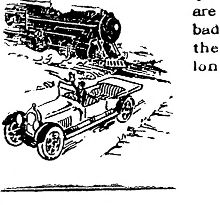
One evening he told her such a thrilling tale that the child sitting up in bed, looked very straight at her father and asked:

"Daddy, is that a true story, or are you preaching?"

Her Case.

"She is perfectly crazy about cake and bread making."

"I see; a regular dough nut."



He beat the train to the crossing a good many times

"It's never touched me yet" he explained when they pointed out the risks

That's the answer a good many people make when they hear that the drug element in tea and coffee often harms nerves and health. They say it's never touched them yet.

Sometimes they only think it hasn't.

Wakeful nights, drowsy days, headaches that keep coming more frequently—often are blamed on bad luck when the blame belongs on bad judgment in taking [illegible] chances with harm.

Over on the safe side is Postum, a pure cereal beverage, delicious and satisfying—containing nothing that can harm nerves or digestion. Thousands who used to try their luck with tea or coffee are enthusiastic over having found safety and satisfaction in Postum.

It's worth your while to make the test with Postum for ten days. Postum is a delightful drink for any member of the family at any meal.

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline—Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

The sacred concert at the Lutheran church will be given next Sunday evening March 19th, by Mr. Melvin Norby of Minneapolis, who comes highly recommended as a singer.

The admission will be 35 cents for adults, and 15 cents for children, one half of which Mr. Norby donates to the church.

Bonds Carry

Fifty two voters took part in the bond election Tuesday, but one of them forgot to vote either way, eight voted against bonds and forty three voted for the bond issue.

The same tax levy that we have for this year, namely $2000.00, will pay the interest on bonds, running expenses of the village and retire the bonds as they become due from year to year.

Two ladies, Mrs. B. Docken and Mrs. Racine Olson served on the election board and they did their work so well that the next election board will probably be entirely made up of women folks.

Rustad-Olson

A quiet wedding ceremony was performed last Tuesday evening at the home of Rev. Raaum when Miss Hellen B. Rusted and John A. Olson were united in holy bonds of matrimony. The couple were attended by the bride's sister and brother, Lillian and Victor. After the ceremony, the wedding party returned to the home of the bride's parents where a delicious repast awaited them. The bride was very prettily gowned in white silk and carried white flowers. She is one of Holt's fine young ladies who possesses a happy and cheerful disposition which is so essential in making a happy home. Mr. Olson is a fine and industrious young man. They will live on the old homestead a mile south from Holt. Their many friends join the News in extending a hearty much joy.

Mrs. Oscar Evenson took her son, Ervin, to Thief River Falls Tuesday to see a physician as he has been on the sick list for a number of days.

Middle River has a good basket ball team and they are coming to Holt Saturday night and will do their best to win a game from our team.

Lost: A straw fork was lost last week Thursday on the mail route between Carl Larson's and T. Sorum's. Finder please notify C. O Saastad.

If the people who have taken Tanlac were to form a line of march in single file, this grand army would reach clear across the American Continent from New York to San Francisco and extend over 3,000 miles into the Pacific Ocean. C. H. Gunheim.

Marshall county is ahead $295,016 under the Babcock plan of building and maintaining trunk highways. Owners of cars and trucks in the county paid $41,560 in taxes on same for the year 1921, and since April 1st, last year $336,576 has been used on the trunk highways in the county. No county or town funds are included.

Commissioner Babcock said this was made possible by the federal highway aid and reimbursement bond funds which totaled more than double the amount of the 1921 motor vehicle taxes.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hesitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN 1/6c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

The ORIOLE

THE SECRET.

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its beauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Miss Atwater's openly expressed disapproval, by Master Herbert Atwater and Henry Rooter. Patty is delighted. Florence stays aloof.

At times the noted eyes of Atwater & Rooter were gentled o'er with the soft cast of enchantment, especially when Patty felt called upon to reprove the two with little coquetries of slaps and pushes. Noted for her sprightliness, she was never sprightlier; her pretty laughter footed continuously and the gentlemen accompanied with doting sounds so repulsive to Florence that without being actively conscious of what she did, she embodied the phrase, "perfectly sickening" in the hymn she was crooning, and repeated it over and over to the air of "Rock of Ages."

"Now I tell you what let's play," the versatile Patty proposed, after exhausting the pleasures of "Geography," "Ghosts," and other tests of intellect. "Let's play 'Truth.' We'll each take a paper and a pencil, and then each of us asks the other one some question, and we haf to write down the answer and sign your name and fold it up so nobody can see it except that one, and we haf to keep it a secret and never tell as long as we live."

"All right," said Henry Rooter. "I'll be the one to ask you a question, Patty."

"No," Herbert said promptly. "I ought to be the one to ask Patty."

"Why ought you?" Henry demanded. "Why ought you?"

"Listen!" Patty cried, "I know the way we'll do. I'll ask each of you a question—we haf to whisper it—and each one of you'll ask me one, and then we'll write it. That'll be simply grand!" she clapped her hands; then checked herself. "Oh, I guess we can't, either. We haven't got any paper and pencils unless—" Here she seemed to recall her hostess. "Oh, Florrie, dear! Run in the house and get us some paper and pencils."

Florence gave no sign other than to increase the loudness of her voice as she sang. "Perf'ly sick'ning, clef for me, let me perf'ly sick-kin-ning!"

"We got plenty," said Herbert, as he and Henry produced pencils and their professional notebooks, and supplied their fair friend and themselves with material for "Truth." "Come on, Patty, whisper me whatever you want to."

"No; I ought to have her whisper me first," Henry Rooter objected. "I'll write the answer to any question; I don't care what it's about."

"Well it's got to be the truth, you know," Patty warned them. "We all haf to write down just exackly the truth on our word of honor and sign our name. Promise?"

"All right," said Patty. "Now I'll whisper Henry a question first, and then you can whisper yours to me first, Herbert."

This seemed to fill all needs happily, and the whispering and writing began, and continued with a coziness little to the taste of the piously singing Florence. She altered all previous opinions of her friend Patty, and when the latter finally closed the session on the steps and announced that she must go home, the hostess declined to accompany her into the house to help her find where she had left her hat and wrap.

"I haven't the least idea where I took 'em off," Patty declared in the airiest manner. "If you won't come with me, Florrie, s'pose you just call in the front door and tell your mother to get 'em for me."

"Oh, they're somewhere in there," said Florence coldly, not ceasing to swing her foot and not turning her head. "You can find 'em by yourself, I presume, or if you can't I'll have our maid throw 'em out in the yard, or somep'm tomorrow."

"Well, thank you!" Miss Fairchild rejoined, as she entered the house.

The two boys stood waiting, having in mind to go with Patty as far as her own gate. "That's a pretty way to speak to company!" Herbert addressed his cousin with heavily marked severity. "Next time you do anything like that I'll march straight in the house and inform your mother of the fact."

Florence still swung her foot and looked dreamily away. She sang, to the air of "Rock of Ages":

"Henry Rooter—Herbert, too—they make me sick—that's what they do!"

However, they were only too well prepared with their annihilating response.

"Oh, say not so! Florence, say not so! Florence, say not so!"

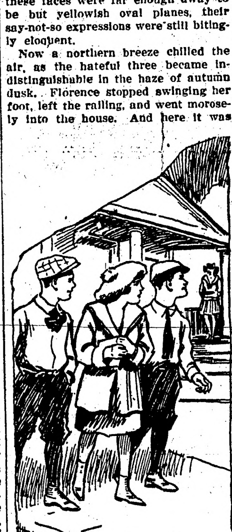
They even sent this same odious refrain back to her from the street, as they departed with their lovely companion; and, so tenuous is feminine loyalty, sometimes, under these stresses, Miss Fairchild mingled her sweet, tantalizing young soprano with their changing and cackling falsetto.

"Say not so, Florence! Oh, say not so! Say not so!"

PART TWO

They went satirically down the street, their chumminess with one another bountifully increased by their common derision of the outsider on the porch: and even at a distance they still contrived to make themselves intolerable; looking back over their shoulders, at intervals, with say-not-so expressions on their faces. Even when these faces were far enough away to be but yellowish oval planes, their say-not-so expressions were still bitingly eloquent.

Now a northern breeze chilled the air, as the hateful three became indistinguishable in the haze of autumn dusk. Florence stopped swinging her foot, left the railing, and went morosely into the house. And here it was her fortune to make two discoveries vital to her present career; the first arising out of a conversation between her father and mother in the library, where a gossipy fire of soft coal encouraged this proper Sunday afternoon entertainment for man and wife.



"Say Not So, Florence! Oh, Say Not So! Say Not So!"

"Sit down and rest awhile," said her mother. "I'm afraid you play too hard when Patty and the boys are here. Do sit down quietly and rest yourself a little while." And as Florence obeyed, Mrs. Atwater turned to her husband, resuming, "Well that's what I said. I told Aunt Carrie I thought the same way about it that you did. Of course, nobody ever knows what Julia's going to do next, and nobody needs to be surprised at anything she does do. Ever since she came home from school about four-fifths of all the young men in town have been wild about her—and so's every old bachelor, for the matter of that!"

"Yes," Mr. Atwater added. "Every old widower, too."

His wife warmly accepted the amendment. "And every old widower, too," she said, nodding. "Rather! And of course Julia's done exactly as she pleased about everything and naturally she's going to do as she pleases about this."

"Well, of course, it is her own affair, Mollie," Mr. Atwater said, mildly. "She couldn't be expected to consult the whole Atwater family connection before—"

"Oh, no," she agreed, "I don't say she could. Still, it is rather upsetting, coming so suddenly like this, when not one of the family have ever seen him—never even heard his very name before."

"Well, that part of it isn't especially strange, Mollie—when he was born and brought up in a town three hundred miles from here. I don't see just how we could have heard his name—unless he visited here, or got into the papers in some way."

Mrs. Atwater seemed unwilling to yield a mysterious point. She rocked decorously in her chair, shook her head, and after setting her lips rigidly, opened them to insist that she could never change her mind: Julia had acted very abruptly. "Why couldn't she have let her poor father know, at least a few days before she did?"

Mr. Atwater sighed. "Why, she explains in her letter that she only knew it, herself, an hour before she wrote."

"Her poor father!" his wife repeated commiseratingly.

"Why, Mollie, I don't see that father's especially to be pitied."

"Don't you?" said Mrs. Atwater. "That old man, to have to live in that big house all alone, except a few negro servants?"

"Why, no! About half the houses in the neighborhood, up and down the street, are fully occupied by close relatives of his; I doubt if he'll be really as lonely as he'd like to be. And he's often said he'd give a great deal if Julia had been a plain, unpopular girl. I'm strongly of the opinion, myself, that he'll be pleased about this. Of course it may upset him a little, just at first."

"Yes; I think it will!" Mrs. Atwater shook her head forebodingly. "And he isn't the only one it's going to upset."

"No, he isn't," her husband admitted, seriously. "That's always been the trouble with Julia; she never could bear to seem disappointing; and so, of course, I suppose every one of 'em had a special idea that he was really about the top of the list with her."

"Every last one of 'em was positive of it," said Mrs. Atwater. "That was Julia's way with 'em!"

"Yes, Julia's always been much too kind-hearted for other people's good!" Thus Mr. Atwater summed up—and he was this Julia's brother. Additionally, since he was the older, he had known her since her birth.

"If you ask me," said his wife, "I'll really be surprised if it all goes through without a suicide."

"Oh, not quite suicide, perhaps," Mr. Atwater protested. "I'm glad it's a dry state, though!"

She failed to fathom his simple meaning. "Why?"

"Well, some of 'em might feel that desperate at least," he explained. "Prohibition's a safeguard for the disappointed in love."

This phrase and a previous one stirred Florence, who had been sitting quietly, according to request, and "resting"; but not resting her curiosity. "Who's disappointed in love, papa?" she inquired with an explosive eagerness which slightly startled her preoccupied parents. "What is all this about Aunt Julia, and Grandpa goin' to live alone, and people committing suicide and prohibition and every thing? What is all this, mama?"

"Nothing, Florence."

"Nothing! That's what you always say about the very most interesting things that happen in the whole family! What is all this, papa?"

"It's nothing that would be interesting to little girls, Florence. Merely some family matters."

"My goodness!" Florence exclaimed. "I'm not a 'little girl' any more, papa! You're always forgetting my age! And if it's a family matter I belong to the family, I guess, about as much as anybody else, don't I? Grandpa himself isn't any more one of the family than I am. I don't care how old he is!"

This was undeniable, and her father laughed. "It's really nothing you'd care about one way or the other," he said.

"Well, I'd care about it if it's a secret," Florence insisted. "If it's a secret I'd want to know it whatever it's about."

"Oh, it isn't a secret, particularly, I suppose. At least, it's not to be made public for a time; it's only to be known in the family."

"Well, didn't I just prove I'm as much o' the family as—"

"Never mind," her father said soothingly. "I don't suppose there's any harm in your knowing it—if you won't go telling everybody. Your aunt Julia has just written us that she's engaged."

Mrs. Atwater uttered an exclamation, but she was too late to check him.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"I'm afraid you oughtn't to have told Florence. She isn't just the most discreet—"

"Pshaw!" he laughed. "She certainly is one of the family, however, and Julia wrote that all of the family might be told. You'll not speak of it outside the family, will you, Florence?"

But Florence was not yet able to speak of it, even inside the family—so surprising, sometimes, are parents' theories of what will not interest their children. She sat staring, her mouth open, her throat closed; and in the uncertain illumination of the room these symptoms of her emotional condition went unobserved.

Aha! Fortune throws in Miss Atwater's way a sure instrument of revenge!

NERVOUS AND HALF-SICK WOMEN

These Letters Recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Will Interest You

For Your Own Good Please Read Them

Youngstown, Ohio.—"Last fall I began to feel mean and my back hurt me and I could hardly do my little bit of housework. I was played out when I would just sweep one room and would have to rest. I would have to put a cushion behind me when I would sit down and at night I could not sleep unless I had something under my back. I had awful cramps every month and was just nearly all in. Finally my husband said to me one day, 'Why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine?' and I said, 'I am willing to take anything if I could get well again.' So I took one bottle and a second one and felt better and the neighbors asked me what I was doing and said, 'Surely it must be doing you good all right.' I have just finished my eighth bottle and I cannot express to you how I feel, the way I would like to. If you can use this letter you are welcome to it and if any woman does not believe what I have written to be true, she can write to me and I will describe my condition to her as I have to you."—Mrs. ELMER HEASLEY, 141 S. Jackson St., Youngstown, Ohio.

"I was very nervous and run-down," writes Mrs. L. E. Wiese of 706 Louisa St., New Orleans, La. "I would often sit down and cry, and was always blue and had no ambition. I was this way for over a year and had allowed myself to get into quite a serious condition. One day I saw your advertisement in the daily paper and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once. I have improved ever since taking the third bottle and find it is the best medicine I have ever taken."

Benefited by First Bottle

"I was completely run down and not able to do my housework. I just dragged myself around and did not have energy to get up when once I sat down. I read advertisements of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in our paper 'The Indiana Daily Times,' and learned all about it. I received results from the very first bottle and now I am doing all my own work, even washing and ironing, and I never felt better in my life. I tell all my friends it is due to you."—Mrs. ELIZABETH REINBOLD, 403 N. Pine St., Indianapolis, Indiana.

You should pay heed to the experiences of these women. They know how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound, and afterwards, too. Their words are true.

Holy City in Early Days.

Ancient Jerusalem stood on four hills, now almost entirely molded together, and the intervening valleys filled with debris. Mount Zion is that height on the southwest, the city of David, made conspicuous today by the towers of the German ecclesiastical buildings for which the former kaiser gave the land. Mount Moriah is on the east, the site of Solomon's temple, separated from Mount Zion by the valley of the Tyropoeon, Mount Bezetha is on the north and Mount Akra on the northwest, the two latter representing the crowded quarters of the modern city.

Mohammed in Court.

It was in a court of law, and a witness was being cross-examined.

Said Counsel—Why do you assert that the plaintiff is insane?

Witness—Because he goes about declaring he is the prophet Mohammed.

Counsel—And do you consider that clear proof of his insanity?

Witness—I do.

Counsel—Why?

"Because," answered the witness, with a complacent smile, "I am the prophet Mohammed myself."—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Co-Operation.

Mrs. Worth had just learned that her negro workwoman, Aunt Dinah, had, at the age of seventy, married for the fourth time.

"Why, Aunt Dinah," she exclaimed, "you surely haven't married again!"

"Yassum, honey, I has," was Aunt Dinah's smiling reply. "Jes' as of'en as de Lawd takes 'em so will I."—The Argonaut.

A Guilty Conscience.

"You look troubled, Zeke," remarked Squire Witherbee.

"I am that, 'Squire," said Chiggerville's best-known loafer. "I've been down to th' gospel tent hearin' that new sawdust evangelist preach on th' sin of idleness. Before th' feller got through, dog my cats if I didn't think he was personally acquainted with me!"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

GAVE HIS NAME TO CALENDAR

Of all the long list of popes, Gregory XIII has probably left the most lasting monument, for he framed the calendar we use today, and it still bears his name. Gregory completed his calendar in 1582.

In more modern times a pope of outstanding personality was Pius IX, who in 1846 broke the age-old tradition that the pope should never preach a sermon. It happened in this way. A famous preacher of the time, Padre Ventura, whose eloquence attracted great crowds, had arranged to preach at a church in Rome, but at the last moment he was taken ill and the disappointed people were about to disperse when suddenly the bells rang and it was announced that the sovereign pontiff had arrived in the church. The pope entered the pulpit and preached a sermon which the historian of the time has described as a "simple, good, plain sermon, easily intelligible to all." It was the first time a pope had preached for 300 years.

GOT BACK AT "BR'ER SIMCOX"

Fool Question Met Merited Rebuke From Colored Preacher—Surely Right on One Point.

Bishop Candler, of Atlanta, was condemning a certain theological controversy.

"Such idle controversies," he said, "remind me of the colored preacher who began a sermon with the words:

"'Breddern and sistern, when de fust man, Adam, was created, he was made outer wet clay and set up agin de palin's to dry.'

"A member rose in the back of the church.

"'Pawson,' he said, incredulously, 'does yo ser'ously state dat Adam was made outer wet clay and set up agin de palin's to dry?'

"'Dem's mah words, Br'er Simcox. Dem's mah words!'

"'Den, pawson, who made de palin's?'

"'Br'er Simcox, set down,' said the parson severly. 'Such fool questions as yourn would upset any system of theology.'"

Did you ever try Grape-Nuts with stewed prunes or peaches?

THERE isn't anything better for breakfast or lunch than a dish of Grape-Nuts, with cream or milk, and stewed prunes or peaches.

This delicious combination gives you the elements of a well-balanced food. For it contains not only the material needed to build tissue and furnish energy, but it also supplies fruit acids, that help keep the system in good order.

Go to your grocer today and order a package of delicious Grape-Nuts. You will find that it will digest more readily than most other cereals, and it will "stay by" you longer—because it's so richly nourishing.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Lake City—A mass meeting to consider a complete sewerage system for the entire city to cost approximately $200,000 to be constructed this year will be conducted here March 15.

Pipestone, Minn.—The congregation of the First Baptist church of Pipestone has extended a unanimous call to the Rev. C. O. Loken, of St. Paul, to become pastor of the local church.

Red Wing.—Births in Goodhue county in 1921 almost doubled the deaths, ther being 637 births and 350 deaths. In Red Wing there were 251 births and 131 deaths reported for the year.

Moorhead.—St. Olaf college debaters defeated the Concordia college team here, debating the "open shop" issue. St. Olaf upheld the proposition that the "open shop" is better for labor and employer.

White Bear—White Bear will have a special village election March 30 to decide the contest for mayor, which resulted in a tie vote at the regular village election last Tuesday. Earl F. Jackson and Peter Fournelle each polled 348 votes.

St. Paul—It cost Minneosta $81,411.21 to maintain the National Guard troops at South St. Paul to guard the property of the stock yards and the packing plants during the strike of packing plant employes, Adjutant General W. R. Rhinow said.

Luverne—Farm tenants in this locality who have hoped to get farms for the coming season at more favorable terms were disappointed March 1. The prices still remain high and many have been compelled to hold closing out sales and seek new territory.

Worthington.—In reply to an invitation sent to Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., to be the honored guest and speaker here on Independence day, he has replied that it will be impossible for him to come here, as he desires to follow an established custom of speaking at Oyster Bay on July 4.

St. Paul—Governor J. A. O. Preus appointed John Coleman, of the board of control; N. J. Holmberg, commissioner of agriculture; Dean W. C. Coffey, University Farm school; Oscar Smith, commissioner of immigration, and J. H. Mullen, deputy highway commissioner, as members of a committee to have charge of centralizing state exhibits for the State fair.

St. Paul.—Resolutions asking Governor Preus to dismiss Chris Heen, state dairy and food commissioner, and to appoint in his place a man "who can and will work in harmony with the other departments of the state in the best interests of co-operative marketing, were presented at the first annual meeting of the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries Association, Inc., being held in St. Paul.

St. Paul.—Thousands of evergreen trees for Arbor day planting are to be given to Minnesota schools by the division of forestry of the University of Minnesota, according to announcement from the University farm. Each school may have 25 small evergreens by a request to the assistant superintendent of the forest experiment station at the University farm, if the request is accompanied by 25 cents to cover the cost of digging, packing and shipping. The evergreens are to be shipped from the nursery at Cloquet in time for planting on Arbor day. Requests for the trees must be at the University farm by April 1.

St. Paul—According to the report of Paul H. Kirk, statistician for the Minnesota Co-operative Reporting Service, United States Bureau of Markets and Crop Estimates and the Minnesota State Department of Agriculture, there were on Minnesota farms March 1, 1922, 50,582,000 bushels of corn, 6,233,000 bushels of wheat, 38,612,000 bushels of oats and 5,493,000 bushels of barley. The report shows that 36% of the 1921 corn crop was still on farms. The two factors influencing this large reserve were the comparatively low price and the bumper crop of 1921, which was the largest ever produced. The corn reserves on farms March 1st last year were only 28% of the total crop, or 34,524,000 bushels. The per cent of the 1921 crop which was merchantable is very high this year, 93% compared to 89% one year ago. The reason given in the report is because practically all of the 1921 crop matured and, therefore, could be classed as merchantable corn.

Minneapolis.—One Negro bandit is in the morgue and another in the city jail because they chose for their victim a detective fully prepared to cope with them instead of the unarmed pedestrian they took him for. The dead Negro is Frank Barrock, also known as Smith, and the other is Horace Giles.

Duluth.—Kasper Sokolinski, Polish priest, who was convicted after a second trial on a charge of second degree grand larceny, was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term at Stillwater by Judge Bert Feeler in district court here.

MOTHER! MOVE CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Hurry, mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Prehistoric Ruins.

The fascinating interest of the ancient ruins in Rhodesia, South Africa, drew the attention of the archeologists of the British association during its recent meetings at Cape Town. Among these ruins the most conspicuous is the great Zimbabwe temple, which lies about 200 miles inland from the Indian ocean. The oldest of the ruined buildings are believed to date back at least to the days of King Solomon. It is thought that they were constructed by Semitic colonists, whose chief object was gold mining, and who have left indications of their worship of Baal and Ashtaroth, as described in the Bible. Experts believe that precious metals to the value of $3,000,000 or $4,000,000 must have been extracted from the gold reefs of Rhodesia in ancient times.

Just look at the picture above! Can you see any objects in it whose names start with the letter "B"? There are some there all right. Barrel, boy, bone, bicycle, broom, bench and boots. How many more can you find? It's loads of fun to find them. Get the family together right away and see who can find the most.

THIS IS NOT A SUBSCRIPTION CONTEST

Big Prizes—Little Effort—Loads of Fun

Could you imagine a better combination? Big Prizes, little effort and loads of fun. Just think of it. Study the picture and the rules carefully, then make out your list of words.

You don't have to turn the picture upside down or around. All of the objects are plainly visible.

There are 30 Big Prizes which will be awarded to the people sending in the 30 nearest correct lists.

The judges of this puzzle game will be well known men of Minneapolis, selected because of their reputation for honesty and integrity. Their high standing in Minneapolis business and professional life is your assurance of a fair consideration of your efforts.

Observe These Rules

1. Any man, woman or child living in Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Wisconsin, Northern Michigan, Montana and Nebraska, but outside of Minneapolis and St. Paul, who is not an employe of The Minneapolis Daily News, may submit an answer.

2. All answers must be mailed by postoffice closing time April 6th, and all subscriptions must be mailed not later than April 20th, 1922.

3. All lists of names should be on one side of the paper only and numbered consecutively. Write your full name and address on each page in the upper right-hand corner. If you desire to write anything use a separate sheet of paper.

4. Only such words as appear in the English dictionary will be counted. Where the plural is used the singular cannot be counted and vice versa.

5. Words of the same spelling can be used only once, even though used to designate different objects or articles. An object or article can be named only once.

6. Do not use obsolete, archaic or hyphenated words, nor any compound word formed of two or more words where each word is in itself an object.

7. The answer having the nearest correct list of names of visible objects or articles shown in the picture that begin with the letter "B" will be awarded first prize, etc. Neatness, style or handwriting have no bearing on deciding the winners.

8. More than one member of a family may compete, but only one prize will be awarded to any one household, nor will prizes be awarded to more than one of any group outside of the family where two or more have been working together.

9. Three Minneapolis business and professional men, having no connection with The Minneapolis Daily News, will be selected to act as judges and they, not the Puzzle Editor or anyone connected with The Minneapolis Daily News, will decide on the winners. Participants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final and conclusive.

10. All answers will receive the same consideration, regardless of whether or not a subscription for The Minneapolis Daily News is sent in.

11. The announcement of the prize winners and the correct list of words will be published in The Minneapolis Daily News in the earliest possible edition following the conclusion of the contest.

12. In case of a tie for any of the prizes, the full amount of such prize will be awarded to each person just as if there were no tie.

How You Can Win

The biggest and best part of this Minneapolis Daily News Fun Game and Booster Campaign is the easy way you can qualify for the Big Cash Prizes.

It is our aim to have everybody know what a splendid paper The Minneapolis Daily News is and we are willing to pay big rewards to the people who help us advertise. That is what we will do for you.

Just go around among your friends and neighbors and secure two (2) subscriptions to our paper for one year at $4.50 (making $9.00 in all). Send these in to us and your answer will be qualified and you will be right in line for the Big First Prize of $1,000. If you send in just one subscription to The Minneapolis Daily News at $4.50, you will be qualified for the $500.00 prize.

Take advantage of this "big chance." Send in your answer AND QUALIFY IT.

$2,500.00 IN 30 BIG PRIZES.

Winning answers will receive cash prizes according to the Table below.

	When No Subscriptions Are Sent	When One Subscription Is Sent	When Two Subscriptions Are Sent
1st Prize	$20.00	$500.00	$1,000.00
2nd Prize	10.00	250.00	500.00
3rd Prize	5.00	125.00	300.00
4th Prize	5.00	60.00	200.00
5th Prize	5.00	50.00	100.00
6th Prize	3.00	40.00	75.00

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 400 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline--Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Whoever thot of planting corn for snow fences? Experiments the past winter have proven that a dozen rows of corn stocks left standing 50 to 100 foot back from the road will effectually block the snow and keep the roads open all winter for travel. Its worth trying out any where in the state.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Sold by druggists for over 40 Years.

Minnesota has 82 Holstein cows that are producing more than 1000 pounds of butter in yearly tests, besides several Guernseys and Jerseys with like records. Ohio comes second with 79 Holsteins in this class In 1915 Minnesota had only 1000 pound cow and was at the foot of the class. The development of testing and breeding has put our state at the head of the dairy class.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hesitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working day of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

TECKTONIUS SILO

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

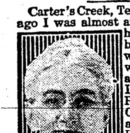
SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman



Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help other women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. We believe it will help you greatly, for it has helped others.

"PRETTY EYES."

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its bauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild, pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Florence's openly expressed disapproval, by Herbert and Henry. Florence will not play. Patty and the visitors indulge in a series of innocent Sunday games. Among them is one called "Truth," the feature of which is a contract to write a question and answer, both to be kept a profound secret. The agreement is duly carried out.

—7—

"I say you won't speak of Julia's engagement outside the family, will you, Florence?"

"Papa!" she gasped. "Did Aunt Julia write she was engaged?"

"Yes."

"To get married?"

"It would seem so."

"To who?"

"To whom, Florence," her mother suggested primly.

"Mama!" the daughter cried. "Who's Aunt Julia engaged to get married to? Noble Dill?"

"Good gracious, no!" Mrs. Atwater exclaimed. "What an absurd idea! It's to a young man in the place she's visiting—a stranger to all of us. Julia only met him a few weeks ago." Here she forgot Florence, and turned again to her husband, wearing her former expression of experienced foreboding. "It's just as I said. It's exactly like Julia to do such a reckless thing!"

"But we don't know anything at all about the young man," he remonstrated.

"How do you even know he's young?" Mrs. Atwater asked crisply. "All in the world she said about him was that he's a lawyer. He may be a widower, for all we know, or divorced, with seven or eight children."

"Oh, no, Mollie!"

"Why, he might!" she insisted. "For all we know, he may be a widower for the third or fourth time, or divorced, with any number of children. If such a person proposed to Julia, you know yourself she'd hate to be disappointing!"

Her husband laughed. "I don't think she'd go so far as to actually accept such a person and write home to announce her engagement to the family. I suppose most of her swains here have been in the habit of proposing to her just as frequently as she was unable to prevent them from going that far; and while I don't think she's been as discouraging with them as she might have been, she's never really accepted any of 'em. She's never been engaged before."

"No," Mrs. Atwater admitted, "Not to this extent. She's never announced it to the family before."

"Well, I'd hate to have Julia's job when she comes back!" Julia's brother said ruefully.

"What's that?"

"Breaking it to her 'admirers.'"

"Oh, she isn't going to do that!"

"She'll have to, now," he said. "She'll either have to write the news to 'em, or else tell 'em, face to face, when she comes home."

"She won't do either."

"Why, how could she get out of it?"

His wife smiled pityingly. "She hasn't set a time for coming home, has she? Don't you know enough of Julia's ways to know she'll never in the world stand up to the music? She writes that all the family can be told, because she knows the news will leak out here and there, in confidence, little by little; so by the time she gets home they'll all have been through their first spasms, and after that she hopes they'll just send her some forgiving flowers and greet her with manly handclasps—and get ready to usher at the wedding!"

"Well," said Mr. Atwater, "I'm afraid you're right. It does seem rather like Julia to stay away till the first of the worst is over. I'm really sorry for some of her love-lorners. I suppose it will get whispered about, and they'll hear it; and there are some of the poor things that might take it pretty hard."

"Take it pretty hard!" she echoed loudly. "There's one of 'em, at least, who will just merely lose his reason!"

"Which one?"

"Noble Dill."

At this, the slender form of Florence underwent a spasmodic seizure, in her chair, but as the fit was short, and also noiseless, it passed without being noticed.

"Yes," said Mr. Atwater, thoughtfully. "I suppose he will."

"He certainly will!" Mrs. Atwater declared. "Noble's mother told me last week that he'd gotten so he was just as liable to drop a fountain-pen in his coffee as a lump of sugar; and when any one speaks to him he either doesn't know it, or else jumps. When he says anything, himself, she says they can scarcely ever make out what he's talking about. He was trying enough before Julia went away; but since she's been gone Mrs. Dill says he's like nothing in her experience. She says he doesn't inherit it; Mr. Dill wasn't anything like this about her."

"No," said his wife. "She was quite a sensible girl. I'd hate to be in her place, now, though, when she tells Noble about this!"

"How can Mrs. Dill tell him, since she doesn't know it herself?"

"Well—perhaps she ought to know it, so that she could tell him. Somebody ought to tell him, and it ought to be done with the greatest tact. It ought to be broken to him with the most delicate care and sympathy, or the consequences—"

"Nobody could foretell the consequences," her husband interrupted—"no matter how tactfully it's broken to Noble."

"No," she said. "I suppose that's true. I think he's likely to lose his reason unless it is done very tactfully, though."

"Do' you think we really ought to tell Mrs. Dill, Mollie? I mean, seriously: Do you?"

For some moments she considered his question; then answered, "No. It's possible we'd be following a Christian course in doing it; but still we're rather bound not to speak of it outside the family, and when it does get outside the family I think we'd better not be the ones responsible—especially since it might easily be traced to us. I think it's usually better to keep out of things when there's any doubt."

"Yes," he said, meditating. "I never knew any harm to come off people's sticking to their own affairs."

But as he and his wife became silent for a time, musing in the firelight, their daughter's special convictions were far from coinciding with theirs, although she, likewise, was silent—a strangeness in her which they should have observed. But so far were they from a true comprehension of her, they were unaware that she had more than a casual, young-cousinly interest in Julia Atwater's engagement and in those possible consequences to Noble Dill, which they had sketched with some intentional exaggeration, and decidedly without the staggering seriousness attributed to their predictions by their daughter. They did not even notice her expression when Mr. Atwater snapped on the light, in order to read, and she went quietly out of the library and up to her own room.

On the floor, near h. bed, where Patty Fairchild had left her coat and hat, Florence made her second discovery. Two small, folded slips of paper lay there, dropped by Miss Fairchild when she put on her coat in the darkening room. They were the replies to Patty's whispered questions, in the game on the steps—the pledged Truth, written by Henry Rooter and Herbert Atwater on their sacred words and honors. The infatuated pair had either overestimated Patty's caution, or else each had thought she would so prize his little missive that she would treasure it in a tender safety, perhaps pinned upon her blouse (at the first opportunity) over the heart. It is positively safe to say that neither of the two veracities would ever have been set upon paper had Herbert and Henry any foreshadowing that Patty might be careless; and the partners would have been seized with the utmost horror could they have conceived the possibility of their trustful messages ever falling into the hands of the relentless creature who now, without an instant's honorable hesitation, unfolded and read them.

"Yes, if I got to tell the truth, I know I have got pretty eyes," Herbert had unfortunately written. "I am glad you think so, too, Patty, because your eyes are too. Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr."

And Mr. Henry Rooter had likewise ruined himself in a coincidental manner.

"Well, Patty, my eyes are pretty, but suppose I would like to trade with yours because you have beautiful eyes, also, sure as my name is Henry Rooter."

But What Eventually Engrossed Her Mind Was the Thought of Wallie Torbin.

Florence stood close to the pink-shaded electric droplight over her small white dressing table, reading again and again these pathetically honest little confidences. Her eyelids were withdrawn to an unprecedented retirement, so remarkably she stared, while her mouth seemed to prepare itself for the attempted reception of a bulk beyond its total capacity. And these plastic tokens, so immoderate as to be ordinarily the consequence of nothing short of poignant horror, were overlaid by others, subtler and more gleaming, which wrought the true significance of the contortion—a joy that was dumfounding.

Her thoughts were first of Fortune's kindness in selecting her for a favor so miraculously dovetailing into the precise need of her life, then of Henry and Herbert, each at this hour probably brushing his hair in preparation for the Sunday evening meal, and both touchingly unconscious of the calamity now befalling them; but what eventually engrossed her mind was the thought of Wallie Torbin.

Master Torbin, approaching fourteen, was in all the town the boy most dreaded by his fellow-boys, and by girls of his acquaintance, including many of both sexes who knew him only by sight—and hearing. He had no physical endowment or attainment worth mention; but boys, who could "whip him with one hand," became sycophants in his presence; the terror he inspired was moral. He had a special overdevelopment of a faculty exercised clumsily enough by most human beings, especially in their youth; in other words, he had genius—not, however, genius having to do with anything generally recognized as art or science. True, if he had been a violinist prodigy or mathematical prodigy, he would have had some respect from his fellows—about equal to that he might have received if he were gifted with some pleasant deformity, such as six toes on a foot—but he would never have enjoyed such deadly prestige as had actually come to be his. In brief, then, Wallie Torbin had a genius for mockery.

Almost from his babyhood he had been a child of one purpose: to increase by ghastly burlesque the sufferings of unfortunate friends. If one of them wept, Wallie incessantly pursued him, yelping in horrid mimicry; if one were chastised, he could not appear out-of-doors for days except to encounter Wallie and a complete rehearsal of the recent agony. "Quit, papa; pah-puh, quee-yet! I'll never do it again, pah-puh! Oh, lemme alone, pah-puh!"

"I may have a slight surprise for you."

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Trosky—Bonds of $10,000 were voted at the village election here for fire fighting apparatus and the construction of a waterworks system.

St. Cloud—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bell, for almost 40 years prominent residents of Sauk Rapids, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Brookston—A lucky draw from the ballot box gave Tom Flynn the election over C. Watson as trustee of the village of Brookston for three years.

Biwabik—In the largest vote ever recorded at a village election here, G. H. Lommen was chosen mayor over Grover C. Helsel by a vote of 350 to 280.

Virginia—Harry L. Burns, on behalf of himself and others has started injunction proceedings against the city of Eveleth to restrain it from issuing $300,000 in refunding bonds.

Sleepy Eye—Prompt work on the part of firemen saved the lives of five persons when flames cut off their only escape down a stairway from the second floor of a store building.

Rochester—Rochester is to have an addition to its postoffice, amounting to one-third of its present size, according to word received here from Dr. Hubert Work, postmaster general.

Fertile—Sunday movies in Fertile will be no more unless the voters rescind their action taken at the spring election Tuesday. The vote was 223 to 64 against the Sunday movie issue.

Gaylord—A. H. Kuehner was re-elected mayor of Gaylord at the annual election. E. R. Gladitsch was selected as trustee, and I. M. Nelson as clerk. The voters favored the purchase of a fire truck.

Worthington—F. H. Densmore, publisher of the Wilmot Tribune, has received a temporary appointment as postmaster at Wilmot, and Postmaster Hannon has turned the affairs of the office over to him.

Minneapolis—Needs and desires of every war veteran in Minnesota will be compiled through an intensive canvass of the entire state which began throughout Minnesota under the direction of the American Legion.

Renville—Allan Hartman, aged 9, is dead as the result of being kicked in the head by a horse. The boy was attempting to catch a ride on a bobsleigh, when one of the horses hitched to the sleigh became frightened and kicked him.

Waseca—A fire which started from defective wiring in the sheriff's bedroom in the county jail threatened the building with destruction. The prisoners were utilized as a bucket brigade and kept the fire in check until the department arrived.

Ottertail—Della Sarnie, purebred Guernsey cow owned by Henry Bartels has set an unusual record, being the mother of seven calves although only 4 years old. The cow gave birth to calves the first two years, then twins were born and then triplets.

Minneapolis—Charles S. Sedgwick, architect, designer of the Westminster Presbyterian church, the old Y. M. C. A., the Dayton store building, and many other churches, business blocks and residences of the city, died at St. Barnabas hospital. He was 66 years old.

Montevideo—Three Elbow Lake boys were committed to the state reformatory at Red Wing, after having confessed to robbing half a dozen Elbow Lake business places. Two of the trio went to Red Wing for the first time, but the third was taken back for breaking his parole from the institution.

St. Paul—Planting of shelterbelts of trees throughout Minnesota, to serve as "live snow fences" to prevent repetition of the recent snow blockades of railways and roads, was urged by W. T. Cox, state forester. A plantation of trees six or eight rows wide, placed at a proper distance from the railroad cuts, would so control the drifting snow as to leave tracks practically clear, he declared.

Brewster — Miss Mabel Hansen, member of the civics class in the local high school, shot one of her feet almost off while the members of the class were studying sound waves. A shotgun was being used to produce the sound and Miss Hansen was selected to shoot the firearm. Thinking it was loaded with a blank shell, the girl shot towards the floor. A regularly loaded shell was in the gun and the shot passed through her foot and ankle.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

What Are Symbreals?

The novel of the future, according to Shaw Desmond, will be like his novels, not a novel at all but a symbreal. Mr. Desmond goes on in highly technical and polysyllable terms to define what a symbreal is, comparing it to a kaleidoscope, and to a many-faceted diamond, but dis'egarding the spelling, one is very likely to think the name originated with the tinkling symbol and that the great difference lies in the introduction of one syllable for euphony's sake.

GRAIN GROWERS HOLD MEETING

Wheat GroWers Organization Also Hold Convention Many Members Preseut.

PUBLIC ARE INVITED

The First Annual Meeting of the U. S Grain Growers, Inc., Meet in Chicago—50,000 Members Present.

Chicago.—Representatives of more than 50,000 members of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., will meet here for the first annual convention of the organization.

Delegates to the gathering were elected in 47 congressional districts in 11 midwestern states last month, and each delegate will carry the combined voting strength of the territory he represents.

The meeting of the co-operative marketing organization, which came into being in April, 1921, when the national marketing plan outlined by the Committee of Seventeen appointed by President Howard of the American Farm Bureau federation, was adopted, will be open, it was stated, although previously it had been reported that the gathering would be behind closed doors.

Wheat Growers Meet Also.

While the grain growers are in convention, a committee representing the American Wheat Growers' association, another co-operative marketing organization, will be in session here to make final plans to set up the operating machinery and to submit the tentative program to Aaron Sapiro, of San Francisco, general counsel. Mr. Sapiro telegraphed that he would be delayed in reaching Chicago and members of the committee plan to remain here until he arrives.

The American Wheat Growers, Associated, formed by representatives of the Northwest Wheat Growers, Associated, and the National Wheat Growers' association, is 100 per cent a pooling organization and according to W. C. Lansdon, Salina, Kan., a member of the committee, the association expects to start operations in ten states by May 1. The tentative plans call for three zones, the northwest, in which the Northwest Wheat Growers, Associated, already is in operation, the north central with headquarters at Minneapolis, and the south central with headquarters at Kansas City.

No Prearranged Action.

No official statement has been made as to what question will come before the U. S. Grain Growers meeting. It was stated that the convention would be entirely in the hands of the delegates and that no forecast of possible action could be made.

McCUMBER IN LINE AGAIN

Senator McCumber to Be in Line for Re-election.

Washington.—Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the powerful senate finance committee, formally announced he would seek re-election. In a formal statement McCumber said he would run "in this campaign as in every former, as a straight conservative Republican."

"I am a Republican not a Socialist," McCumber continued, apparently striking at Senator McCumber continued. "True gression, but it must be along those carefully considered and safe lines that lead toward better government and greater happiness and prosperity for all the people."

McCumber said that because of the importance of the tariff bill now pending before the finance committee of which he was chairman, and other vital matters he would have to leave his candidacy largely to the people of the state.

His platform includes lowering of freight rates, securing of better and more stable prices for farm products, extension of co-operative marketing, decreas of interest on farm loans, better understanding and commercial relation with all peoples of the world and tariff protection for the farmer. His announcement follows:

McCumber's Statement.

"I shall be a candidate at the June primary for the Republican nomination for re-election to the position of United States senator. I shall run in this campaign as I have run in every other one, as a straight conservative Republican. As a representative of this agricultural state I have at all times during my political life tried to promote not only the welfare of the State of North Dakota but that of the entire agricultural Northwest.

DOGS GIVEN VICTORIA CROSS

Three Have Been Awarded Highest British Decoration for Bravery in Face of the Enemy.

The English in asking that the Victoria Cross be awarded to the cat which so heroically saved her young during the fire of the Printemps only follow an example given by the queen of England herself. To appreciate the value of this reward we must remember that the Victoria Cross is for a soldier, general or private, the highest military order.

In the last war at the utmost 50 have been awarded. However, several dogs belonging to the British army have received this honor. These were: Bob of the Royal Berkshire, which in the Afghanistan war saved the life of several soldiers; Jack, which accomplished the same feats at the battle of the Alma, and Jerry, the hero of the Crimean war, which received from the city of Dublin a medal and—a dinner. The odds are that the mess made the dog happier than the medal.—New York Tribune.

Without constancy there is neither love, friendship, or virtue in the world.—Addison

Kindness is an instinct—politeness only an art.

HAD NO "COMEBACK" TO THAT

Marine's Winterfield Uniform Scored Heavily on the Khaki Which Started the Controversy.

The marine's three uniforms hung side by side underneath his clothing shelf: one winterfield, one blue and one khaki. Suddenly the khaki uniform grew critical.

"You look pretty green," it said to the winterfield.

The winterfield uniform made no reply.

"And that outfit right next to you must be downhearted—it looks so blue," the khaki uniform went on.

The winterfield then spoke up: "I might be green," it said, "and that outfit right next to me might have the 'blues,' but doggone your hide—you're yellow!"

The khaki uniform piped down.—The Leatherneck.

Proof.

"I am a philosopher," admitted the gentleman whose frontispiece was as elongated and solemn as that of a rare old fiddle.

"What makes you think so?" we skeptically inquired.

"Because," he answered, "although I am aware that I am not appreciated it does not hurt my feelings in the least."—Kansas City Star.

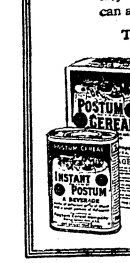
Wishing for sleep is a poor way to get it

A LITTLE wisdom in the daytime is a better assurance of rest than any amount of anxious wishing when nerves are a-jangle at night.

What you do at noon often has more influence on sleep than what you want and hope for, at midnight.

Coffee's drug element, caffeine, whips up the nerves, and when its use is continued there's usually a penalty which no amount of mental effort can avoid.



The part of wisdom, as so many thousands have found, is to turn away from nerve-stimulation and adopt rich, delicious Postum as the mealtime drink. Postum delights the taste, but brings no disturbance to nerves or digestion. Even the little children can share in the enjoyment of Postum at any meal.

It's better to anticipate warnings than to be driven by them.

It's better to encourage and preserve sound nerves and complete health than to listen to the clock ticks at night and say, "I wish!"

You can get Postum wherever good food or drink is sold and served. An order today may be the beginning, for you, of the great satisfaction and comfort which so many others have found in Postum.

Your grocer has both forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

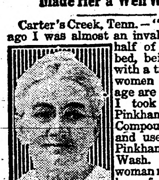
SPENT HALF HER TIME IN BED

Farmer's Wife Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her a Well Woman



Carter's Creek, Tenn.—"Three years ago I was almost an invalid. I spent half of my time in bed, being afflicted with a trouble which women of a certain age are apt to have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. I am a well woman now and have been for two years. I can work as well as any one who is younger and as I am a farmer's wife I have plenty to do for I cultivate my own garden, raise many chickens and do my own housework. You may publish this letter as I am ready to do anything to help other women as I have been so well and happy since my troubles are past."—Mrs. E. T. GALLOWAY, Carter's Creek, Tenn.

Most women find plenty to do. If they are upset with some female ailment and troubled with such symptoms as Mrs. Galloway had, the smallest duty seems a mountain.

If you find it hard to keep up, if you are nervous and irritable, without ambition and out of sorts generally, give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. We believe it will help you greatly, for it has helped others.

"Pat," warned the contractor, "today you became a new employee in this corporation and I want to tell you that all such employees must work quickly and quietly."

"Yis, sor."

"And when I give an order I want it obeyed on the instant."

"Yis, sor."

"And furthermore, I will brook no argument and no back talk."

"Well, don't ye start it then!"

"PRETTY EYES."

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its bauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild, pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Florence's openly expressed disapproval, by Herbert and Henry. Florence will not play. Patty and the visitors indulge in a series of innocent Sunday games. Among them is one called "Truth," the feature of which is a contract to write a question and answer, both to be kept a profound secret. The agreement is duly carried out.

—7—

"I say you won't speak of Julia's engagement outside the family, will you, Florence?"

"Papa!" she gasped. "Did Aunt Julia write she was engaged?"

"Yes."

"To get married?"

"It would seem so."

"To who?"

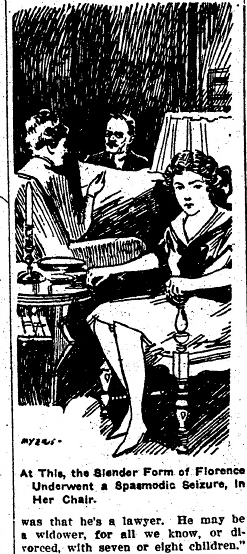
"'To whom,' Florence," her mother suggested primly.

"Mama!" the daughter cried. "Who's Aunt Julia engaged to get married to? Noble Dill?

"Good gracious, no!" Mrs. Atwater exclaimed. "What an absurd idea! It's to a young man in the place she's visiting—a stranger to all of us. Julia only met him a few weeks ago." Here she forgot Florence, and turned again to her husband, wearing her former expression of experienced foreboding. "It's just as I said. It's exactly like Julia to do such a reckless thing!"

"But we don't know anything at all about the young man," he remonstrated.

"How do you even know he's young?" Mrs. Atwater asked crisply. "All in the world she said about him was that he's a lawyer. He may be a widower, for all we know, or divorced, with seven or eight children."



At This, the Slender Form of Florence Underwent a Spasmodic Seizure, in Her Chair.

"Oh, no, Mollie!"

"Why, he might!" she insisted. "For all we know, he may be a widower for the third or fourth time, or divorced, with any number of children. If such a person proposed to Julia, you know yourself she'd hate to be disappointing!"

Her husband laughed. "I don't think she'd go so far as to actually accept such a person and write home to announce her engagement to the family. I suppose most of her swains here have been in the habit of proposing to her just as frequently as she was unable to prevent them from going that far; and while I don't think she's been as discouraging with them as she might have been, she's never really accepted any of 'em. She's never been engaged before."

"No," Mrs. Atwater admitted, "Not to this extent. She's never announced it to the family before."

"Well, I'd hate to have Julia's job when she comes back!" Julia's brother said ruefully.

"What's that?"

"Breaking it to her 'admirers.'"

"Oh, she isn't going to do that!"

"She'll have to, now," he said. "She'll either have to write the news to 'em, or else tell 'em, face to face, when she comes home."

"She won't do either."

"Why, how could she get out of it?"

His wife smiled pityingly. "She hasn't set a time for coming home, has she? Don't you know enough of Julia's ways to know she'll never in the world stand up to the music? She writes that all the family can be told, because she knows the news will leak out here and there, in confidence, little by little; so by the time she gets home they'll all have been through their first spasms, and after that she hopes they'll just send her some forgiving flowers and greet her with manly handclasps—and get ready to usher at the wedding!"

"Well," said Mr. Atwater, "I'm afraid you're right. It does seem rather like Julia to stay away till the first of the worst is over. I'm really sorry for some of her love-lorners. I suppose it will get whispered about, and they'll hear it; and there are some of the poor things that might take it pretty hard."

"'Take it pretty hard!'" she echoed loudly. "There's one of 'em, at least, who will just merely lose his reason!"

"Which one?"

"Noble Dill."

At this, the slender form of Florence underwent a spasmodic seizure, in her chair, but as the fit was short, and also noiseless, it passed without being noticed.

"Yes," said Mr. Atwater, thoughtfully. "I suppose he will."

"He certainly will!" Mrs. Atwater declared. "Noble's mother told me last week that he'd gotten so he was just as liable to drop a fountain-pen in his coffee as a lump of sugar; and when any one speaks to him he either doesn't know it, or else jumps. When he says anything, himself, she says they can scarcely ever make out what he's talking about. He was trying enough before Julia went away; but since she's been gone Mrs. Dill says he's like nothing in her experience. She says he doesn't inherit it; Mr. Dill wasn't anything like this about her."

"No," said his wife. "She was quite a sensible girl. I'd hate to be in her place, now, though, when she tells Noble about this!"

"How can Mrs. Dill tell him, since she doesn't know it herself?"

"Well—perhaps she ought to know it, so that she could tell him. Somebody ought to tell him, and it ought to be done with the greatest tact. It ought to be broken to him with the most delicate care and sympathy, or the consequences—"

"Nobody could foretell the consequences," her husband interrupted—"no matter how tactfully it's broken to Noble."

"No," she said, "I suppose that's true. I think he's likely to lose his reason unless it is done very tactfully, though."

"Do you think we really ought to tell Mrs. Dill, Mollie? I mean, seriously: Do you?"

For some moments she considered his question; then aswered, "No. It's possible we'd be following a Christian course in doing it; but still we're rather bound not to speak of it outside the family, and when it does get outside the family I think we'd better not be the ones responsible—especially since it might easily be traced to us. I think it's usually better to keep out of things when there's any doubt."

"Yes," he said, meditating. "I never knew any harm to come off people's sticking to their own affairs."

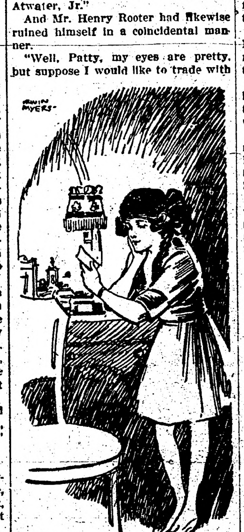
But as he and his wife became silent for a time, musing in the firelight, their daughter's special convictions were far from coinciding with theirs, although she, likewise, was silent—a strangeness in her which they should have observed. But so far were they from a true comprehension of her, they were unaware that she had more than a casual, young-cousinly interest in Julia Atwater's engagement and in those possible consequences to Noble Dill, which they had sketched with some intentional exaggeration, and decidedly without the staggering seriousness attributed to their predictions by their daughter. They did not even notice her expression when Mr. Atwater snapped on the light, in order to read, and she went quietly out of the library and up to her own room.

On the floor, near her bed, where Patty Fairchild had left her coat and hat, Florence made her second discovery. Two small, folded slips of paper lay there, dropped by Miss Fairchild when she put on her coat in the darkening room. They were the replies to Patty's whispered questions, in the game on the steps—the pledged Truth, written by Henry Rooter and Herbert Atwater on their sacred words and honors. The infatuated pair had either overestimated Patty's caution, or else each had thought she would so prize his little missive that she would treasure it in a tender safety, perhaps pinned upon her blouse (at the first opportunity) over the heart. It is positively safe to say that neither of the two veracities would ever have been set upon paper had Herbert and Henry any foreshadowing that Patty might be careless; and the partners would have been seized with the utmost horror could they have conceived the possibility of their trustful messages ever falling into the hands of the relentless creature who now, without an instant's honorable hesitation, unfolded and read them.

"Yes, if I got to tell the truth, I know I have got pretty eyes," Herbert had unfortunately written. "I am glad you think so, too, Patty, because your eyes are too. Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr."

And Mr. Henry Rooter had likewise ruined himself in a coincidental manner.

"Well, Patty, my eyes are pretty, but suppose I would like to trade with yours because you have beautiful eyes, also, sure as my name is Henry Rooter."



But What Eventually Engrossed Her Mind Was the Thought of Wallie Torbin.

Florence stood close to the pink-shaded electric droplight over her small white dressing table, reading again and again these pathetically honest little confidences. Her eyelids were withdrawn to an unprecedented retirement, so remarkably she stared, while her mouth seemed to prepare itself for the attempted reception of a bulk beyond its total capacity. And these plastic tokens, so immoderate as to be ordinarily the consequence of nothing short of poignant horror, were overlaid by others, subtler and more gleaming, which wrought the true significance of the contortion—a joy that was dumfounding.

Her thoughts were first of Fortune's kindness in selecting her for a favor so miraculously dovetailing into the precise need of her life, then of Henry and Herbert, each at this hour probably brushing his hair in preparation for the Sunday evening meal, and both touchingly unconscious of the calamity now befalling them; but what eventually engrossed her mind was the thought of Wallie Torbin.

Master Torbin, approaching fourteen, was in all the town the boy most dreaded by his fellow-boys, and by girls of his acquaintance, including many of both sexes who knew him only by sight—and hearing. He had no physical endowment or attainment worth mention; but boys, who could "whip him with one hand," became sycophants in his presence; the terror he inspired was moral. He had a special overdevelopment of a faculty exercised clumsily enough by most human beings, especially in their youth; in other words, he had genius—not, however, genius having to do with anything generally recognized as art or science. True, if he had been a violinist prodigy or mathematical prodigy, he would have had some respect from his fellows—about equal to that he might have received if he were gifted with some pleasant deformity, such as six toes on a foot—but he would never have enjoyed such deadly prestige as had actually come to be his. In brief, then, Wallie Torbin had a genius for mockery.

Almost from his babyhood he had been a child of one purpose: to increase by ghastly burlesque the sufferings of unfortunate friends. If one of them wept, Wallie incessantly pursued him, yelping in horrid mimicry; if one were chastised, he could not appear out-of-doors for days except to encounter Wallie and a complete rehearsal of the recent agony. "Quit, papa; pah-puh, quee-yet! I'll never do it again, pah-puh! Oh, lemme alone, pah-puh!"

> "I may have a slight surprise for you."

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Canby—The Canby Women's Relief corps has presented a handsome silk flag to the American Legion post.

Trosky—Bonds of $10,000 were voted at the village election here for fire fighting apparatus and the construction of a waterworks system.

St. Cloud—Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Bell, for almost 40 years prominent residents of Sauk Rapids, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary.

Brookston—A lucky draw from the ballot box gave Tom Flynn the election over C. Watson as trustee of the village of Brookston for three years.

Biwabik—In the largest vote ever recorded at a village election here, G. H. Lommen was chosen mayor over Grover C. Helsel by a vote of 350 to 280.

Virginia—Harry L. Burns, on behalf of himself and others has started injunction proceedings against the city of Eveleth to restrain it from issuing $300,000 in refunding bonds.

Sleepy Eye—Prompt work on the part of firemen saved the lives of five persons when flames cut off their only escape down a straiway from the second floor of a store building.

Rochester—Rochester is to have an addition to its postoffice, amounting to one-third of its present size, according to word received here from Dr. Hubert Work, postmaster general.

Fertile—Sunday movies in Fertile will be no more unless the voters rescind their action taken at the spring election Tuesday. The vote was 223 to 64 against the Sunday movie issue.

Gaylord—A. H. Kuehner was re-elected mayor of Gaylord at the annual election. E. R. Gladitsch was selected as trustee, and I. M. Nelson as clerk. The voters favored the purchase of a fire truck.

Worthington—F. H. Densmore, publisher of the Wilmot Tribune, has received a temporary appointment as postmaster at Wilmot, and Postmaster Hannon has turned the affairs of the office over to him.

Minneapolis—Needs and desires of every war veteran in Minnesota will be compiled through an intensive canvass of the entire state which began throughout Minnesota under the direction of the American Legion.

Renville—Allan Hartman, aged 9, is dead as the result of being kicked in the head by a horse. The boy was attempting to catch a ride on a bobsleigh, when one of the horses hitched to the sleigh became frightened and kicked him.

Waseca—A fire which started from defective wiring in the sheriff's bedroom in the county jail threatened the building with destruction. The prisoners were utilized as a bucket brigade and kept the fire in check until the department arrived.

Ottertail—Della Sarnie, purebred Guernsey cow owned by Henry Bartels has set an unusual record, being the mother of seven calves although only 4 years old. The cow gave birth to calves the first [illegible], then twins were born and [illegible] triplets.

Minneapolis—Charles S. Sedgwick, architect, designer of the Westminster Presbyterian church, the old Y. M. C. A., the Dayton store building, and many other churches, business blocks and residences of the city, died at St. Barnabas hospital. He was 66 years old.

Montevideo—Three Elbow Lake boys were committed to the state reformatory at Red Wing, after having confessed to robbing half a dozen Elbow Lake business places. Two of the trio went to Red Wing for the first time, but the third was taken back for breaking his parole from the institution.

St. Paul—Planting of shelterbelts of trees throughout Minnesota, to serve as "live snow fences" to prevent repetition of the recent snow blockades of railways and roads, was urged by W. T. Cox, state forester. A plantation of trees six or eight rows wide, placed at a proper distance from the railroad cuts, would so control the drifting snow as to leave tracks practically clear, he declared.

Brewster — Miss Mabel Hansen, member of the civics class in the local high school, shot one of her feet almost off while the members of the class were studying sound waves. A shotgun was being used to produce the sound and Miss Hansen was selected to shoot the firearm. Thinking it was loaded with a blank shell, the girl shot towards the floor. A regularly loaded shell was in the gun and the shot passed through her foot and ankle.

MOTHER, QUICK! GIVE CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP FOR CHILD'S BOWELS

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, a teaspoonful will never fail to open the bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste from the tender, little bowels and gives you a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

What Are Symbreals?

The novel of the future, according to Shaw Desmond, will be like his novels, not a novel at all but a symbreal. Mr. Desmond goes on in highly technical and polysyllable terms to define what a symbreal is, comparing it to a kaleidoscope, and to a many-faceted diamond, but disregarding the spelling, one is very likely to think the name originated with the tinkling symbal and that the great difference lies in the introduction of one syllable for euphony's sake.

GRAIN GROWERS HOLD MEETING

Wheat GroWers Organization Also Hold Convention Many Members Preseut.

PUBLIC ARE INVITED

The First Annual Meeting of the U. S Grain Growers, Inc., Meet in Chicago—50,000 Members Present.

Chicago.—Representatives of more than 50,000 members of the U. S. Grain Growers, Inc., will meet here for the first annual convention of the organization.

Delegates to the gathering were elected in 47 congressional districts in 11 midwestern states last month, and each delegate will carry the combined voting strength of the territory he represents.

The meeting of the co-operative marketing organization, which came into being in April, 1921, when the national marketing plan outlined by the Committee of Seventeen appointed by President Howard of the American Farm Bureau federation, was adopted, will be open, it was stated, although previously it had been reported that the gathering would be behind closed doors.

Wheat Growers Meet Also.

While the grain growers are in convention, a committee representing the American Wheat Growers' association, another co-operative marketing organization, will be in session here to make final plans to set up the operating machinery and to submit the tentative program to Aaron Sapiro, of San Francisco, general counsel. Mr. Sapiro telegraphed that he would be delayed in reaching Chicago and members of the committee plan to remain here until he arrives.

The American Wheat Growers, Associated, formed by representatives of the Northwest Wheat Growers, Associated, and the National Wheat Growers' association, is 100 per cent a pooling organization and according to W. C. Lansdon, Salina, Kan., a member of the committee, the association epects to start operations in ten states by May 1. The tentative plans call for three zones, the northwest, in which the Northwest Wheat Growers, Associated, already is in operation, the north central with headquarters at Minneapolis, and the south central with headquarters at Kansas City.

No Prearranged Action.

No official statement has been made as to what question will come before the U. S. Grain Growers meeting. It was stated that the convention would be entirely in the hands of the delegates and that no forecast of possible action could be made.

Senator McCumber to Be in Line for Re-election.

Washington.—Senator Porter J. McCumber of North Dakota, chairman of the powerful senate finance committee, formally announced he would seek re-election. In a formal statement McCumber said he would run "in this campaign as in every former, as a straight conservative Republican."

"I am a Republican not a Socialist," McCumber continued, apparently strik- Senator McCumber continued. "True gression, but it must be along those carefully considered and safe lines that lead toward better government and greater happiness and prosperity for all the people."

McCumber said that because of the importance of the tariff bill now pending before the finance committee of which he was chairman, and other vital matters he would have to leave his candidacy largely to the people of the state.

His platform includes lowering of freight rates, securing of better and more stable prices for farm products, extension of co-operative marketing, decreas of interest on farm loans, better understanding and commercial relation with all peoples of the world and tariff protection for the farmer. His announcement follows:

McCumber's Statement.

"I shall be a candidate at the June primary for the Republican nomination for re-election to the position of United States senator. I shall run in this campaign as I have run in every other one, as a straight conservative Republican. As a representative of this agricultural state I have at all times during my political life tried to promote not only the welfare of the State of North Dakota but that of the entire agricultural Northwest.

Mint Directorship Changes Hands

Washington.— Trusteeship for a third of the world's gold supply changes hands today when F. E. Scobey of San Antonio, Texas, succeeds Raymond T. Baker, as director of the mint.

Gold assets of the mint service institutions aggregate $3,000,000,000. The world gold supply is estimated at approximately $9,000,000,000. Mr. Scobey when he takes the oath of office assumes supervision of the government's coinage institutions, and tons of precious metals, bars of gold and silver coins of all denominations.

DOGS GIVEN VICTORIA CROSS

Three Have Been Awarded Highest British Decoration for Bravery in Face of the Enemy.

The English in asking that the Victoria Cross be awarded to the cat which so heroically saved her young during the fire of the Printemps only follow an example given by the queen of England herself. To appreciate the value of this reward we must remember that the Victoria Cross is for a soldier, general or private, the highest military order.

In the last war at the utmost 50 have been awarded. However, several dogs belonging to the British army have received this honor. These were: Bob of the Royal Berkshire, which in the Afghanistan war saved the life of several soldiers; Jack, which accomplished the same feats at the battle of the Alma, and Jerry, the hero of the Crimean war, which received from the city of Dublin a medal and—a dinner. The odds are that the mess made the dog happier than the medal.—New York Tribune.

Without constancy there is neither love, friendship, or virtue in the world.—Addison.

Kindness is an instinct—politeness only an art.

HAD NO "COMEBACK" TO THAT

Marine's Winterfield Uniform Scored Heavily on the Khaki Which Started the Controversy.

The marine's three uniforms hung side by side underneath his clothing shelf: one winterfield, one blue and one khaki. Suddenly the khaki uniform grew critical.

"You look pretty green," it said to the winterfield.

The winterfield uniform made no reply.

"And that outfit right next to you must be downhearted—it looks so blue," the khaki uniform went on.

The winterfield then spoke up: "I might be green," it said, "and that outfit right next to me might have the 'blues,' but doggone your hide—you're yellow!"

The khaki uniform piped down.—The Leatherneck.

Proof.

"I am a philosopher," admitted the gentleman whose frontispiece was as elongated and solemn as that of a rare old fiddle.

"What makes you think so?" we skeptically inquired.

"Because," he answered, "although I am aware that I am not appreciated it does not hurt my feelings in the least."—Kansas City Star.

WHY SOME MEN LEAVE HOME

This Kind of Thing, Served Up Daily, Would Drive Almost Anyone From His Loved Fireside.

"George, dear," cried wifey from the bedroom, "have you shut the dining room window?"

"Yes, love."

"Put the plate basket behind the bookcase?"

"Um!"

"Have you put the dog out?"

"Yes."

"Sure you bolted the scullery door?"

"Sure."

"Turned off the gas in the cellar?"

"Yes, precious."

"Wound the clock?"

"Yes, darling."

"Brought in the mat from the porch?"

"I have, my ownest."

"Have you locked up the wine?"

"Yes, yes, my sweetheart. I have done even that."

"Well, there's no need to get wild about it. Why can't you come to bed at some decent hour? What on earth have you been doing down there all this time?"—London Tit-Bits.

To use a three-wheeled platform for the purpose of picking figs, was the timely idea of a grower of that fruit, in order to harvest his crop quickly, as described in a scientific journal.

Wishing for sleep is a poor way to get it

A LITTLE wisdom in the daytime is a better assurance of rest than any amount of anxious wishing when nerves are a-jangle at night.

What you do at noon often has more influence on sleep than what you want and hope for, at midnight.

Coffee's drug element, caffeine, whips up the nerves, and when its use is continued there's usually a penalty which no amount of mental effort can avoid.

The part of wisdom, as so many thousands have found, is to turn away from nerve-stimulation and adopt rich, delicious Postum as the mealtime drink. Postum delights the taste, but brings no disturbance to nerves or digestion. Even the little children can share in the enjoyment of Postum at any meal.

It's better to anticipate warnings than to be driven by them.

It's better to encourage and preserve sound nerves and complete health than to listen to the clock ticks at night and say, "I wish!"

You can get Postum wherever good food or drink is sold and served. An order today may be the beginning, for you, of the great satisfaction and comfort which so many others have found in Postum.

Your grocer has both forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

Postum for Health—"There's a Reason"

New 300 Candle Power Lamp

THE DIAMOND LIGHT

COSTS LESS THAN 2c A NIGHT TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lamp operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lamp and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. It gives a soft, white light, ideal for sewing or reading. Easy on the eyes and beautifully brilliant for the home.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline--Absolutely Safe

The Lamp operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. It can be carried anywhere, is easy and simple to operate, and needs practically no attention except occasional filling—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean. It is smokeless and odorless.

Let me show you how bright and cheerful this 300 candle power brilliance will make YOUR home. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hesitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

THE DIAMOND LIGHT

COSTS LESS THAN [illegible] PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working day of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

[illegible] giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300-candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

The ORIOLE

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1921 by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

WALLIE TORBIN.

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its bauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild, pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Florence's openly expressed disapproval, by Herbert and Henry. Florence will not play. Patty and the visitors indulge in a series of innocent Sunday games. Among them is one called "Truth," the feature of which is a contract to write a question and answer, both to be kept a profound secret. The agreement is duly carried out. Florence is told as a family secret that her beautiful aunt, Julia Atwater, has apparently become engaged to a man named Crum, altogether unknown to the Atwaters. Florence finds the notes in the "Truth" game, in which both Herbert and Henry admit that they have pretty eyes.

As he grew older, his insatiate curiosity enabled him to expose unnumbered weaknesses, indiscretions and social misfortunes on the part of acquaintances and schoolmates; and to every exposure his noise and energy gave a hideous publicity; the more his victim sought privacy the more persistently he was sought out by Wallie, vociferous and attended by hilarious spectators. But above all other things, what most stimulated the demoniac boy to prodigies of satire was any tender episode or symptom connected with the dawn of love. Florence herself had suffered excruciatingly at intervals throughout her eleventh spring, because Wallie discovered that Georgie Beck sent her a valentine; and the humorist's many, many squealings of that valentine's affectionate quatrain finally left her unable to decide which she hated the more, Wallie or Georgie. That was the worst of Wallie: he never "let up"; and in Florence's circle there was no more sobering threat than, "I'll tell Wallie Torbin!" As for Henry Rooter and Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., they would as soon have had a head-hunter on their trail as Wallie Torbin with anything in his hands that could incriminate them in an implication of love—or an acknowledgement of their own beauty.

The fabric of civilized life is interwoven with blackmail; even some of the noblest people do favors for other people who are depended upon not to tell somebody something that the noblest people have done. Blackmail is born into us all, and our nurses teach us more blackmail by threatening to tell our parents, if we won't do this and that—and our parents threaten to tell the doctor—and so we learn! Blackmail is part of the daily life of a child; displeased, his first resort to get his way with other children is a threat to "tell"; but by-and-by his experience discovers the mutual benefit of honor among blackmailers. Therefore, at eight it is no longer the ticket to threaten to tell the teacher; and, a little later, threatening to tell any adult at all is considered something of a breakdown in morals. Notoriously, the code is more liable to infraction by people of the physically weaker sex, for the very reason, of course, that their inferiority of muscle so frequently compels such a sin, if they are to have their way. But for Florence there was now no such temptation. Looking toward the demolition of Atwater & Rooter, an exposure before adults of the results of "Truth" would have been an effect of the sickliest pallor compared to what might be accomplished by a careful use of the catastrophic Wallie Torbin.

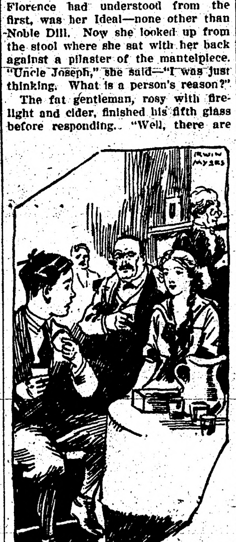
All in all, it was a great Sunday for Florence. On Sunday evening it was her privileged custom to go to the house of her fat, old great-uncle, Joseph Atwater, and remain until nine o'clock, in chatty companionship with Uncle Joseph and Aunt Carrie, his wife, and a few other relatives who were in the habit of dropping in there on Sunday evenings. In summer, lemonade and cake were frequently provided; in the autumn, one still found cake, and perhaps a pitcher of clear new cider; apples were always a certainty.

This evening was glorious; there were apples and cider and cake and walnuts, perfectly cracked, and a large open-hearted box of candy. Naturally, these being the circumstances, Herbert was among the guests; and, though rather at a disadvantage, so far as the conversation was concerned, not troubled by the handicap. The reason he was at a conversational disadvantage was closely connected with the unusual supply of refreshments; Uncle Joseph and Aunt Carrie had foreseen the coming of several more Atwaters than usual, to talk over the new affairs of their beautiful relative, Julia. Seldom have any relative's new affairs been more thoroughly talked over than were Julia's that evening, though all the time by means of various symbols, since it was thought wiser that Herbert and Florence should not yet be told of Julia's engagement, and Florence's parents were not present to confess their indiscretion, Julia was referred to as "the traveler," and other makeshifts were employed with the most knowing caution; and all the while Florence merely ate inscrutably. The more sincere Herbert was as placid; such foods were enough for him.

"Well, all I say is, the traveler better enjoy herself on her travels," said Aunt Fanny finally, as the subject appeared to be wearing toward exhaustion. "She certainly is in for it when the voyaging is over and she arrives in the port she sailed from, and has to show her papers. I agree with the rest of you; she'll have a great deal to answer for, and most of all about the shortest one. My own opinion is that the shortest one is going to burst like a balloon."

"The shortest one," as the demure Florence had understood from the first, was her Ideal—none other than Noble Dill. Now she looked up from the stool where she sat with her back against a pilaster of the mantelpiece. "Uncle Joseph," she said—"I was just thinking. What is a person's reason?"

The fat gentleman, rosy with firelight and cider, finished his fifth glass before responding. "Well, there are persons I never could find any reason for 'em at all. 'A person's reason!' What do you mean, 'a person's reason,' Florence?"



It Staggered Him. "What—What—You Mean?"

"I mean like when somebody says, 'They'll lose their reason,'" she explained. "Has everybody got a reason, and if they have, what is it, and how do they lose it, and what would they do then?"

"Oh, I see!" he said. "You needn't worry. I suppose since you heard it, you've been hunting all over yourself for your reason and looking to see if there was one hanging out of anybody else, somewhere. No; it's something you can't see ordinarily, Florence. Losing your reason is just another way of saying 'going crazy!'"

"Oh," she murmured, and appeared to be somewhat disturbed.

At this, Herbert thought proper to offer a witticism for the pleasure of the company.

"You know, Florence," he said, "it only means acting like you most always do." He applauded himself with a burst of changing laughter which ranged from a bullfrog croak to a collapsing soprano; then he added: "Especially when you come around my and Henry's newspaper building! You certainly 'lose your reason' every time you come around that ole place!"

"Well, course I haf to act like the people that's already there," Florence retorted, not sharply, but in a musing tone that should have warned him. It was not her wont to use a quiet voice for repartee. Thinking her humble, he laughed the more raucously.

"Oh, Florence!" he besought her. "Say not so! Say not so!"

"Children, children!" Uncle Joseph remonstrated.

Herbert changed his tone; he became seriously plaintive. "Well, she does act that way, Uncle Joseph! When she comes around there you'd think we were runnin' a lunatic asylum the way she takes on. She hollers and bellers and squalls and squawks. The least little teeny thing she don't like about the way we run our paper, she comes flappin' over there and goes to screechin' around, you could hear her out at poorhouse farm!"

"Now, now, Herbert," his Aunt Fanny interposed. "Poor little Florence isn't saying anything impolite to you—not right now, at any rate. Why don't you be a little sweet to her just for once?"

Her unfortunate expression revolted all the cousinly manliness in Herbert's bossom. "'Be a little sweet to her?'" he echoed, with poignant incredulity, and then in candor made plain how poorly Aunt Fanny inspired him. "I just exackly as soon be a little sweet to an alligator," he asserted; such was his bitterness on this subject.

"Oh, oh!" said Aunt Carrie.

"I would!" Herbert insisted. "Or a mosquito. I'd rather, to either of 'em, because, anyway, they don't make so much noise. Why, you just ought to hear her," he went on, growing more and more severe. "You ought to just come around our newspaper building any afternoon you please, after school, when Henry and I are tryin' to do our work in, anyway, some peace. Why, she just squawks and squalls and squ—"

"It must be terrible," Uncle Joseph interrupted. "What do you do all that for, Florence, every afternoon?"

"Just for exercise," she answered dreamily; and her placidity the more exasperated her journalist cousin.

"She does it because she thinks she ought to be runnin' our own newspaper, my and Henry's; that's why she does it! She thinks she knows more about how to run newspapers than anybody alive; but there's one thing she's goin' to find out; and that is, she don't have anything more to do with my and Henry's newspaper. We wouldn't have another single one of her ole poems in it, no matter how much she offered to pay us! Uncle Joseph, I think you ought to tell her she's got no business around my and Henry's newspaper building."

"But, Herbert," Aunt Fanny suggested, "you might let Florence have a little share in it of some sort. Then everything would be all right."

"It would?" he demanded, his voice cracking naturally, at his age, but also under strain of the protest he wished it to express. "It woo-wud? Oh, my goodness, Aunt Fanny, I guess you'd like to see our newspaper just utterably ruined! Why, we wouldn't let that girl have any more to do with it than we would some horse!"

"Oh, oh!" both Aunt Fanny and Aunt Carrie exclaimed, shocked.

"We wouldn't," Herbert insisted. "A horse would know any amount more how to run a newspaper than she does; anyway, a horse wouldn't make so much noise around there. Soon as we got our printing press: we said right then that we made up our minds Florence Atwater wasn't ever goin' to have a single thing to do with our newspaper. If you let her have anything to do with anything she wants to run the whole thing. But she might just as well learn to stay away from our newspaper building, because after we got her out yesterday we fixed a way so's she'll never get in there again!"

Florence looked at him demurely. "Are you sure, Herbert?" she inquired.

"Just you try it!" he advised, with heartiest sarcasm; and he laughed tauntingly. "Just come around tomorrow and try it; that's all I ask!"

"I cert'nly intend to," she responded, with dignity. "I may have a slight surprise for you."

"Oh, Florence, say not so! Say not so, Florence! Say not so!"

At this she looked full upon him, and already she had something in the nature of a surprise for him; for so powerful was the still balefulness of her glance he was slightly startled. "I might say not so," she said—"if I was speaking of what pretty eyes you know you have, Herbert."

It staggered him. "What—what—you mean?"

Told of John Burroughs.

John Burroughs, the naturalist, was not interested in nature's larger aspects. Geysers and volcanoes bored him. His one exception was the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, which he called "the Divine Abyss." Despite his intentness on study when a boy, Burroughs was fond of girls and kept a systematic record of his engagements with them, writers on his life say.

Fortuitous Circumstances.

"Did you have a good time at Smith's last evening?" "Can't say that I did. Mrs. Smith is an old sweetheart of mine and I owe Mr. Smith $10."

A UNION OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

Healthy Housewife---Happy Home

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Has Helped Form Many

For the ailing, half-sick housewife such a union is impossible. Oftentimes even the slightest form of housework cannot be accomplished. Yet the work must be done.

Many women struggle along for years suffering from some form of female trouble that make their lives miserable and their homes far from happy.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped thousands of just such women regain their health and strength. Just give your thought to the following letters and remember that the women who wrote these letters knew how they felt before taking the Vegetable Compound and again afterwards. It helped them—let it help you.

Had Nervous Spells

Horatio, Ark. — "I had nervous spells and awful bad feelings. My right side and my back hurt me all the time and I had been going down in health for six or seven years. For three years I had not been able to do my work without help. I weighed only 95 pounds when my husband's mother persuaded me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Now I heartily recommend it to all suffering women, as I have gained weight and health. I can do all my work, anything I want to do."—Mrs. JIM REARICK, Horatio, Arkansas.

Reading, Pa.—"I was a nervous wreck and could hardly do my housework. I always had to have help or I would never have got it done. Through the advice of friends I have been taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for my nerves and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for my blood and I am feeling fine and doing my work all alone. I can recommend these medicines to any one, for they certainly helped me. I suffered for five years and Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines pulled me through." — Mrs. WALTER U. STOYER, 1218 Mulberry St., Reading, Pa.

Recommends the Vegetable Compound

New Orleans, La.—"I have found relief from my troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I praise it wherever I go. I could not do my work as it should be done for I would sometimes have to lie down because of the pains I had. A friend induced me to take your Vegetable Compound and I have got great results from it. I keep house and am able to do all my own work. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to mine."—Mrs. T. FOECKLER, 1915 N. Derbigny St., New Orleans, La.

The Hopeless Search.

Every once in a while we read of a man living in poverty falling heir to millions. And every time we read that sort of news item we scan the horizon of our family sky in the hope of finding some distant relative who might some day do that thing for us, but always with the same result. If there are any millionaires in our family we haven't located them.

Line Was Busy.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Olivia—Renville county's road work this year is to be carried out in a systematic manner. It has been decided that the county aid road plan will be used.

Virginia—Plans for the new $150,000 school building to replace the old school building were apprved by the board. The building will be of brick and three stories.

Thief River Falls—The Nordlandslaget, composed of men and women coming from the northern section of Norway, will hold its summer convention here, June 24 and 25.

Luverne—The Poland-China Breeders association of Rock county has been organized with Elmer Thompson of this city president and Albert Meyer of Magnolia secretary.

Fairmont — R. Rockvam, dancing teacher, indicted by the grand jury for arson alleged to have been committed in connection with the burning of a cottage at Fox Lake last fall, was discharged in court.

Waseca—Plans for the erection of a bath house, trapshooting range, horseshoe pitching course, and other improvements have been added to the building program of the Lakeside Golf and Country club.

Windom—James M. McConnell, state commissioner of education, who was a teacher at the Wilder schools, 28 years old, delivered the address at the dedication of the new $50,000 consolidated school building.

St. Paul——An area of about 25 square miles in the vicinity of Ortonville and the upper end of Marsh lake is under water, but no serious losses will result, E. V. Willard, state drainage and water commissioner, said.

Minneapolis — Return of capital punishment was advocated by members of the Minneapolis Retail Grocers' association as an outcome of the wanton murder of Edward Helms during a holdup of his grocery store.

Willmar—The newly formed company of the National Guard was mustered in here by Captain Gustav Anderson of Bismarck, N. D., who was assisted by Major E. Carter of St. Paul. The company consists of 63 men.

Waseca—The Waseca county commissioners have let a contract for the completion of the Janesville road. State reimbursement bonds to the amount of $60,647 were sold a premium of $2,517. The bonds carry 5 per cent interest.

Fergus Falls—Officials are investigating what is believed to have been an attempt to wreck a Northern Pacific train near Henning, this county. A tie had been placed across the track and the pilot of the engine pushed it along and stopped before the train was derailed. About six weeks ago a rail was found across the track at nearly the same spot.

St. Paul—John Barleycorn will rear his head once more in the democratic state convention which meets in Minneapolis March 31. Ramsey county democrats who adopted a wet platform were preparing to bring it before the state gathering, counting on strong support from delegates from Hennepin county and from most of the democratic strongholds of the state.

Moorhead—Several farmers throughout the potato growing districts of Minnesota will adopt the plan of Ted Schroeder of Clay county, who last year sprayed his 10 acre field of potatoes with a sprayer attached to his motorcycle. Mr. Schroeder says he was able with his device to sprinkle four rows at a time and to travel at the rate of 15 miles an hour while doing the work.

Hibbing—The United States Steel corporation's strongbox was tapped for $1,152,458 to pay for its activities in Hibbing in 1921, according to the report of Chairman E. H. Gary, just made public. The money was paid out for purchase of surface rights on the original 40 acres on which old Hibbing was built, for the moving of buildings off the old site and the development of the new location.

St. Paul—American Legion officials at state headquarters in St. Paul and at legion employment offices in the twin cities expressed thanks to twin city firms in the observance of Legion Employment day. The success of the day, in which many "buddies" were connected with a job, was not alone evident in Minneapolis and St. Paul, but in various municipalities of the state, Stafford King, state adjutant, said.

Red Wing—Red Wing's new dance ordinance is now in effect and under its provisions those giving dances must notify the police department at least 24 hours in advance in order that the police matron may be present. Just how the ordinance applies to private dances has not been definitely worked out.

St. Paul—Frank Hubey, M. O. Moore and Frank E. Smith, arrested following the slaying of Charles E. Cotter proprietor of the Burlington hotel near Indian Mounds, today pleaded not guilty to a charge of first degree

7 DROWN IN LAKE MAGICIAN

Four Boy Scouts A Scout Executive And Two Scout Masters Drown.

FIGHT TILL THE LAST

Lads Active in Scout Work Meet Untimely Fate 80 Rods From Shore of Small Lake.

South Bend, Ind.—Seven persons—four Boy Scouts, a Scout executive and two Scout masters—were drowned in Magician lake, ten miles northwest of Dowagiac, Mich., when a steel motorboat which they occupied foundered in the rough waters of the lake. All of the persons drowned were residents of this city.

The fatality took place 60 rods from the shore after the party had left for an island in the center of the lake, on which the Boy Scouts were establishing a camp.

The coroner of Dowagiac, who is investigating, gave it as his opinion that the boat was overloaded.

Scout Executive Taylor and his little son were the last to go down. Fifty feet of water separated them from rescue by W. C. Harper, who had driven one of the automobiles in which the Scouts made the trip to the lake from South Bend. From the shore he saw the boat go down on an even keel, and saw the party floundering in the water. He procured a leaky rowboat and with one oar pulled frantically against the rough waters to the scene, only to arrive too late.

When within 50 feet of where the boat sank, he saw the elder Taylor go down with his son in his arms after having fought a game battle to stay above water.

There was 15 in the party from South Bend and eight have been accounted for. None of the bodies have been recovered.

GUNMEN BUSY AGAIN IN ERIN

People of Ireland Live in Fear of Their Lives.

Belfast.—Gunmen are busy again. Three men ambushed John Beresford, a Protestant and an employe of a morning newspaper. He was wounded twice.

Several men entered the home of a coal hawker in Georges street, East Belfast, set it on fire, and then shot a pony and a donkey belonging to him.

David Christie was stopped in the street by men who questioned him regarding his religion. He turned and fled, escaping unhurt, although a shot was fired after him.

Unknown Man Found Dying.

An unknown man was found in a dying condition on the Ravenhill road. He had been shot. William Allen, who was shot a fortnight ago, died in the hospital here. As evidence of the conditions in Tyrone the correspondent of the Belfast Telegraph there tells how in some of the rural districts families sit by their firesides throughout the night and when they hear the sound of approaching footsteps or the slightest noise they dash away from their homes. All personal belongings are packed in the boxes and hidden in the fields, while money and valuables are secreted in hollow trees.

A young girl was shot to death while looking out of a window and two men were shot while trying to save a burning building. Bandits set fire to a Protestant school and also a large produce warehouse.

LIGHTS CONTROL CROWDS

Street Crowds Are Controlled by Colored Lights.

New York.—New York's street crowds are rapidly becoming trafficwise. Compared with the crowds of other cities, at home and abroad, they are quick to respond to discipline. An interesting problem in crowd psychology is being worked out in the city streets, more especially on Fifth avenue, while the crowds themselves are entirely unconscious of it.

A generation ago New York's crowds were wholly undisciplined. The city, and the country as well, looked upon the congestion of the streets as an unsolvable problem. When a few hundred busses and wagons passed up and down Broadway pedestrians were completely baffled, and built a bridge over the street rather than try to penetrate the traffic. When West street was much narrower than at present, it was often impossible to cross it for hours at a time, and people missed their trains and boats because they could not negotiate its width of perhaps 50 feet. The traffic "jams" often closed streets in the heart of New York for hours.

Shaw Declines Seat in Parliament.

London.—George Bernard Shaw is just as edtermined not to become a member of parliament as he is never to visit the United States.

The West Edinburgh Labor party has just asked Mr. Shaw to stand as its candidate. He has replied:

"Why shoud I pead with the citizens of West Edinburgh to allow me to waste my time at Westminster for a salary on which I could not live, when I can command a far more eligible position and much larger income."

A Funereal Thought.

"Henry," said Mrs. Peckton, "there are times when I believe you regret that you ever married me."

"Say not so, my love," replied Mr. Peckton, gloomily. "Nevertheless, I can't help remembering that the train I was to have taken to keep an engagement with you and a preacher at a church was wrecked. Had I reached the station five minutes sooner—ah, little woman, who knows where I would be today?"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

MOTHER! CLEAN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup." If the little tongue is coated, or if your child is listless, cross, feverish, full of cold, or has colic, give a teaspoonful to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the constipation poison, sour bile and waste out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hestitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

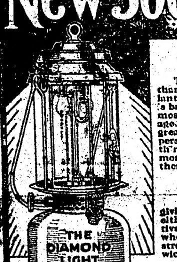
New 300 Candle Power Lantern



COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Then He Awoke.

I had been married only a few months and was still given to holding my wife's hand. One night while I was riding in a chair car I fell asleep and after a time became just enough conscious to realize there was a woman in the seat beside me. I thought it was my wife and started to take her hand in mine. She withdrew it and gave me a look that brought me to complete wakefulness and to a realization that my wife had not accompanied me on that journey. But under the circumstances what good could an apology do?—Chicago Tribune.

Miserable With Backache?

Why put up with that nagging backache? You can't be happy when every day brings morning lameness, sharp, shooting pains and that all-worn-out feeling. The best way to get well is to find the cause of your trouble and correct it. Likely, a cold or a chill has slowed up your kidneys and that is why you have backaches, stabbing pains, headaches and dizziness. Just take things easier and help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A North Dakota Case

Mrs. John Brady, 407 Third Ave., N. Jamestown, N. D., says: "I was troubled with kidney complaint and my back nearly killed me with pain. I often had to leave my housework stand. I had to sit down for fear of falling when dizzy spells came on. I felt tired and nervous and the least little thing upset me. Doan's Kidney Pills rid me of the trouble."

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Worthington—A new motorbus line has been established between Worthington and Sioux Falls, a round trip between the two points being made twice daily.

Moorhead—Warren Chase of Moorhead was re-elected president of the West Central Minnesota Christian Endeavor at the annual convention concluded here.

Buffalo—Peter Moreau, aged 42, hanged himself at the top of a windmill on his farm here. Moreau has been despondent for some time, according to neighbors.

Virginia—Plans for the new $150,000 school building to replace the old school building were apprved by the board. The building will be of brick and three stories.

Willmar—Russell Curran, an employee of the Willmar creamery, was severely burned about the face and body when a quantity of lime he was slacking exploded.

Thief River Falls—The Nordlandslaget, composed of men and women coming from the northern section of Norway, will hold its summer convention here, June 24 and 25.

Granite Falls—More than 20 families, living in the lowlands here, were compelled to leave their homes as a result of the high stage of water in the Minnesota river.

Middle River—This village voted the floating of a bond of $11,000 for the installation of a municipal electric lighting system by a vote of 91 to 42 at a special election held here.

Luverne—The Poland-China Breeders association of Rock county has been organized with Elmer Thompson of this city president and Albert Meyer of Magnolia secretary.

Barnesville—The Rod and Gun club of this city met and discussed a crow hunting contest. It was decided that the contest should start on April 20 and end on the evening of June 5.

Hibbing—One of the largest state gatherings of service men in northern Minnesota will meet here April 22 at the district board meeting of the American Legion posts and auxiliaries.

Crookston—By a vote of 100 to 1 representatives from every section of Polk county met here and urged county commissioners to issue the remainder of $150,000 in bonds for improvement of Polk county's trunk highways.

Clinton—The state highway commission has started two caterpillar tractors with large graders working on State Road No. 6 (the King of Trails), going north through this place. They are rapidly clearing the road for travel.

Rushford—The proposed rebuilding of the Rushford library at a cost of $8,000 has developed the fact that the Women's Welfare league of this place has the promise of $2,000 to be available when work is commenced upon a new or remodeled library building.

St. Cloud—Rev. E. V. Campbell, for 58 years pastor of the First Presbyterian church here, has just celebrated his 86th birthday. On April 18, accompanied by a committee of laymen from his congregation, the veteran pastor will go to the St. Cloud Presbytery meeting at Maynard and ask that he be retired.

Minneapolis—Mobilization of prohibition forces is under way at the state prohibition director's office for a spring drive into the rural districts of Minnesota to clean up illicit stills, S. B. Qvale, prohibition director of Minneapolis said. He said the forces from his department will move into the country districts as soon as the roads open.

St. Paul—Aroused by an unusual number of shootings, holdups and burglaries in the last two weeks, which include a murder in Minneapolis and two bank robberies in St. Paul, Governor J. A. O. Preus, recommended establishment of a state constabulary, Mayor L. C. Hodgson of St. Paul planned a citizens' auxiliary to aid police and predicted an early return to Minnesota of capital punishment.

St. Paul—An appeal to all citizens to join in a cleanup campaign from May 1 to 8 was sent broadcast over Minnesota by George Nettleton, state fire marshal. Mr. Nettleton emphasizes the need for cleanup work by a table showing that in the five years ending with 1920 the property damage in Minnesota from fires totaled $41,874,976. His appeal also said $8,753,200 of this loss was the result of fires classed as strictly preventable.

Fergus Falls—Officials are investigating what is believed to have been an attempt to wreck a Northern Pacific train near Henning, this county. A tie had been placed across the track and the pilot of the engine pushed it along and stopped before the train was derailed. About six weeks ago a rail was found across the track at nearly the same spot.

HOUSE UPHOLDS LLOYD GEORGE

Lloyd George Wins His Debate In The House By A Large Margin.

MANY HEAR PREMIER

Premier Lloyd George Wins Confidence of House by an Overwhelming Majority of 372 to 94 Votes.

London.—The house of commons after an unexpected debate, adopted by the substantial majority of 278, Premier Lloyd George's resolution calling for confidence in the government's policy on the coming economic conference at Genoa. The vote was 372 to 94.

The result is regarded as exceedingly satisfactory to the prime minister.

In the earlier part of the session the house passed an hour and twenty-nine minutes of such tenseness as it had not experienced for many months, when the prime minister, fresh from his retirement in the country, threw down the gauntlet to his opponents and declared that a vote on the hitherto innocuous Genoa resolution was tantamount to a vote of confidence in the government.

If Mr. Lloyd George has tired of office, as his son announced last week, certainly he appeared in fighting mood as he entered the house amidst a storm of cheering. His rest had plainly benefitted him, as evidenced by his bronzed face and quick step, and as he strode to the ministerial bench with a somewhat defiant attitude, his whole bearing was that of a man entering upon a great fight with every determination to win and with confidence in his powers.

Few Hostile Voices.

The house was crowded, interest being accentuated by conflicting reports on whether the premier would demand a vote of confidence in connection with the Genoa resolution or whether in view of the delicate political situation, he would sidestep the issue. Great crowds of people vainly bombarded the commons' officials for passes admitting them to the proceedings and the galleries were filled with the more fortunate. Among the persons present were the American ambassador, Mr. Harvey, who frequently smiled broadly at the premier's quaint and biting humor.

Step by step he built up his defense, sometimes with laughter as a vehicle, often with the most serious declarations, but always aiming at some goal—the continuing life of his government. Rarely did he encounter a hostile voice while, on the other hand, many times his opponents made good natured interpolations which were taken as admissions that his foil had reached home. Frequently there arose above the rumble of applause, Lady Astor's clear "hear, hear," of approval.

GIRL IS HELD FOR RANSOM

Young German Girl Is Held for 5,000 Francs.

Berlin.—Women members of the Reichstag have united, despite party differences, to demand the release of 8-year-old Marcelle Heymann, daughter of a Colonge working man, held for 5,000 francs "ransom" by a French family at Nancy.

The women demanded at an indignation meeting that the government obtain the girl's release. If that fails they will try to raise the money.

Marcelle's parents left her with the French family at the outbreak of the war. When they asked for her return recently, the French family demanded 5,000 francs for her, for food and lodging.

"How can I pay 5,000 francs—100,000 marks at the present rates?" Willy Hewmann, the girl's father, asked. "I am, as you see, a leather worker. I earn barely enough to support my family. I am unable to save. My wife and I would willingly sell everything to raise the money, but unfortunately all our furniture, linen and clothing was confiscated at the beginning of the war, where we lived in France.

"You can see for yourself that we live in modest circumstances. Is there no humanity?" Heymann's wife interrupted.

"I wrote to a family at Nancy who wanted to take Marcelle when we were sent to a prison camp. I promised payment as soon as conditions here improved. But I received only the brutal answer: 'The child will be delivered only after payment.'

"For over a year I haven't had a word from Marcelle. I don't know what I can do."

President May Attend Convention.

St. Paul.—July 19 to 22 have been fixed as the dates for the 37th annual convention of the National Editorial association at Missoula, Mont., it has been announced here by H. C. Hotaling, secretary.

Special trains will leave Chicago July 9, traveling via St. Paul, reaching Yellowstone National park in time for participation in the semi-centennial of the park's opening.

President Harding, according to Mr. Hotaling, has promised to attend convention if congress adjourns July 1.

RELIC OF PREHISTORIC RACE

Discovery of Lake Village Near Glastonbury, England, Has Awakened Much Interest There.

Much interest was awakened in England not so long ago by the discovery of a prehistoric lake village near Glastonbury, the New York Herald reports. The dwellings were placed on mounds of clay and raised above the level of the water. The framework of a primitive loom was found under one mound, and the number of broken bone needles and bone splinters discovered in another mound may have been the site of an ancient needle factory.

Few human bones were discovered, but among the interesting finds was a blue glass bead with a waving dark line running round it. One of the mounds contains 300 tons of clay, all of which must have been dug from the surrounding hills and carried to the spot in boats.

Where Patience Is No Virtue.

The absent-minded friend drove her car into town last week. Following the traffic she turned into a side street and came to a standstill behind a line of motors.

Remaining stationary until her patience was exhausted, she honked her horn to its fullest extent. The result proving unsatisfactory she tried it again.

"Hey, there, lady," came the voice of the irate officer, "if you'll come out of the taxicab stand you'll get across."

NOW DO MY WORK WITH EASE

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored My Health

Hornell, N. Y.—"I was in bad health but there didn't seem to be any one thing the matter with me. I was tired out all over and it was an effort for me to move. I was irritable and could not sleep nights and had trouble with my bowels and at my periods. It seemed that nearly every one around me knew of your medicine and wanted me to try it, so at last I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Tablets and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and improved every day. I do all my own work now except the washing and do it with ease. I can accomplish as much in a day now as it would have taken me a week to do last winter and I try to get every one I know to take your medicine to build them up. You are welcome to use this letter as a testimonial if you like."—Mrs. CHAS. BAKER, 21 Spencer Ave., Hornell, N. Y.

The ORIOLE

By Booth Tarkington

Copyright, 1921 by the Bell Syndicate, Inc.

FLORENCE'S WEAPON.

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its beauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild, pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Florence's openly expressed disapproval, by Herbert and Henry. Florence will not play. Patty and the visitors indulge in a series of innocent Sunday games. Among them is one called "Truth," the feature of which is a contract to write a question and answer, both to be kept a profound secret. The agreement is duly carried out. Florence is told as a family secret that her beautiful aunt, Julia Atwater, has apparently become engaged to a man named Crum, altogether unknown to the Atwaters. Florence finds the notes in the "Truth" game, in which both Herbert and Henry admit that they have pretty eyes, and threatens to tell the much-feared Wallie Torbin of the episode.

"Oh, nothin'," she replied, airily.

Herbert began to be mistrustful of the solid earth. Somewhere there was a fearful threat to his equipoise. "What you talkin' about?" he said, with an effort to speak scornfully; but his sensitive voice almost failed him.

"Oh, nothin'," said Florence. "Just about what pretty eyes you know you have, and Patty's being anyway as pretty as yours—and so you're glad maybe she thinks yours are pretty, the way you do—and everything!"

Herbert visibly gulped. So Patty had betrayed him; had betrayed the sworn confidence of "Truth!"

"That's all I was talkin' about." Florence added. "Just about how you knew you had such pretty eyes. Say not so, Herbert! Say not so!"

"Look here!" he said. "When'd you see Patty again between this afternoon and when you came over here?"

"What makes you think I saw her?"

"Did you telephone her?"

"What makes you think so?"

Once more Herbert gulped. "Well, I guess you're ready to believe anything anybody tells you," he said, with a palsied bravado. "You don't believe everything Patty Fairchild says, do you?"

"Why, Herbert! Doesn't she always tell the Truth?"

"Her? Why, half the time," poor Herbert babbled, "you can't tell whether she just makin' up what she says or not. If you've gone and believed everything that ole girl told you, you haven't got even what little sense I used to think you had!" So base we are under strain, sometimes—so base when our good name is threatened with the truth of us! "I wouldn't believe anything she said," he finished, in a sickish voice, "if she told me fifty times and crossed her heart!"

"Wouldn't you if she said you wrote down how pretty you knew your eyes were, Herbert?"

"What's this about Herbert having 'pretty eyes'?" Mr. Joseph Atwater inquired; and Herbert shuddered. Uncle Joseph had an unpleasant reputation as a joker.

The nephew desperately fell back upon the hopeless device of attempting to drown out his opponent's voice as she began to reply. He became vociferous with scornful laughter badly cracked in the scorn. "Florence got mad!" he shouted, mingling the purported information with loud cacklings. "She got mad because I and Henry played games with Patty! She's tryin' to make up somep'm to get even. She made it up! It's all made up! She—"

"No, no," Mr. Atwater interrupted. "Let Florence tell us. Florence, what was it about Herbert knowing he had pretty eyes?"

Herbert attempted to continue the drowning out. He bawled, "She made it up! It's somep'm she made up herself! She—"

"Herbert," said Uncle Joseph—"if you don't keep quiet, I'll take back the printing press."

Herbert substituted another gulp for a continuation of his noise.

"Now, Florence," said Uncle Joseph, "tell us what you were saying about how Herbert knows he had such pretty eyes."

Then it seemed a miracle befell. Florence looked up, smiling modestly. "Oh, it wasn't anything, Uncle Joseph," she said. "I was just trying to tease Herbert any way I could think up."

"Oh, was that all?" A hopeful light faded out of Uncle Joseph's large and inexpressive face. "I thought perhaps you'd detected him in some indiscretion."

Florence laughed. "I was just teasin' him. It wasn't anything, Uncle Joseph."

Hereupon, Herbert resumed a confused breathing. Dazed, he remained uneasy, profoundly so; and gratitude was no part of his emotion. He well understood that Florence was never susceptible to impulses of compassion in conflicts such as these; in fact, if there was warfare between them, experience had taught him to be wariest when she seemed kindest. He moved away from her, and went into another room where his condition was one of increasing mental discomfort, though he looked for a while at the pictures in his great-uncle's copy of "Paradise Lost." These illustrations, by M. Gustave Dore, failed to aid in reassuring his troubled mind.

When Florence left, he impulsively accompanied her, maintaining a nervous silence as they compassed the short distance between Uncle Joseph's front gate and her own. There, however, he spoke.

"Look here! You don't haf to go and believe everything that ole girl told you, do you?"

"No," said Florence heartily. "I don't haf to."

"Well, look here," he urged, helpless but to repeat. "You don't haf to believe whatever it was she went and told you, do you?"

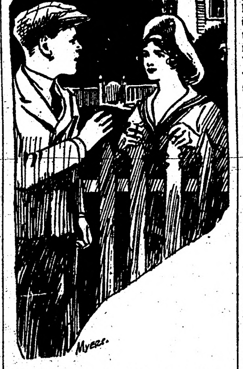
"What was it you think she told me, Herbert?"

"All that guff—you know. Well, whatever it was you said she told you."

"I didn't," said Florence. "I didn't say she told me anything at all."

"Well, she did, didn't she?"

"Why, no," Florence replied, lightly. "She didn't say anything to me. Only I'm glad to have your opinion of her, how she's such a story-teller and all—if I ever want to tell her, and everything!"



"Oh, About That!" Florence Said, and Swung the Gate Shut Between Them.

But Herbert had greater alarms than this, and the greater obscured the lesser. "Look here," he said, "if she didn't tell you, how'd you know it, then?"

"How'd I know what?"

"That—that big story about my ever sayin' I knew I had"—he gulped again—"pretty eyes."

"Oh, about that!" Florence said, and swung the gate shut between them. "Well, I guess it's too late to tell you tonight, Herbert; but maybe if you and that nasty little Henry Rooter do every single thing I tell you to, and do it just exackly like I tell you from this time on, why maybe—I only say 'maybe'—well, maybe I'll tell you some day when I feel like it."

She ran up the path, up the steps, and crossed the veranda, but paused before opening the door. Then she called back to the waiting Herbert.

"The only person I'd even think of telling about it before I tell you would be a boy I know." She coughed, and added as by an after-thought. "He'd just love to know all about it; I know he would. So, when I tell anybody about it I'll only tell just you and this other boy."

"What other boy?" Herbert demanded.

The next afternoon, about four o'clock, Herbert stood gloomily at the main entrance of Atwater & Rooter's newspaper building, awaiting his partner. The other entrances were not only nailed fast, but massively barricaded; and this one (consisting of the ancient carriage-house doors, opening upon a driveway through the yard) had recently been made effective as an instrument of exclusion. A long and heavy plank leaned against the wall, near by, ready to be set in hook-shaped iron supports fastened to the inner sides of the doors; and when the doors were closed, with this great plank in place, a person inside the building might seem entitled to count upon the enjoyment of privacy, except in case of earthquake, tornado, or fire. In fact, the size of the plank and the substantial quality of the iron fastenings, could be looked upon, from a certain viewpoint, as a heartfelt compliment to the energy and persistence of Florence Atwater.

Herbert had been in no complimentary frame of mind, however, when he devised the obstructions, nor was he now in such a frame of mind. He was deeply pessimistic in regard to his future, and also embarrassed in anticipation of some explanations it would be necessary to make to his partner. He strongly hoped that Henry's regular after-school appearance at the newspaper building would precede Florence's, because these explanations required both deliberation and tact, and he was convinced that it would be almost impossible to make them at all if Florence got there first.

He understood that he was unfortunately within her power; and he saw that it would be dangerous to place in operation for her exclusion from the building this new mechanism contrived with such hopeful care, and at a cost of two dollars and twenty-five cents, or nine annual subscriptions to the Oriole out of a present total of thirty-two. What he wished Henry to believe was that for some good reason, which Herbert had not yet been able to invent, it would be better to show Florence a little politeness. He had a desperate hope that he might find some diplomatic way to prevail on Henry to be as subservient to Florence as she had seemed to demand, and he was determined to touch any extremity of unveracity rather than permit the details of his answer in "Truth" to come to his partner's knowledge. Henry Rooter was not Wallie Torbin; but in possession of material such as this he could easily make himself intolerable. Here was a strange human thing, strange yet common to most minds brooding in fear of publicity. We seldom realize that the people whose derision we fear may have been as imprudent as we have been.

Therefore, it was in a flurried state of mind that Herbert waited; and when his friend appeared, over the fence, his perturbation was not decreased. He even failed to notice the unusual gravity of Henry's manner.

"Hello, Henry; I thought I wouldn't start in work till you got here. I didn't want to haf to come all the way downstairs again to open the door and h'ist our good ole plank up again."

"I see," said Henry, glancing nervously at their good ole plank. "Well, I guess Florence'll never get in this good ole door—that is, if we don't let her, or something."

This final clause would have surprised Herbert if he had been less preoccupied with his troubles. "You bet she won't!" he said mechanically. "She couldn't ever get in here again—if the family didn't go intafering around and give me the dickens and everything, because they think—they say they do, anyhow—they say they think—they think—"

He paused, disguising a little choke as a cough of scorn for the family's thinking.

"What did you say your family think?" Henry asked absently.

"Well, they say we ought to let her have a share in our newspaper."

Again he paused, afraid to continue lest his hypocrisy appear so barefaced as to lead toward suspicion and discovery. "Well, maybe we ought," he said, his eyes guiltily upon his toe, which slowly scuffed the ground. "I don't say we ought, and I don't say we oughtn't."

He expected at least a burst of outraged protest from his partner, who, on the contrary, pleasantly astonished him. "Well, that's the way I look at it," Henry said. "I don't say we ought, and I don't say we oughtn't."

And he, likewise, stared at the toe of his own right shoe, which was also scuffing the ground. Herbert felt a little better; this subdivision of his difficulties seemed to be working out with surprising ease.

The partners feel the heavy hand of the master.

Franklin on Thrift.

A man may, if he knows not how to save as he gets, keep his nose to the grindstone all his life and die not worth a groat at last.—Benjamin Franklin.

Why is the woman seldom sincere who tells another woman she's pretty?

MOTHER! OPEN CHILD'S BOWELS WITH CALIFORNIA FIG SYRUP

Your little one will love the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" even if constipated, bilious, irritable, feverish, or full of cold. A teaspoonful never fails to cleanse the liver and bowels. In a few hours you can see for yourself how thoroughly it works all the sour bile, and undigested food out of the bowels and you have a well, playful child again.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy. They know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Before Disarmament.

The edifying tale of little George Washington and the cherry tree had been related by a fond mother to her offspring with the hope that he might gain inspiration for a better life, but he remained unimpressed.

"Don't you see the lesson, Billy?" she asked. "George could not tell a lie. He told the truth even though his father stood there with a cane in his hand."

"Huh!" said Billy. "That's nothin'. George had the hatchet, didn't he?"—American Legion Weekly.

SHE DYED A SWEATER, SKIRT AND CHILD'S COAT WITH "DIAMOND DYES"

Each package of "Diamond Dyes" contains directions so simple any woman can dye or tint her worn, shabby dresses, skirts, waists, coats, stockings, sweaters, coverings, draperies, hangings, everything, even if she has never dyed before. Buy "Diamond Dyes"—no other kind—then perfect home dyeing is sure because Diamond Dyes are guaranteed not to spot, fade, streak, or run. Tell your druggist whether the material you wish to dye is wool or silk, or whether it is linen, cotton or mixed goods.—advertisement.

Built by Boy Scouts.

The lodge house of the W. W. W. at Treasure Island is said to be the finest building ever erected by the boy scouts anywhere. The work was done entirely by the scouts and it is a proof of the value and permanency of the order. The building is about 30 by 45 feet, two stories high with two large porches. It will be filled with mementoes.

MUST HAVE KNOWN PICKEREL

Uncle Jim Quite Evidently Familiar With the Habits of That Particular Fish.

Uncle Jim, trapper, had some easy "pickin's" in the summer escorting department store clerks on hunting and fishing trips.

Last summer there came one whom Uncle Jim catalogued as a fish monomaniac. He had learned all about casts and flies from a book, and insisted upon being rowed all over the lake long before sunrise.

One morning, while en route to a certain piece of water which this learned fisherman was certain contained every variety of fish, a big pickerel made a playful jump in the water near their boat.

"Wait!" Uncle Jim was excitedly commanded. "Didn't you see that whopper jump? Let's stop and catch him."

"Aw, he'll stay there," said Uncle Jim. "Let's wait and get him when we come back."—Judge.

CONCERNING DOGS

The dog is placed at the feet of women in sculpture to symbolize affection and fidelity.

David Lawrence, hero of a popular old English tale, had a dog which was so lazy that it leaned its head against a wall when it barked.

The expression, "dog in the manger," is applied to a churlish person who will not use what is wanted by another nor let the other use it.

In the Far East the dog still is held in abharrence as a scavenger of the streets, and the appellation "dirty dog" is the superlative of disdain.

Barry, the famous mastiff of Great St. Bernard's, in the early part of the Nineteenth century, was instrumental in saving the lives of 40 Alpine travelers.

A dog at the feet of a Crusader was symbolic of the fact that the Crusader followed the standard of the Lord as faithfully as the dog follows the footsteps of his master.

Hall's Catarrh Medicine

Those who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them much more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while Catarrh is a local disease, it is greatly influenced by constitutional conditions. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE consists of an Ointment which Quickly Relieves by local application, and the Internal Medicine, a Tonic, which assists in improving the General Health.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hestitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

THE DIAMOND LIGHT

New 300 Candle Power Lantern

COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim; no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

TECKTONIUS SILO

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

Mrs. Mary Ross

Minneapolis, Minn.—"When my children were small I had a sick spell that weakened me so I could not walk across the floor without the aid of a chair. Our druggist advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and Golden Medical Discovery, alternately, according to directions, and six bottles completely restored me to health and strength. Since that time I have frequently recommended these two famous remedies to members of my own family and to my friends and have seen only the most satisfactory results from their use."—Mrs. Mary Ross, 2313 22nd Ave., S.

MASTER MIND IN CHARGE.

Synopsis—Proud possessor of a printing press and equipment, the gift of Uncle Joseph to his nephew, Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Jr., aged thirteen, the fortunate youth, with his chum, Henry Rooter, about the same age, begins the publication of a full-fledged newspaper, the North End Daily Oriole. Herbert's small cousin, Florence Atwater, being barred from any kind of participation in the enterprise, on account of her intense and natural feminine desire to "boss," is frankly annoyed, and not at all backward in saying so. However, a poem she has written is accepted for insertion in the Oriole, on a strictly commercial basis—cash in advance. The poem suffers somewhat from the inexperience of the youthful publishers in the "art preservative." Her not altogether unreasonable demand for republication of the masterpiece, with its beauty unmarred, is scorned, and the break between Miss Atwater and the publishers of the Oriole widens. The Sunday following, Florence's particular chum, Patty Fairchild, pays her a visit. They are joined, despite Florence's openly expressed disapproval, by Herbert and Henry. Florence will not play. Patty and the visitors indulge in a series of innocent Sunday games. Among them is one called "Truth," the feature of which is a contract to write a question and answer, both to be kept a profound secret. The agreement is duly carried out. Florence is told as a family secret that her beautiful aunt, Julia Atwater, has apparently become engaged to a man named Crum, altogether unknown to the Atwaters. Florence finds the notes in the "Truth" game, in which both Herbert and Henry admit that they have pretty eyes, and threatens to tell the much-feared Wallie Torbin of the episode. Florence becomes the master mind of the Oriole.

"I don't say we will and I don't say we won't," Henry added. "That's the way I look at it. My father and mother are always talkin' to me; how I got to be polite and everything, and I guess maybe it's time I began to pay some 'tention to what they say. You don't have your father and mother for always, you know, Herbert."

Herbert's mood at once chimed with this unprecedented filial melancholy. "No, you don't, Henry. That's what I often think about, myself. No, sir, a fellow doesn't have his father and mother to advise him our whole life, and you ought to do a good deal what they say while they're still alive."

"That's what I say," Henry agreed gloomily; and then, without any alteration of his tone or of the dejected thoughtfulness of his attitude, he changed the subject in a way that painfully startled his companion. "Have you seen Wallie Torbin today, Herbert?"

"What!"

"Have you seen Wallie Torbin today?"

Herbert swallowed. "Why, what makes—what makes you ask me that, Henry?" he asked.

"Oh, nothin'." Henry still kept his eyes upon his gloomily scuffing toe. "I just wondered, because I didn't happen to see him in school this afternoon when I happened to look in the door of the Eight-A when it was open. I didn't want to know on account of anything particular. I just happened to say that because I didn't have anything else to think about just then, so I just happened to think about him, the way you do when you haven't got anything much on your mind, and might get to thinkin' about you can't tell what. That's all the way it was; I just happened to kind of wonder if he was around anywhere, maybe."

Henry's tone was obviously, even elaborately, sincere; and Herbert was reassured. "Well, I didn't see him," he responded. "Maybe he's sick."

"No, he isn't," his friend said. "Florence said she saw him chasin' his dog down the street about noon."

At this Herbert's uneasiness was uncomfortably renewed. "Florence did? Where'd you see Florence?"

Mr. Rooter swallowed. "A little while ago," he said, and again swallowed. "On the way home from school."

"Look—look here!" Herbert was flurried to the point of panic. "Henry—did Florence—did she go and tell you—did she tell you—?"

"I didn't hardly notice what she was talkin' about," Henry said, doggedly. "She didn't have anything to say that I'd ever care two cents about. She came up behind me and walked along with me a ways, but I got too many things on my mind to hardly pay the least attention to anything she ever talks about. She's a girl what I think about her the less people pay any 'tention to what she says, the better off they are."

"That's the way with me, Henry," his partner assured him earnestly. "I never pay any notice to what she says. The way I figure it out about her, Henry, everybody'd be a good deal better off if nobody ever paid the least notice to anything she says. I never even notice what she says, myself."

"I don't either," said Henry. "All I think about is what my father and mother say, because I'm not goin' to have their advice all the rest o' my life, after they're dead. If they want me to be polite, why, I'll do it and that's all there is about it."

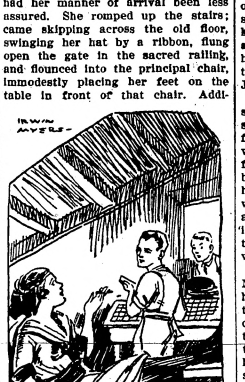
"It's the same way with me, Henry. If she comes flappin' around here blattin' and blubbin' how she's goin' to have somep'm to do with our newspaper, why, the only reason I'd ever let her would be because my family say I ought to show more politeness to her than up to now. I wouldn't do it in any other acount, Henry."

"Neither would I. That's just the same way I look at it. If I ever begin to treat her any better, she's got my father and mother to thank, not me. That's the only reason I'd be willing to say we better leave the plank down and let her in, if she comes around here like she's liable to."

"Well," said Herbert, "I'm willing. I don't want to get in trouble with the family."

And they mounted the stairs to their editorial, reportorial, and printing rooms; and began to work in a manner not only preoccupied but apprehensive. Now and then they would give each other a furtive glance, and then seem to reflect upon their fathers' and mothers' wishes and the troublous state of the times. Florence did not keep them waiting long, however.

She might have been easier to bear had her manner of arrival been less assured. She romped up the stairs; came skipping across the old floor, swinging her hat by a ribbon, flung open the gate in the sacred railing, and flounced into the principal chair, immodestly placing her feet on the table in front of that chair. Additionally, such was her riotous liveliness, she affected to light and smoke the stub of a lead pencil. "Well, men," she said heartily in a voice assumed to be that of a tall, powerful man—"I don't want to see any loafin' around here, men. I expect to have a pretty good newspaper this week—yes, sir, a pretty good newspaper—and I guess you men got to jump around pretty brisk to do everything I think of, or else maybe I guess I'll have to turn you off and get some new ones that'll be more obedient. I don't want to haf to do that, men."



The Blackmailed Partners Made No Reply, on Account of an Inability That Was Perfect for the Moment.

The blackmailed partners made no reply, on account of an inability that was perfect for the moment.

Florence made it clear to them that henceforth she was sole editor of the North End Daily Oriole. (She said she had decided not to change the name, after all.) She informed them that they were to be her printers, nothing more; she did not care to get all inky and nasty, she said. She would, however, do all the writing for her newspaper, and had with her a new poem. Also, she would furnish all the news and it would be printed just as she wrote it, and printed nicely, too, or else—"look out!"

Thus did this cool hand take possession of an established industry and in much the same fashion did she continue to manage it. There were unsuppressible protests; there was covert anguish; there was even a strike—but it was a short one. When the printers remained away from their late newspaper building, on Wednesday afternoon, Florence had an interview with Herbert after dinner at his own door. He explained coldly that Henry and he had grown tired of the printing press and had decided to put in all their spare time building a theater in Henry's attic; but Florence gave him to understand that the theater could not be.

Henry and Herbert had both stopped "speaking" to Patty Fairchild, for each believed her treacherous to himself; but Florence now informed Herbert that far from depending on mere hearsay, she had in her possession the confession of his knowledge that he had ocular beauty—the ruinous bit of writing in his own hand and signed with his complete name—that she had discovered the paper where Patty had lost it; and that it was now in a secure place, and in an envelope upon the outside of which was already written, "Wallie Torbin. Kindness of Florence A."

Herbert collapsed. So did Henry Rooter, a little later that evening, after a telephoned conversation with the slave-driver.

The two miserable printers were back in their places the next afternoon.

And on Saturday the new Oriole, now in every jot and item the inspired organ of feminism, made its undeniably sensational appearance.

A copy, neatly folded, was placed in the hand of Noble Dill, as he set forth for his place of business, after lunching at home with his mother. Florence was the person who placed it there—without charge. She came hurriedly from somewhere in the neighborhood, out of what yard or alley he did not notice, and slipped the little oblong sheet into his lax fingers.

"There!" she said, breathlessly. "There's a good deal about you in it, this week, Mr. Dill, and I guess—I guess—"

"What, Florence?"

"I guess maybe you'll—" She looked up at him shyly; then, with no more to say, turned and ran back in the direction whence she had come—and was gone. Noble walked on, not at once examining her little gift, but carrying it absently in fingers still lax at the end of a dangling arm. There was no life in him for anything; Julia was away.

Away—and yet the dazzling creature looked at him from sky, from earth, from air; looked at him with the most poignant kindness, yet always shook her head! She had answered his first letter by a kind little note, his second by a kinder and littler one, and his third, fourth, fifth, and sixth by no note at all; but by the kindest message (through one of her aunts) that she was thinking about him a great deal. And even this was three weeks ago. Since then, from Julia—nothing at all!

But yesterday something a little stimulating had happened. On the street, downtown, he had come face to face, momentarily with Mr. H. I. Atwater, Senior, Julia's peculiar old father; and for the first time in Noble's life this Mr. Atwater nodded to him pleasantly. Noble went on his way, elated: Was there not something almost fatherly in this strange greeting? There had been an easement of the pain of absence; and he glowed with thoughts of Mr. Atwater.

The glow faded somewhat from Noble when he reached a telephone: he called up his mother, and she said there was no recent news of Julia current in the Atwater family connection that she could hear of; none of them had word that she was coming home. However, Noble did not descend all the way into the cellar of his soul; some of his glow remained and kept him a little more cheerful than he had been for several weeks. The kind greeting of Julia's father had stirred his imagination. An event so singular might be interpreted in the happiest way: What had Julia written her father, to change him so toward Noble? And Noble was still dreamily interpreting as he walked down the street with the North End Daily Oriole idle in an idle hand.

Some startling news in our next.

A Lovers' Quarrel.

They stood beneath the stars, the silence of the night being only broken by the intensified sound of two hearts beating as one.

For a moment he withdrew his gaze from the dazzling depths of her eyes to the diamond-studded shirt front of the sky.

"Is that Mars?" he whispered, as he slipped his arm around her small, slim waist, and gazed upon a glittering orb in the heavenly dome.

"No, it isn't," she exclaimed angrily, jerking herself free of his embrace. "It's mine, and if you can't tell the difference between my waist and mother's after you've been courting me for eight years, well, you—"

Her voice broke, and her head fell forward upon her arm—

"We had better part!"

It is pleasing to report that the matter was amicably adjusted before anything more serious resulted.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Electricity in Canada.

The popularity of electricity in Canada for lighting homes and operating household appliances, is shown by the fact that 74.9 per cent of the residences so situated that electricity is available for use, are wired. Electric flatirons are used in 45.7 per cent of these; electric toasters in 18.2 per cent; electrically-operated washing machines in 5.0 per cent; electric fans in 5.4 per cent; electrically-operated vacuum cleaners in 5 per cent; electric ranges in 3.1 per cent; electrically-operated sewing machines in 1.2 per cent; electric dishwashers in 6.7 per cent, and electric refrigerators in 4.6 per cent

"---and we are a healthy, happy family now"

—Louis Gingras

TINGLING with abundant energy, appetites hearty; nerves strong and steady and their faces radiant with the glow of perfect health, the entire family of Louis Gingras, 9 Harrison Ave., Providence, R. I., are an eloquent tribute to the powers of Tanlac, the greatest family medicine the world has ever known.

"I've put Tanlac to the test four times right in my own family and it hasn't failed me once," declared Mr. Gingras. "My wife, my son and my daughter, as well as myself, have all been built up from a half-sick, run-down, worn-out set of people into a healthy, happy family brimful of new life and energy."

And the experience of this family is only typical of thousands of others whose statements are on file in the Tanlac offices. Hardly a day passes that does not bring scores of such messages of praise from every part of the United States and Canada from families where mother, father, son and daughter have all found health, contentment and the joys of living through simply taking a course of Tanlac.

Take, for instance, the case of John Widner, 1571 Roosevelt Ave., Los Angeles, Calif., who says: "My wife, myself and little boy are now as healthy, happy family as you will ever see—and it's all due to Tanlac."

Or that of Mrs. John Marquis and her family of sixteen living in Manchester, N. H., at 292 Belmont St. She says: "Tanlac has been the only medicine used in our house for two years and it has kept every one of the sixteen here in the best of health."

In Chicago, Frank R. Richards, of 441 South Wood St., writes: "We will never be without Tanlac in our house after the remarkable way it has built up my wife, my son and myself to where we are the very picture of health."

Representative of New York is the case of Chas. E. Van Colt's family, residing at 129 Fourth Ave., Albany. He says: "Every member of our family is enthusiastic over Tanlac. It's certainly a medicine for all the family."

From far-away Canada comes this message: "My little girl, my son and myself are all enjoying splendid health now and Tanlac brought it all about." Mrs. Bert Hewer, 193 East Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

"We call Tanlac 'The Family Medicine' here in our Virginia home, because it restored my mother and sister to perfect health, just the same as it has done me," is the enthusiastic statement of Mrs. J. F. Robertson, Danville, Va.

And on through the list, men, women and children from every state in the Union and every province of Canada unhesitatingly come forward and tell in words ringing with sincerity of the wonderful benefits of health and happiness that Tanlac has brought into their homes that were formerly darkened by the gloom of sickness, suffering and despair.

And should yours be one of those homes where any member of the family is thin, run down and weakened from loss of appetite, caused by indigestion and stomach troubles, you have at your very door the means that will no doubt bring the sunshine of vigorous health back into their lives and yours, just as it has done in so many thousands of other cases. Do not delay. Get a bottle of Tanlac from your druggist today.

Cucumber's History.

A strange recipe was once given for the use of cucumbers. It stated, peel off the cucumber, slice it, pepper it, put vinegar to it, and then throw it out of the window. It is, of course, difficult to account for tastes; but this rather suggests advice prompted by an enfeebled digestion. The cucumber has for centuries had a place in the world's dietary table. We have biblical authority for the statement that when the Israelites complained to Moses, they said: "We remember the fish which we did eat in Egypt; the cucumber and the melons." There may be imaginative minds who will see here a link with that popular English dish of today, salmon and cucumber.—Chicago Journal.

Different Interpretations.

That all people do not have the same slant of humor is illustrated in the following story:

One of the wealthiest men in Youngstown recently said to a friend:

"I had a funny dream last night."

"What was it all about?" the friend encouraged.

"I dreamed I got into a little flivver that climbed up a telephone pole, turned a somersault on the wires, and then slid down another pole."

"Well, that certainly was some dream."

"Yes," the rich man exclaimed. "Imagine me in a flivver."

Preparedness.

"Doctor, if there is anything the matter with me don't frighten me half to death by giving it a long, scientific name. Just tell me what it is in plain English."

"Well, sir, to be frank, you are lazy."

"Thank you, doctor. Now, tell me the scientific name for it. I've got to report to the missus."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

HOW TWO WOMEN ESCAPED OPERATIONS

Doctor Advised Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if the Vegetable Compound did not help me nothing but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me."—Mrs. WM. LOCKMAN, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the capsules and prescription recommended. I am doing all my work and have gained twenty pounds. I am taking the medicines still, but I feel fine. You have my permission to use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. MARY MARK, 37 Hamilton Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the commoner ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors, or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

The cities which will be represented in the association are Owatonna, Waseca, Janesville, New Richland, Adams, Austin, Blooming Prairie and Albert Lea.

Minneapolis—Three hundred motion picture theater owners of the state will gather at Hotel Radisson for the opening of the three-day convention and exposition of the Minnesota division of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America.

Minneapolis—J. D Mason, 71 years old, was found dead on the roof of his home at 3930 Central avenue, where he had lived alone for years. He had climbed to the roof to fix a chimney and the exertion was believed to have brought on an attack of heart trouble.

Elk River—Andrew Davis of Elk River, who represented this district in the Minnesota legislature for four sessions from 1907 to 1913, died suddenly at his home. He was the owner of a general store there and had been at his place of business until an hour before.

Minneapolis—Plans for the sixty fourth anniversary of the admission of Minnesota into the Union are being completed by a committee of the Minnesota Territorial Pioneers' association, George H. Hazzard, secretary of the association, announced. The dates will be given out later.

St. Paul—State grain experts of Minnesota, announced their decision to disregard the federal department of agriculture and appeal direct to congress for an equitable adjustment of spring wheat grades, should Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace fail to act on an appeal to be made to him in the near future, following a meeting in St. Paul of grain experts and members of the board of grain appeals.

Tracy—Martin O. Ekilsrud, aged [illegible] years, who saw hard service with the Union forces in the Civil war, died at his home here

YOU CAN WALK IN COMFORT

If you Shake Into Your Shoes some ALLEN'S FOOT=EASE, the Antiseptic, Healing powder for shoes that pinch or feet that ache. It takes the friction from the shoe and gives relief to corns and bunions, hot, tired, sweating, swollen feet. Ladies can wear shoes one size smaller by shaking Allen's Foot=Ease in each shoe.—Advertisement.

'Ard Blow for 'Erbert.

H. G. Wells told an interviewer the other day that prose which could be metaphrased into poetry was anathema to him. He will be heartbroken to learn that in contrasting his peaceful convalescence at Amalfi a year ago with his position today he perpetuated the following:

"My mind and my soul were all my own.
Now I live to the tune of a telephone."

—Boston Transcript.

Not a Debatable Point.

The Woman was calling on her next-door neighbor, and while seated in the living room the front doorbell gave a sharp ring. As it happened to be the maid's day out, the small daughter of the house answered the ring.

A penetrating voice reached us from the open door: "Is your mother engaged?"

Mary Ellen's shrill treble was a mingling of astonishment and indignation. "My mother engaged! No, ma'am; she's been married for years."

HAIR NETS AND ARMENIANS

Interesting Comparison Between Cost of the Former and the Clothing of the Latter.

The hair net milady wears would clothe several orphan children in Armenia for more than six months. That is, the cost of them would. Even Armenian orphans are sometimes more modest than milady.

Experts have figured that $1.80 will completely attire in unbleached muslin garments a child of the Far East relief orphanages of the Transcaucasian famine zones for six months. And experts also figure that milady's bill for hair nets during a like period would be in considerable excess of that amount, depending upon—well, upon several things. Hair nets are of uncertain durability under any circumstances. And milady is not always over cautious. Even an expert hesitates to hazard some guesses.

The Near East relief has just purchased 800,000 yards of unbleached muslin for summer garments for its wards in Transcaucasia. Where is there a bill-maddened household head ungallant enough to remark that a country full of orphans is not the greatest liability in the world?—Chicago Evening Post.

Query Stumps Smoker.

When James Murphy of Long Island City was arraigned in the Long Island City police court on a charge of smoking in a subway station, he was asked by the magistrate to give an explanation. Murphy said:

"Judge, I paid my fare, and had just filled my pipe and went down into the subway, and I had my pipe in my hand, and having no place to put it, I put it in my mouth. It's the first time it has ever happened, judge."

"All right, Murphy," answered Judge Doyle, "I will suspend sentence on you this time. But suppose you had an umbrella in your hand?"

Murphy grinned, and left the court room.

Some women marry in order to be independent, and some men get married for the same reason.

Any fish a boy catches tastes good to his way of thinking.

HAD TO HAVE CONSERVATORY

Most Parents of Six Marriageable Daughters Will Sympathize With This Home Seeker.

Charles M. Schwab said at a reception in New York:

"The world is hankering after disarmament and universal peace as the househunter hankered after a conservatory.

"A househunter was looking for a cheap, smallish house with a large conservatory. The agent showed him a number of houses, but as they all lacked conservatories the hunter turned them down. Finally the agent said in a disgusted tone:

"'Of course I thought your conservatory idea was just a whim. A cheap nine-room house with a conservatory! Why man, it ain't to be found. What's the reason you're so crazy after a conservatory, anyhow?'

"'Well, confidentially,' said the househunter, 'it's like this. Wife and I have got six daughters, and all six have had young fellows kind of sparkin' round 'em for a long, long time; so what we need, you see, is a conservatory. The girls want somewhere to do the ripenin' off in.'"

George's Future Home.

She was one of the richest widows in Washington and owned a magnificent home. Therefore the marine considered himself very fortunate when he won her heart.

They sat side by side in the Hostess house at Quantico, while the leathernecks and lassies swayed to the music of the latest waltz.

Finally she murmured: "George, dear, will I always have as fine a home as I've got now?"

George looked worried. "Why, you ain't thinkin' of movin', are you?" he asked.—The Leatherneck.

Marriage.

Woman's trip into the business world usually is an excursion. Permanent sojourn generally is prevented by Cupid.

How long should a girl remain in business before marrying?

About five years, advises Prof. Ralph L. Powers of the University of California.

Women in business are going to college—training themselves to be better home managers.

MADE POOR RENT COLLECTOR

Indianapolis Man Evidently Too Good-Natured to Succeed in That Line of Business.

Bachelor Joe Stokes, the druggist, never gets peace from his story-telling friends.

Joe owns some rental property in one of the industrial districts. Things have been a bit slow in industry lately and Joe has had trouble collecting his rents. His real estate broker constantly was returning word that he could not collect.

"I'll go out and collect it myself," Mr. Stokes said, a bit peevishly—that is, if Joe ever gets that way.

Anyhow, a day or two later Joe started out on a rental collection tour. Late that afternoon he returned to his drug store. An unusual little smile was working at the corners of Joe's mouth.

"Any luck?" one of the clerks inquired.

"Any luck? Boy, you're crazy! Instead of paying me, they borrowed money from me everywhere I went."—Indianapolis News.

Self-Supporting.

An attorney for Los Angeles advertised for a chauffeur. Some twenty-odd responded and were being questioned as to qualifications, efficiency and whether married or single. Finally, turning to a negro chap, he said:

"How about you, George; are you married?"

"Naw sir, boss, naw sir. Ah makes mah own livin'."—From Judge

When a man is continually talking about his troubles his neighbors never trouble about his talk.

When Will There Be A Disarmament of Dining Tables?

Suppose everybody would recognize the fact that there's no gain but much loss in keeping up hostilities with the stomach!

Suppose the ancient aggravation of improper food on indignant digestive organs should be settled with guarantees of sensible diet and tranquil digestion!

The saving would be beyond all possibility of counting.

Yet millions go on declaring war on the stomach and accepting war in return—loading up on starchy, heavy, unbalanced and highly-seasoned food at breakfast or lunch—and wondering why comfort, happiness and efficiency are out of reach.

A FOOD ECONOMY

Grape-Nuts makes a friend of the taste and an ally of the stomach.

There's a charm and satisfaction to this delicious food which prompts appetite to say, "There's a meal!" and digestion to answer, "Thank goodness, here's peace at last!"

Grape-Nuts is the perfected nutriment of wheat and malted barley—sweet, crisp, and wonderfully nourishing. It digests quickly, and provides the necessary elements, including the vital mineral salts, for body, nerve and brain.

Order Grape-Nuts from your grocer today, and let a delighted taste pass a treaty of peace along to an enthusiastic digestion and assimilation.

Marshall county receives $22000.00 from the new state road aid fund. It is one of the 83 out of 86 counties allotted more than it paid into the aid fund.

The money is for the improvement and upkeep of the most important roads in each county other than the so-called Babcock roads on which only trunk highway funds can be used. It forms a part of the grand total of more than $20,000,000. to be expended this year by counties and townships on the local roads in Minnesota.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hestitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

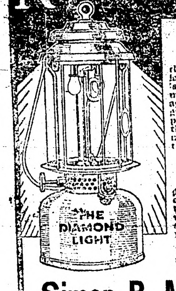
New 300 Candle Power Lantern



COSTS LESS THAN ½c PER HOUR TO OPERATE

This wonderful new Lantern operates on less than half the fuel required for one ordinary wick lantern and gives almost 100 times more light. It is brighter and cheaper than electricity or gas—the most remarkable scientifically developed light of the age. Gives a powerful white light, like daylight. A great light for farmers, contractors, hunters, trappers, or anyone with work to do at night. Just the thing to hang in the poultry house nights and mornings to lengthen the working days of the hens, thereby increasing egg production.

Burns Kerosene or Gasoline
Absolutely Safe

The Lantern operates on kerosene or gasoline, giving the same brilliant 300 candle power light with either fuel. It is absolutely safe, as there is positively no danger even if upset. Can be carried anywhere—indoors or outside. Won't blow out in the strongest wind. It is smokeless and odorless—no wicks to trim, no chimneys to clean.

Let me show you this handy Lantern at your home and demonstrate its 300 candle power brilliance. A demonstration doesn't obligate you in any way. Just drop a post card to—

Kill Cooking Odors.

A gift much appreciated by a housewife living in a small apartment where cooking odors are hard to conquer is an atomizer and a bottle of the best lavender water. After airing the rooms thoroughly spray once or twice with the lavender, which is not only refreshing and clean, but a real tonic for tired nerves.

He found a use for that hand presently, and, having sighed, lifted it to press it upon his brow, but did not complete the gesture. As his hand came within the scope of his gaze, leveled on the unfathomable distance, he observed that the fingers held a sheet of printed paper; and he remembered Florence. Instead of pressing his brow he unfolded the journal she had thrust upon him. As he began to read, his eye was lusterless, his gait slack and dreary, but soon his whole demeanor changed; it cannot be said for the better.

My Soul by Florence Atwater

When my heart is dreary
Then my soul is weary
As a bird with a broken wing
Who never again will sing
Like the sound of a vast amen
That comes from a church of men.

When my soul is dreary
It could never be cheery
But I think of my ideal
And everything seems real
Like the sound of the bright church bells peal.

Poems by Florence Atwater will be in the paper each and every Sat.

It may be assumed that the last of the news items was wasted on Noble Dill, and that he never knew of the neighborhood improvement believed to be imminent as a result of the final touches to the ditch at the Mr. Henry D. Vance backyard.

PART THREE

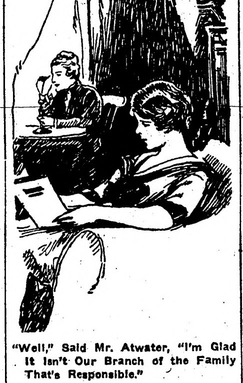
Throughout the afternoon adult members of the Atwater family connection made futile efforts to secure all the copies of that week's edition of the North End Daily Oriole. It could not be done.

It was a trying time for "the family." Great-aunt Carrie said that she had the "worst afternoon of any of 'em," because young Newland Saunders came to her house at two and did not leave until five; all the time counting over, one by one, the hours he'd spent with Julia since she was seventeen and turned out, unfortunately, to be a Beauty. Newland had not restrained himself, Aunt Carrie said, and long before he left she wished Julia had never been born—and as for Herbert Illingsworth Atwater, Junior, the only thing to do with him was to send him to some strict military school.

Florence's father telephoned to her mother from downtown at three, and said that Mr. George Plum and the ardent vocalist, Clairdyce, two of the suitors, had just left his office. They had not called in company, however, but coincidentally; and each had a copy of the North End Daily Oriole, already somewhat worn with folding and unfolding. Mr. Clairdyce's condition was one of desperate calm, Florence's father said, but Mr. Plum's agitation left him rather unpresentable for the street, though he had finally gone forth with his hair just as he had rumpled it, and with his hat in his hand. They wished the truth, they said: Was it true or was it not true? Mr. Atwater had told them that he feared Julia was indeed engaged, though he knew nothing of her fiance's previous marriage or marriages, or of the number of his previous children. They had responded that they cared nothing about that. This man Crum's record was a matter of indifference to them. All they wanted to know was whether Julia was engaged or not—and she was!

"The odd thing to me," Mr. Atwater continued, to his wife, "is where on earth Herbert could have got his story about this Crum's being a widower, or divorced, and with all these children. Do you know if Julia's written any of the family about these things and they haven't told the rest of us?"

"No," said Mrs. Atwater. "I'm sure she hasn't. Every letter she's written to any of us has passed all through the family, and I know I've seen every one of 'em. She's never said anything about him at all, except that he was a lawyer. I'm sure I can't imagine where Herbert got his awful information; I never thought he was the kind of boy to just make up unpleasant things."



"Well," Said Mr. Atwater, "I'm Glad It Isn't Our Branch of the Family That's Responsible."

Florence, sitting quietly in a chair nearby, with a copy of "Sesame and Lilies" in her lap, listened to her mother's side of this conversation with an expression of impersonal interest; and if she could have realized how completely her parents had forgotten (naturally enough) the details of their first rambling discussion of Julia's engagement, she might have felt as little alarm as she showed.

"Well," said Mr. Atwater, "I'm glad it isn't our branch of the family that's responsible. That's a comfort, anyhow, especially as people are reading copies of Herbert's manifesto all up and down the town, my clerk says. He tells me that over at the Cole company, where young Murdock Hawes is cashier, they only got hold of one copy, but typewrote it and multigraphed it, and some of 'em have already learned it by heart to recite to poor young Hawes. He's the one who sent Julia the three five-pound boxes of chocolates all at the same time, you remember."

"Yes," Mrs. Atwater sighed. "Poor thing!"

"Florence is out among the family, I suppose?" he inquired.

"No; she's right here. She's just started to read Ruskin this afternoon. She says she's going to begin and read all of him straight through. That's very nice, don't you think?"

He seemed to muse before replying. "I think that's very nice, at her age especially," Mrs. Atwater urged. "Don't you?"

"Ye—es! Oh, yes! At least, I suppose so. Ah—you don't think—of course she hasn't had anything at all to do with this?"

"Well, I don't see how she could. You know Aunt Fanny told us how Herbert declared before them all, only last Sunday night, that Florence should never have one thing to do with his printing-press, and said they wouldn't even let her come near it."

"Yes, that's a fact. I'm glad Herbert made it so clear that she can't be implicated. I suppose the family are all pretty well down on Uncle Joseph?"

"Uncle Joseph is being greatly blamed," said Mrs. Atwater primly. "He really ought to have known better than to put such an instrument into the hands of a boy of that age. Of course it simply encouraged him to print all kinds of things. We none of us think Uncle Joseph ever dreamed that Herbert would publish anything like this, and of course Uncle Joseph says himself he never dreamed such a thing; he's said so time and time again, all afternoon. But of course he's greatly blamed."

"I suppose there've been quite a good many of 'em over there blaming him?" her husband inquired.

"Yes—until he telephoned to a garage and hired a car and went for a drive. He said he had plenty of money with him and didn't know when he'd be back."

"Serves him right," said Mr. Atwater. "Does anybody know where Herbert is?"

"Not yet."

"Well—" and he returned to a former theme. "I am glad we aren't implicated. Florence is right there with you, is she?"

"Yes," she said. "She's right here, reading. You aren't worried about her, are you?" she added.

"Oh, no; I'm sure it's all right. I only thought—"

"Only thought what?"

"Well, it did strike me as curious," said Mr. Atwater; "especially after Aunt Fanny's telling us how Herbert declared Florence could never have a single thing to do with his paper again—"

"Well?"

"Well, here's her poem right at the top of it, and a very friendly item about her history mark of last June. It doesn't seem like Herbert to be so complimentary to Florence, all of a sudden. Just struck me as rather curious; that's all."

"Why, yes," said Mrs. Atwater, "it does seem a little odd—when you think of it."

"Have you asked Florence if she had anything to do with getting out this week's Oriole?"

"Why, no; it never occurred to me, especially after what Aunt Fanny told us," said Mrs. Atwater. "I'll ask her now."

But she was obliged to postpone the intended question. "Sesame and Lilies" lay sweetly in the chair that Florence had occupied, but Florence herself had gone somewhere else.

She had gone for a long, long ramble; and pedestrians who encountered her, and took note of her expression, were interested; and, as they went on their way, several of them interrupted the course of their meditations to say to themselves that she was the most thoughtful-looking young girl they had ever seen. There was a touch of wistfulness about her, too; as of one whose benevolence must renounce all hope of comprehension and reward.

Florence, in fact, had about reached the conclusion that far from the likelihood of her receiving praise for her thoughtful circulation of the news concerning her aunt Julia, there was a strong probability that dire results, wordy and otherwise, would ensue. Hence her extreme thoughtfulness.

Among those who observed her unusual expression was a gentleman of great dimensions disposed in a closed automobile that labored through mud-holes in an unpaved outskirt of the town. He rapped upon the glass in front of him, to get the driver's attention, and a moment later the car drew up beside Florence, as she stood in deep reverie at the intersection of two roads.

Uncle Joseph opened the door and took his cigar from his mouth. "Get in, Florence," he said. "I'll take you for a ride." She started violently; whereupon he restored the cigar to his mouth, puffed upon it, breathing heavily the while, as was his wont; and added: "I'm not going home. I'm out for a nice long ride. Get in."

Serious Loss Threatened.

Bobby's mother was in a hurry to keep an appointment, and Bobby had all he could do to keep up with her as she went up the street. Finally he called to her and said: "Mother, O mother! You're going to lose something!"

She turned around with rather an embarrassed look and said: "Why, Bobby, what am I losing?"

"You're going to lose your little boy," he answered, "if you don't watch out."

To Himself.

"What would you say if you saw your daughter sitting before a mirror and plucking her eyebrows?"

"I'd probably say a great deal," replied the subdued parent of a flapper.

"Indeed?"

"Yes, but it would be in the form of a soliloquy."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The flapper must think it rather hard to be criticized for merely doing the things she is taught by the daily example of her elders.

It is reported that wives in the Sudan have risen in cost from four spearheads to eight. Maybe somebody has been cornering the market.

Another thing that makes it so difficult to attend to one's own business is the swelling impulse to devote one's entire time to reform somebody else.

There are signs now and then that persons with money to invest should beware in particular of a certain class of promoter who has an oily tongue.

Lots of time it is not necessary to see a man's wife to know that she dresses in the height of fashion. The looks of her husband's clothes proves that.

If the flapper can't quite understand why she is being so roundly abused all of a sudden she need not worry. Nobody else really knows the reason either.

Since the radio, those persons who invariably were late in leaving home for the concert stay home and hope the concert won't be late.

Minneapolis—Revoking of the license of the American General Insurance company, Chicago, and denial of an application from the Co-operative League of America, Pittsburgh, to do business in Minnesota, is announced by the state securities commission.

Northfield—Platinum thieves who looted the vault at New Leighton hall, Carleton college, Northfield, obtained metal valued at $2,400.

Willmar—With the start of spring work in this section the farmers find the ground in good condition, as a rule, for seeding. Farm hands are in strong demand, more so than for several years. Wages have gone down, while prices on farm products generally have improved, so that the farmers feel they can afford to hire help.

St. Paul—Tree planting is necessary at this time of the year if Minnesota is to retain its standing as one of the leading forestry states, according to a pamphlet just issued by W. T. Cox, state forester. Farmers throughout the state are urged to co-operate.

Hendricks—Fire caused a heavy loss at the farm of Hans Drgre, four and a half miles northwest of here. A large barn on the place was burned, together with 23 head of cattle, four horses, some sheep and a large amount of grain and feed.

Mankato—Measurements of the Minnesota river are being taken this spring at several points along the stream, under the direction of the Minnesota State Drainage Department. The data secured will be used in plans for proposed flood control projects.

Owatonna—About 250 Steele county boys and girls are registered for the 1922 season of the Steele county boy's and girls' clubs, which start their projects for the year with junior short courses in Bloomington Prairie, Medford and Owatonna public schools.

St. Paul—Hearing on the plea of the mining companies for a permanent injunction restraining the state of Minnesota from collection on the occupational or so-called tonnage tax on iron ore has been postponed until April 24 before Judge Wilbur F. Booth in United States district court in St. Paul.

St. Paul—The State Pardon board has heard 15 applications for pardons and clemency but has taken no action in any cases. The board will visit the prisoners at Stillwater, St. Cloud and Shakopee before announcing any action.

Monticello—Judge A. E. Giddings has under advisement a petition for injunction restraining further work on the Rockford road brought by taxpayers who allege that the Wright county board of county commissioners has wasted money in road construction during the past two years. The state public examiner has been asked to make an investigation of the affairs of the board of commissioners.

St. Paul—Refunds of automobile taxes in cases of fire, theft or other loss of a car after the tax is paid, are not allowed by the Minnesota automobile tax law, Secretary of State Mike Holm is informed by the state legal department. Numerous claims have been made for a refund, and requests for permission to transfer a license to a new car.

Walker—Results achieved by the state sanatorium at Walker, contained in a recent report, places Minnesota first among all states in its work for prevention of the spread of tuberculosis. The institution has approximately 250 patients, and has been able to arrest 42 per cent of the incipient cases, 14 per cent of the moderately advanced cases and 2 per cent of the far advanced cases, the report shows.

Moorhead—Seeding in Clay county and the Red River valley will be three weeks late, O. N. Olson, Clay county agent, predicts. Ordinarily farmers are in the field April 1, but it will be 10 days or two weeks before they are able to seed, he said. Much of the valley land between Moorhead and Crookston is literally covered with water.

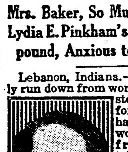
St. Paul—A form for a uniform accounting system for county fair associations of Minnesota has been adopted at a conference attended by county fair officers and state officials in St. Paul. The form will be copyrighted and made available for the 100 county fair associations of Minnesota. It is framed so prompt reports can be made so there will be no delay in forwarding the associations shares of the annual state aid of $140,000 for county fairs, which provides a maximum of $1,700 for any one county association.

Bemidji—Representatives of co-operative creameries in four more Minnesota counties were called together at Preston to organize District No. 4 of the statewide dairy marketing and service association. This district is the 12th in the state to organize for active work in consolidated shipping, wholesale purchasing and standardization of products to command the top prices on the eastern markets.

Willmar—The Methodist Episcopal church society of Willmar has decided to erect a new edifice here during the coming summ

SURE TO HELP SICK WOMEN

Mrs. Baker, So Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Anxious to Help Others



Lebanon, Indiana.—"I was completely run down from women's troubles and stomach trouble and for a long time was hardly able to do my work. I had some friends who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and they told me about it. I know what it has done for me and I recommend it to others, as I am sure it will be a great help to all sick women. It is a wonderful medicine, and I give you permission to use my testimonial and my photograph."—Mrs. EMMA BAKER, 310 S. East St., Lebanon, Indiana.

These letters recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound ought to convince women of the great worth of this medicine in the treatment of ailments to which they are often subject.

Mrs. Baker calls it "a wonderful medicine." If you are suffering from troubles women often have, or feel all run down, without any ambition or energy for your regular work, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It is a natural restorative and should help you as it has Mrs. Baker and many, many other women.

A man was driving a donkey to Bantry on a market day. The donkey began to sulk and back into the dike. A local justice of the peace happened to be coming on behind in his car, and overtaking them, he said:

"Well, my man, what's wrong with your donkey that he won't draw?"

"Oh, your honor, sir," said the laborer, "but he does draw."

"How so, my good man—what does he draw?"

"Why, your worship, he draws the attention of every donkey that passes."—London Tit-Bits.

It Was Embarrassing.

A handsome and wealthy young man from the East, visiting in the small town where my aunt lived as a girl, seemed interested in her and she was doing her best to outshine the other girls of the town.

With her hair done up in curlers and her stylish instep length skirt draped carefully to one side, she lay resting in the outdoor hammock one quiet summer day. Suddenly startled by the creaking of the gate and the unexpected appearance of the city lad, she overturned the hammock, which became wrapped about her knees and held her long legs straight up in the air. The young man, gallantly enough, rushed to her rescue; but she never saw him again.—Chicago Tribune.

Changes Will Be Made Effective July 17—Better Classes.

REVISE INSPECT'N RULES

Secretary Wallace Announces Revision in Wheat Grading After Studying Grain Situation With Agricultural Specialists.

Washington.—Various changes in wheat grades were announced by Secretary Wallace after an exhaustive study into the grain situation by agricultural specialists working with a special committee headed by Dr. John Lee Coulter of North Dakota and Professor L. A. Fitz of Kansas.

Certain changes will also be made, Mr. Wallace announced, in the inspection rules for the certification of hard red spring and durum wheat when received at Minneapolis and Duluth and other markets. These changes will require inspectors to state in addition to the grade of wheat, added adequate information as to the quality of foreign material other than dockage and the amount of moisture when effective as grading factors and as to what would be the grade of the wheat otherwise than on account of such grading factors.

Under this method, the secretary said, the virtues of the wheat which had not properly been recognized at country points would be pointed out as far as possible under commercial inspection conditions.

Effective on July 17.

Changes in the standard for white wheats will be made effective July 17, the classes common white and white club being combined into one class to be subdivided into three subclasses—hard white, soft white and western white—making the same application of the hard white and soft white substitute class at at present and designating as western wheat all white wheats or mixtures of white wheats containing more than 10 per cent clubs or Sonora. Soft red winter wheat known by the substitute class designation, red walla, will be designated by the term "western red," and the standards will be amended, effective on July 17.

Inspection rules also will be amended, it was stated, to require inspectors to state the grade that would be assigned to wheat if it were not weevily and in case of garlicky wheat to show the amount of garlic found, which the secretary said "will give basis for price information showing the cash prices paid at the principal terminal markets for wheat containing different quantities of garlic."

TURKS MASSACRE GREEKS

Greeks in Samsoun Are Massacred by Turks.

London.—A great fire and a massacre of Christians at Samsoun, on the Black Sea coast of Asia-Minor, were in progress nine days ago when the Italian steamer Barbita left there, the steamer's officers reported on her arrival at Patras, Greece, says an Athens dispatch to the London Times.

Turkish nationalist Bashi-Bazouks, headed by Turkish officers surrounded the Greek quarter and set it ablaze, shooting all who attempted to escape, the officers declared.

When the steamer sailed the large Greek church at Samsoun was ablaze and thousands of Greek women and children were rushing to the water front, seeking refuge on steamers.

The Barbita sent a wireless message to an American warship in the neighborhood urging her to hasten to the rescue.

TRAPPER BATTLES TOO MANY

Trapper Fights Timber Wolves; Kills 11, but Odds Against Him.

Winnipeg.—Torn to shreds by timber wolves, the remains of the body of Ben Cochrane, a trapper, were found north of Fisher river on Lake Winnipeg a few days ago, according to information just reaching here. All that remained of this grim northland tragedy were the trapper's bones, pieces of clothing and rifle with broken stock, scattered over a considerable distance.

But the bones of 11 huge timber wolves which were found near the spot where Cochrane was attacked bore testimony of the unfortunate man's fierce struggle for life against overwhelming odds.

Seven had been shot and four clubbed to death. Only when the rifle stock broke did the trapper apparently give up the fight and the pack bearing down on him tore his body to shreds.

Tornado Kills 8; Large Damage

Chicago.—Tornadoes in three central western states were believed to have killed five persons, injured dozens and left scores homeless with damage which will probably run into millions of dollars. Kansas, Indiana and Illinois were touched by the tornado, southern Illinois receiving the brunt of the disturbances.

The most damage was done in a small section, approximately 20 miles square, in central Illinois where four persons were killed in the vicinity of Centralia.

New Personnel in Holt State Bank

T. Morken of Minneapolis, arrived this week with the view of becoming interested in the Holt State Bank. Mr. Morken, with wealthy associates who are backing him, contemplates making several changes which will make this bank one of the strongest in this part of the country. Mr. Morken is a capable and efficient young man with several years experience in the banking business.

Good Creamery Patrons.

From now on I shall try to have the names of patrons and pounds of butterfat printed in the local paper of all the patrons delivering 100 lbs or more of butterfat for the month.

To do this accurately, especially where patron takes cash, or some cash, is quite a job for me, but very easy for the patron if he saves his stubs and will take the time to add them up at the end of the month, and if you find your butterfat for the month reaches the 100 lb. mark then leave your record with me and I will have them enumerated according to the amount and submit the list for publication. I believe this to be a good system and I know it is going to induce the patrons to try and be one of those who have their names among the 100 pound butterfat producers.

P. L. Anderson, Operator.

The following patrons delivered more than 100 lbs. of butterfat for the month of March 1922. There are 16 names, let us try to make it 25 for April.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hestitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

Peculiar Rock Formation.

All of the mountains of Montenegro, Bosnia, the Herzegovinan and the Dalmatian coast are made of a spongy limestone rock through which water seeps readily. Sewers are unnecessary, for if one digs down for fifteen feet in any part of the country one finds a natural opening, and anything thrown into that opening is immediately carried away. That is why no navigable streams have ever cut through Dalmatia's mountain wall. The water soaks through and doesn't need to cut.—Saturday Evening Post.

"I was takin' a walk," she said dubiously. "I haf to take a whole lot of exercise, and I ought to walk and walk and walk. I guess I ought to keep on walkin'."

"Get in," he said. "I'm out riding. I don't know when I'll get home."

Florence got in, Uncle Joseph closed the door, and the car slowly bumped onward.

"You know where Herbert is?" Uncle Joseph inquired.

"No," said Florence, in a gentle voice.

"I do," he said. "Herbert and your friend Henry Rooter came to our house with one of the last copies of the Oriole they were distributing to subscribers; and after I read it I kind of foresaw that the feller responsible for their owning a printing press was going to be in trouble. I had quite a talk with 'em and they hinted they hadn't had much to do with this number of the paper, except the mechanical end of it; but they wouldn't come out right full with what they meant. They seemed to have some good reason for protecting a third party, and said quite a good deal about their fathers and mothers being but mortal and so on; so Henry and Herbert thought they oughtn't to expose this third party—whoever she was. Well, I thought they better not stay too long, because I was compromised enough already, without being seen in their company, and I gave 'em something to help 'em out with the movies. You can stay at movies an awful long time, and if you've got money enough to go to several of 'em, why you're fixed for as long as you please. A body ought to be able to live a couple o' months at the movies for nine or ten dollars, I should think."

He was silent for a time, then asked: "I don't suppose your papa and mama will be worrying about you, will they, Florence?"

"Oh, no!" she said quickly. "Not in the least! There was nothin' at all for me to do at our house this afternoon."

"That's good," he said, "because before we go back I was thinking some of driving around by way of Texas."

Florence looked at him trustfully and said nothing. It seemed to her that he suspected something; she was not sure, but his conversation was a little peculiar—though not in the least sinister. Indeed, she was able to make out that he had more the air of an accomplice than of a detective. Nevertheless she was convinced that far, far the best course for her to pursue, during the next few days, would be one of steadfast reserve. And such a course was congenial to her mood, which was subdued, not to say apprehensive; though she was sure that her recent conduct, if viewed sympathetically, would be found Christian. The trouble was that probably it would not be viewed sympathetically. No one would understand how carefully and tactfully she had prepared the items of the Oriole to lead suavely up to the news of Aunt Julia's engagement and break it to Noble Dill in a manner to save his reason. Therefore, on account of this lack of comprehension, really the only wise and good thing to do was to claim nothing for herself, and allow Herbert and Henry to remain undisturbed in full credit for publishing the Oriole. This involved disappointment, it is true; nevertheless she decided to bear it.

She had looked forward to surprising "the family" delightfully. As they fluttered in exclamation about her, she had expected to say, "Oh, the poem isn't so much, I guess—I wrote it quite a few days ago and I'm writing a couple new ones now—but I did take quite a lot o' time and trouble with the rest of the paper, because I had to write every single word of it, or else let Henry and Herbert try to, and 'course they'd just of ruined it. Oh, it isn't so much to talk about I guess; it just sort of comes to me to do things that way."

Like so many other young unearthed rehearsals, this one was never to be played for an audience. Adults are undependable. Thirteen attempts to exercise a great philanthropy, and every grown person in sight, with the possible exception of Great-uncle Joseph, goes into wholly unanticipated fits of horror. Cause and effect have no relation: Fate operates without reasonable sequence—like a monkey.

And while Florence, thus pensively disturbed, sat beside fat Uncle Joseph during their long, long drive, relatives of hers were indeed going into fits; at least, so Florence would have described their gestures and incoherencies of comment. And straight into such a fitful scene did the luckless Herbert walk when driven home, after the movies, by thoughts of food, at about six that evening. Henry Rooter had strongly advised him against returning.

It may reasonably be felt that it required no particular gift of prophecy to hazard the prediction that in all probability a most unpleasant form of inquisition awaited Herbert on his return to his home. And Henry Rooter had the wisdom (and experience) of thirteen.

"You better not," he said, wisely. "Honest, you better not, Herbert!"

"Well, we got apple dumplings for dinner," Herbert said, his tone showing the strain of mental uncertainty. "Eliza told me this morning we were goin' to have 'em. I kind of hate to go, but I guess I better, Henry."

"You won't see any apple dumplings," Henry predicted.

"Well, I believe I better try it, Henry."

"You better come home with me. My father and mother'll be perfectly willing to have you."

"I know that," said Herbert. "But I guess I better go home and try it, anyhow, Henry. I didn't have anything to do with what's in the Oriole. It's every last word ole Florence's doing. I haven't got any more right to be picked on for that than a child."

"Yes," Henry admitted. "But if you go and tell 'em so, I bet she'd get even with you some way that would probably get me in trouble, too, before we got through with the job. I wouldn't tell 'em if I was you, Herbert!"

"Well, I wasn't intending to," Herbert responded gloomily; and the thought of each, unknown to the other, was the same, consisting of a symbolic likeness of Wallie Torbin at his worst. "I ought to tell on Florence; by rights I ought," said Herbert; "but I've decided I won't. There's no tellin' what she wouldn't do. Not that she could do anything to me, particularly—"

"Nor me, either," his friend interposed hurriedly. "I don't worry about anything like that! Still, if I was you I wouldn't tell. She's only a girl, we got to remember."

"Yes," said Herbert. "That's the way I look at it, Henry; and the way I look at it is just simply this: long as she's a girl, why, simply let her go. You can't tell what she'd do, and so what's the use to go and tell on a girl?"

"That's the way I look at it," Henry agreed. "What's the use? If I was in your place, I'd act just the same way you do."

"Well," said Herbert, "I guess I better go on home, Henry. It's a good while after dark."

"You're makin' a big mistake!" Henry Rooter called after him. "You won't see any apple dumplings, I bet a hundred dollars! You better come on home with me."

And Herbert no more than half opened his front door before he perceived that his friend's advice had been excellent. So clearly Herbert perceived this that he impulsively decided not to open the door any farther, but on the contrary to close it, and retire; and he would have done so, had not his mother reached forth and detained him. She was, in fact, just inside that door, in the hall with one of his great-aunts, one of his aunts, two aunts-by-marriage, and an elderly unmarried cousin, who were all just on the point of leaving. However, they changed their minds and decided to remain, now that Herbert was among them.

It really seemed that to many persons who were gathered there, apparently in important consultation, his appearance was distinctly welcome. His own feelings were in nowise mixed. They were distinctly apprehensive, and the volley of mingled questionings and reproaches which met him did not tend to remove them. Each member of the party seemed to feel in some manner particularly aggrieved.

Herbert's father joined them, a few minutes later, but it had already become clear to the son that the North End Daily Oriole was in one sense a thing of the past, though in another sense this former owner and proprietor was certain that he would never hear the last of it. However, on account of the life of blackmail and slavery now led by the members of the old regime, the Oriole's extinction was far less painful to Herbert than his father supposed; and the latter wasted a great deal of severity, insisting that the printing press should be returned that very night to Uncle Joseph. Herbert's heartiest retrospective wish was that the ole printing press had been returned to Uncle Joseph long ago.

"If you can find him to give it to!" Aunt Harriet suggested. "Nobody knows where he goes when he gets the way he did this afternoon when we were discussing it all with him. I only hope he'll be back tonight!"

"He can't stay away forever," Aunt Fanny remarked. "That garage is charging him five dollars an hour for the automobile he's in, and surely even Joseph will decide there's a limit to wildness some time!"

"I don't care when he comes back," Herbert's father declared grimly. "Whenever he does he's got to take that printing press back—and Herbert will be let out of the house long enough to carry it over. His mother or I will go with him."

Herbert bore much more than this; he had seated himself on the third step of the stairway in the hall, and maintained as much dogged silence as he could. Once, however, they got a yelp of anguish out of him. It was when Cousin Virginia said:

"Oh, Herbert, Herbert! How could you make up that terrible falsehood about Mr. Crum? And, think of it; right on the same page with your cousin Florence's pure little poem!"

Herbert uttered some sounds, totally incoherent but loud, and expressive of a supreme revulsion. The shocked audience readily understood that he liked neither Cousin Virginia's chiding nor Cousin Florence's poem.

"Shame!" said his father.

Herbert controlled himself. It could be seen that his spirit was not broken, even when Aunt Fanny mourned, shaking her head at him, smiling ruefully:

"Oh, if boys could only be girls!"

Herbert just looked at her.

"The worst thing," said his father—"that is, if there's any part of it that's worse than another—the worst thing about it is this about Noble Dill."

"What about that poor thing?" Aunt Harriet asked. "We haven't heard."

"Why, I walked up from downtown with old man Dill," said Mr. Atwater, "and the Dill family are all very much worried. It seems that Noble started downtown after lunch, as usual, and pretty soon he came back to the house and he had a copy of this awful paper that little Florence had given him—"

"Who gave it to him?" Aunt Fanny asked. "Who?"

"Little Florence."

"Why, that's curious," Cousin Virginia murmured. "I must telephone and ask her mother about that."

The brooding Herbert looked up, and there was a gleam in his dogged eye; but he said nothing.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Avoid World's Blind Alleys.

The young man of today does not have to follow the job his father had unless it's the job best suited for him. The wise youth finds out what most appeals to him, and then sees to it that he's the best fellow in that business. Such fellows rise to success in spite of handicaps. Then the world wonders and applauds. It's folly to remain cooped up with limitations when you might just as well be enjoying the fullest liberty. If by chance you get into a blind alley see to it that you get out at once.—Grit.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

A Trying Period Through Which Every Woman Must Pass

Practical Suggestions Given by the Women Whose Letters Follow

Phila., Pa.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I was weak, nervous, dizzy and had headaches. I was troubled in this way for two years and was hardly able to do my work. My friends advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I am very sorry that I did not take it sooner. But I have got good results from it and am now able to do my housework most of the time. I recommend your medicine to those who have similar troubles. I do not like publicity, but if it will help other women I will be glad for you to use my letter."—Mrs. FANNIE ROSENSTEIN, 882 N. Holly St., Phila., Pa.

Detroit, Michigan—"During the Change of Life I had a lot of stomach trouble and was bothered a great deal with hot flashes. Sometimes I was not able to do any work at all. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in your little books and took it with very good results. I keep house and am able now to do all my own work. I recommend your medicine and am willing for you to publish my testimonial."—Mrs. J. S. LIVERNOIS, 2051 Junction Avenue, Detroit, Mich.

The critical time of a woman's life usually comes between the years of 45 and 50, and is often beset with annoying symptoms such as nervousness, irritability, melancholia. Heat flashes or waves of heat appear to pass over the body, cause the face to be very red and often bring on headache, dizziness and a sense of suffocation.

Another annoying symptom which comes at this time is an inability to recall names, dates or other small facts. This is liable to make a woman lose confidence in herself. She becomes nervous, avoids meeting strangers and dreads to go out alone.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is especially adapted to help women at this time. It exercises a restorative influence, tones and strengthens the system, and assists nature in the long weeks and months covering this period. Let it help carry you through this time of life. It is a splendid medicine for the middle-aged woman. It is prepared from medicinal roots and herbs and contains no harmful drugs or narcotics.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

Business Brothers.

President Neilson of Smith college was making a rather tedious journey and was glad when the man who had the seat in front of his turned around and began a conversation. The man proved to be a traveling salesman and took it for granted that Doctor Neilson was another. "What's your line?" he asked. "Mine's skirts." "Well, so is mine," said the president of Smith.—New York Evening Post.

Unlucky Coincidence.

And here's one about the Quaker whose patriotism got the better of his religious scruples and who went to war. Crawling through No Man's land he spied a husky German. Raising his rifle to his shoulder, he shouted:

"Friend, 'tis most unfortunate for thee, but thee standeth just where I am gonig to shoot."

And he blazed away.—American Legion Weekly.

The Privileged Ones.

"The middle class of citizenship usually has the hardest time," said the economic investigator.

"Yes," replied Mr. Chuggins. "The man whose status in the scale of wealth is midway between the private car and the flivver is the only one who can't keep touring so as to spend every summer in Florida and every winter in Maine."

Mrs. Jones (sobbing)—The gas company collector was around today and got his money.

Jones—Well, that's good. What's the matter? Why weep over a paid bill?

Mrs. Jones—Oh, my dear, boo hoo—oh, dear! You see, he was held up just outside and came back and—oh, dear—collected it all over again.—New York Sun.

Postponed Repentance.

There was a man out in Wisconsin who went to a revival meeting and was pressed to repent. He wavered for a time and finally arose and said: "Friends, I want to repent and tell how bad I have been, but I dasn't do it when the grand jury is in session."

"The Lord will forgive," the revivalist shouted.

"Probably he will," answered the sinner, "but he ain't on that grand jury."—Boston Transcript.

HAPPENINGS IN GOPHER STATE

News From All Parts of Minnesota Given in Condensed Form.

EVENTS BRIEFLY TOLD

Where Busy Readers Will Find News From All Parts of State Tersely Chronicled for Their Benefit.

Chisholm—A farmer over north of Chisholm converted the tonneau of an old Ford into a moonshine still and has been having a rattling good time ever since.

Brainerd—Appearing under Brainerd Musical club auspices, the Apollo club of Minneapolis, male chorus of 125 voices, will sing here the latter part of May.

Virginia—Installation of a radio outfit in the club rooms of the Burton Pratt post of the American legion will be made soon, a committee working on plans for the feature announced.

Owatonna—J. Sampson of Faribault was awarded the contract for grading the Lemond road this season at 24 cents a yard. Last year 35 cents a yard was paid. Several concrete culverts are to be laid.

St. Paul—Chris. Heen, state dairy and food commissioner, has been requested by Governor Preus to discontinue his adverse activities against the Minnesota Co-operative Creamery association, Incorporated.

Brainerd—Brainerd will have a special city election May 25 to vote on issuing $50,000 bonds for water works extensions, improvements, etc. An amendment to the charter is also to be voted on to increase the tax levy for hydrant rental.

Minneapolis—Judge Robert Jamison of Minneapolis, who was chairman of the Republican state central committee when Knute Nelson was elected governor of Minnesota, fell dead in a hotel lobby in San Francisco.

Hibbing — State lands comprising 48,400 acres in northern Minnesota will be offered for sale this summer, according to maps, lists and other data received here. Included in the lands to be offered are tracts in 27 townships in St. Louis county.

Hibbing—Exploration work on many leases has been started in this section, and a number of new mines will be opened within the next few years, it is believed. Drilling and digging testpits on ore properties is now in progress.

St. Paul—Taxes in Minneosta, on the average, are too high, and the state's tax burden for improvements has grown more rapidly than the state's wealth or population, Ray P. Chase, state auditor, told members of the Lion's club.

Hibbing—Improvement of state owned land will be delayed until 335 improved tracts owned by the state have been sold, according to A. P. Silliman of the state land department board. This action was taken, he said, because improved idle lands are of no benefit.

St. Paul—Mike Holm, Secretary of State, announces that some of the license tags issued for 1922 are defective as to paint. The manufacturer is under bond to put out a good tag and if any car has tags upon which the paint fades, and will report to Mike Holm, Secretary of State, State Capitol, St. Paul, new tags will be furnished in exchange for the old ones.

Minneapolis—Dr. B. G. Anderson, assistant professor in prosthetic surgery in the University of Minnesota college of dentistry, has accepted a position as oral surgeon at Peking Union Medical college. He will leave July 1. Dr. Anderson is said to be the first qualified oral surgeon to be sent to China. He will be gone for five years.

Duluth—Negotiations for the purchase of the McDougall-Duluth Ship building plant of the United States Steel corporation, by the American Bridge company, are in progress. The deal involves millions, but officials here refuse to discuss the matter, although they do not deny that negotiations are in progress.

Duluth — Suits aggregating more than $500,000 were filed in district court by 46 plaintiffs against the United States railroad administration, the Duluth, Winnipeg & Pacific, Cloquet Lumber company, the Duluth & Northeastern, the Cloquet Tie and Post company and the Duluth and Iron Range railway for losses sustained in the forest fires of 1918.

St. Paul—Initial steps in the organization of a division of child hygiene, the depadtment of state government that will conduct the work provided for by the Sheppard-Towner act, was taken at a meeting of the state board of health, held in the Minnesota club. With the federal aid granted by the act, Minnesota is asured of $20,000 annually to carry an educational campaign to reach mothers and prospective mothers of the state.

St. Paul—A Duroc Jersey pig, bred and raised at University Farm, St. Paul, was grand champion barrow at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock show at Fort Worth, Texas, March 5 to 12, according to E. F. Ferrin, at the University of Minnesota.

Virginia—Arrangements are being made by August Neubauer, county agent, with the agricultural college of the University of Minnesota to conduct a county-wide land clearing field day next month. According to present plans, a land clearing train from the university will make a tour of northern Minnesota May 8 to 20.

Notice!

On recent inspection of Route 1 from this office I find that a large majority of the boxes do not conform to official specifications required by the Department. Of 83 boxes only 9 were in good condition; 68 were without name and 16 were much too low. In a few days we are sending notices to all patrons whose boxes are not approved boxes.

If you receive a notice won't you please remedy the defect as soon as possible. If you do not we have to report you to the Department.

The roads are much improved and I wish to thank all patrons who cut weeds or in any way helped this improvment. We are anxious to give you the best service possible and if you do your bit we promise to do the best we can.

Let us try to make our route one that will be a credit to our community.

POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK IS OBSERVED

May 1 Sees Inaugurated First General Campaign of Kind in Service.

Without the Postal Service, business would languish in a day, and be at a standstill in a week. Public opinion would die of dry rot. Sectional hatred or prejudice only would flourish, and narrow-mindedness thrive.

It is the biggest distinctive business in the world and it comes nearer to the innermost interests of a greater number of men and women than any other institution on earth. No private business, however widespread, touches so many lives so often or sharply; no church reaches into so many souls, flutters so many pulses, has so many human beings dependent on its ministrations.

"Postal Improvement Week" has been set for May 1, by the Postmaster General. This is the first general campaign of its kind in the Postal Service for several decades. Business men and their organizations, large users of the mail, newspapers, motion pictures, advertisers, and the entire organization of 326,000 postal workers are to be enlisted in this country-wide campaign of interest in postal improvements. Your help is vital. Address your letters plainly with pen or typewriter. Give street address. Spell out name of State, don't abbreviate. Put your return address in the upper left hand corner of envelope (not on the back) and always look at your letter before dropping in the mail to see if it is properly addressed. This care in the use of the mails is for your benefit and speeds up the dispatch and delivery of mail matter.

If you have any complaints of poor service make them to your postmaster. He has instructions to investigate them and report to the department.

COURTESY

It sticks in human relations like postage stamps on letters. The POST OFFICE DEPARTMENT expects it to be used by its postmasters and employees in dealing with the public.

Help them in its use beginning with POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK, May 1-6, 1922.

THANK YOU

WITHOUT STREET ADDRESS YOUR MAIL IS DELAYED AT OFFICE OF DELIVERY

The Dead Letter Office has been in existence ever since Ben Franklin started our postal service. Even then people addressed mail to Mr. Ezekiel Smithers, "Atlantic Coast," and expected Ben to know just where Zeke lived.

Perhaps they had Zeke's address in letters up in the garret—maybe a chest full of 'em, but then it was easier to let Ben hunt Zeke. Today people are addressing letters to John Smith, New York, N. Y., or Chicago, Ill., thinking Uncle Sam can locate him, which is just as incomplete as was Zeke's address of yore. The Postoffice Department asks you to put the number and street in the address. It helps you.

Trinidad Col.

How do you expect the Postal Clerk to know whether you mean Trinidad, California, or Trinidad, Colorado? ALWAYS SPELL OUT THE NAME OF THE STATE IN FULL IN THE ADDRESS.

"MORE BUSINESS IN GOVERNMENT"

This apt phrase was used in President Harding's first message to Congress and applies particularly in postal management where postmasters are being impressed with the fact that they are managers of local branches of the biggest business in the world.

HERE COMES A STRANGER!

Let's make our post office look neat, Mr. Postmaster. Straighten up the rural letter box, Mr. Farmer. Tidy up some, Mr. Rural Carrier. First impressions are lasting. Maybe Mr. Stranger, taking notice of these improvements, will come back, bringing you benefits. Start these with "POSTAL IMPROVEMENT WEEK" May 1-6.

HUMANIZING THE POSTAL SERVICE

"There is no unimportant person or part of our service. It is a total of human units and their co-operation is the key to its success. In its last analysis, postal duties are accommodations performed for our neighbors and friends and should be so regarded, rather than as a hired service performed for an absentee employer."—Postmaster General Hubert Work.

Mrs. A. L. Halvorson and children of Hillsboro came one day last week to visit her sister, Mrs. Docken, for sometime.

Mrs. Arvid Carlson and son Alton have been visiting here this week while Mr. Carlson has been over to Newfolden.

We are sorry to report that Miss Ruth Knutson seems to be slowly growing weaker and medicine does not seem to help her very much.

Johnny Sollom was able to sit a few minutes in a chair for the first time, since his sickness, on Wednesday, and is getting along as well as could be expected.

R. A. Holmgren and Miss Ingeborg Nelson took her mother to the Warren hospital Saturday, where she expects to receive treatment for sometime.

Alfred Newton came Saturday and stayed over night at the Selmer Reierson home, returning home the next day accompanied by Clifford Flak who has employment there.

Get rid of that indigestion, stomach trouble and nervousness, build up your system and regain that lost weight. Take Tanlac. C. H. Gunheim.

Mrs. Ordahl invited ten of the little friends of their daughter, Hildred to attend a party at the parsonage Tuesday afternoon given in honor of Hildred's tenth birthday.

Gunder Sorter went to Grand Forks one day last week and brot his wife back home with him Monday from the hospital where she had been a patient for the last three weeks. We are pleased to report that Mrs. Sorter is recovering fully as fast as could be expected.

The school board met Tuesday night and re-elected all of the teachers for another year, at the same wages except Prof. Netteland who was granted a raise of $100.00.

They also voted to employ another high school teacher for next year.

Death of Joseph Larson

Joseph Larson died shortly before six o'clock Monday morning, aged 22 years and three months. He had been sick for a long time with heart disease and other complications, which are attributed to a severe attack of the flu during the fall and winter of 1918.

The funeral services were held Thursday afternoon at the Synod church, Revs. Ordahl and Raaum officiating.

The remains were laid to rest in Holt cemetery beside his father and brother.

The News joins the friends in extending sincere sympathy to the grief stricken mother, brothers and sisters of this young man who was called Home so early in life.

Miss Amanda Mickelson returned home Tuesday from a couple of weeks visit with relatives and friends at Crookston.

The weather man tried hard several times this week to give us rain, but the rains so far this spring have not amounted to very much.

A well cultivated field of corn, potatoes, rutabagas, mangels, etc., will make a good field next year for any kind of small grain.

If you are all run down, weak and nervous and feel out of sorts with everything and everybody, get back in line by taking Tanlac. C. H. Gunheim.

Haldor Erickson, an aged resident of Thief River Falls, died suddenly of heart failure last week Thursday at the Carl Olson home, a few miles northeast of Holt.

Northern Minnesota is not the only place that has had a late season this spring, as many other section of country are correspondingly late with the springs work.

A move is on foot by sportsmens clubs to get a bill thru congress, wherby money can be raised for purchasing Thief and Mud lake bottoms for breeding places for water game birds.

Iver Engebretson has sold his tools to Knute Hagen of Thief River Falls who takes immediate possession and will open a shoe and harness repair shop in the Kolden building. Mr. Hagen has had over twenty years experience in this business and was located for over six years at Grygla.

Every farmer should plant a few acres of corn for cow feed, then if the season is favorable and he succeeds in raising some ears of corn, he is that much ahead. Then don't forget that the highway people recommend the planting of 8 or 10 rows of corn 50 to 100 feet north and west of all roads where the snow drifts. Leave the stalks standing and they will keep the most of the snow out of the road.

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air-tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

THANKFUL FOR A LITTLE CHILD

Mrs. Mertz Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her

Kutztown, Pa.—"I wish every woman who wants children would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has done so much for me. My baby is almost a year old now and is the picture of health. She walked at eleven months and is trying to use her little tongue. She can say some words real nice. I am sending you her picture. I shall be thankful as long as I live that I found such a wonderful medicine for my troubles."—Mrs. CHARLES A. MERTZ, Kutztown, Pa.

Many cases of childlessness are curable. Perhaps yours may be. Why be discouraged until you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a faithful trial?

Spoken and written recommendations from thousands of women who have found health and happiness from its use have come to us. We only tell you what they say and what they believe.

We believe that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is so well adapted to the conditions which might cause your trouble that good will come to you by its use.

Merit is the foundation of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It has behind it a record of nearly fifty years.

The Tides of Fundy.

Extraordinary stories are sometimes told of the immense tides in the Bay of Fundy. The scientific facts in regard to them have been published by the Canadian geological survey. The bay is about 145 miles long and gradually narrows and becomes shallower as it penetrates the land. The upper part divides into two main branches, and several small side bays exist. The highest tides at the mouth of the main bay reach 18 feet. Going up the bay, they increase in height. At Digby Neck they attain 22 feet, and St. John, 27 feet, at Petitcodiac river, 46 feet, and at Noel river, in Cobequid bay, 53 feet, the maximum. Some branch bays are left empty at ebb tide.

"Go on," Aunt Harriet urged. "What did Noble do?"

"Why, his mother said he just went up to his room and changed his shoes and tie—"

"I thought so," Aunt Fanny whispered, hurriedly, but solemnly. "Crazy."

"And then," Mr. Atwater continued, "he left the house, and she supposed he'd gone down to the office; but she was uneasy, and telephoned his father. Noble hadn't come. He didn't come, all afternoon, and he didn't go back to the house; and they telephoned around to every place he could go, that they know of—and they couldn't find him or hear anything about him," Mr. Atwater coughed, and paused.

"But what," Aunt Harriet cried, "what do they think's become of him?"

"Old man Dill said they were all pretty anxious," said Mr. Atwater. "They're afraid Noble has—disappeared."

Aunt Fanny screamed.

Then, in perfect accord, they all turned to look at Herbert, who rose and would have retired upstairs had he been able.

As that perturbing evening wore on, word gradually reached the most outlying members of the Atwater family connection that Noble Dill was missing. Ordinarily, this bit of news would have caused them no severe anxiety. Noble's person and intellect were so commonplace—"insignificant" was the term usually preferred in his own circle—that he was considered to be as nearly negligible as it is charitable to consider a fellow being. True, there was one thing that set him apart; he was found worthy of a superlative when he fell in love with Julia Atwater. Of all the large and ardent group in like condition, he obtained conspicuousness as "The Worst." Of course, this distinction caused him to become better known and more talked about than in his earlier youth.

However, the eccentricities of a person in such an extremity of love are seldom valued except as comedy; and even then with no warmth of heart for the comedian, but rather with an incredulous disdain; so it is safe to say that under other circumstances Noble might have been missing, indeed, and few of the Atwaters would have missed him. But as matters were, they worried a great deal about him, fearing that a rash act on his part might reflect notoriety on themselves through their beautiful relative—and through the North End Daily Oriole. And when nine o'clock came and Mrs. Dill reported to Herbert's father, over the telephone, that nothing had yet been heard from her son, the pressure of those who were blaming the Oriole more than Julia became so wearing that Herbert decided he would rather spend the remaining days of his life running away from Wallie Torbin than put in any more of such a dog's evening as he was putting in—thus he defined it.

He made a confession; that is to say, it was a proclamation. He proclaimed his innocence. He began the history of it with a description of events distinctly subsequent to the little game with Patty Fairchild, and explained how he and Henry had felt that their parents would not always be with them, and as their parents wished them to be polite, they had resolved to be polite to Florence. Proceeding, he related in detail her journalistic exploit.

Of the matter in hand he told the perfect and absolute truth—and was immediately refuted, confuted and demonstrated to be a false witness by Aunt Fanny, Aunt Carrie, and Cousin Virginia, who had all heard him vehemently declare, no longer ago than the preceding Sunday, that he and his partner had taken secure measures to prevent Florence from ever again setting foot within the newspaper building. In addition, he was quite showered with definitions; and these, though so variant, all sought to phrase but the one subject; his conduct in seeking to drag Florence through the mire, when she was absent and could not defend herself. Poor Florence would answer later in the evening, he was told, severely; and though her cause was thus championed against the slander it is true that some of them felt stirrings of curiosity in regard to Florence. In fact, there was getting to be something like a cloud upon her reputation. There were several important things for her to explain; among them, her taking it upon herself to see that Noble received a copy of the Oriole, and also her sudden departure from home and rather odd protraction of absence therefrom. It was not thought she was in good company. Uncle Joseph had telephoned from a suburb that they were dining at a farmhouse and would thence descend to the general region of the movies.

That word of any sort had come from Uncle Joseph was in a measure reassuring, but the air of perturbation and gloom was not noticeably removed. The general impression might be summed up in the words of his sister.

"Nobody knows what that man'll do, when he decides to!" Aunt Carrie said nervously. "Letting the poor child stay up so late! She ought to be in bed this minute, even if it is Saturday night. Or else she ought to be here to listen to her own bad little cousin trying to put his terrible responsibility on her shoulders."

One item of her description of himself the badgered Herbert could not bear in silence, although he had just declared that since the truth was so ill-respected among his persecutors he would open his mouth no more until the next day. He passed over "bad," but furiously stated his height in feet, inches and fractions of inches.

Aunt Fanny shook her head in mourning. "That may be, Herbert," she said gently, "But you must try to realize it can't bring poor young Mr. Dill back to his family."

Again Herbert just looked at her. He had no indifference more profound than that upon which her strained conception of the relation between cause and effect seemed to touch; and, from his point of view, to be missing should be the lightest of calamities. It is true that he was concerned with the restoration of Noble Dill to the rest of the Dills so far as such an event might affect his own incomparable misfortunes—but not otherwise. He regarded Noble and Noble's disappearance merely as unfair damage to himself. He continued to look at this sorrowing great-aunt of his, and his thoughts made his strange gaze appear to her so hardened that she shook her head and looked away.

"Poor young Mr. Dill!" she said. "If someone could only have been with him, and kept talking to him until he got used to the idea a little!"

Cousin Virginia nodded comprehendingly. "Yes, it might have tided him over," she said. "He wasn't handsome, nor impressive, of course, nor anything like that, but he always spoke so nicely to people on the street. I'm sure he never harmed even a kitten, poor soul!"

"I'm sure he never did," Herbert's mother agreed, gently. "Not even a kitten. I do wonder where he is now."

But Aunt Fanny uttered a little cry of protest. "I'm afraid we may hear," she said, "any moment!"

And the most tragic news of Noble Dill these sympathetic women could have heard would have surprised them little; they had unanimously set their expectation in so romantically pessimistic a groove. But if the truth of his whereabouts could have been made known to them, as they sat thus together at what was developing virtually into his wake, with Herbert as a compulsory participant, they would have turned the session into a riot of amazement. Noble was in the very last place (they would have said, when calmer) where anybody in the world could have madly dreamed of looking for him! They would have been right about it. No one could have expected to find Noble tonight inside the old, four-square brick house of Mr. H. I. Atwater, Senior, chief of the Atwaters and father of the disturbing Julia. This was an old man of rigidly limited sympathies; and his opinion of Noble Dill had become almost notorious; here was no bosom of refuge for a lorn Noble needing solace, nor was his house for any moment hospitable with Julia out of it. Moreover, Mr. H. I. Atwater, Senior, was not at present in the house; he had closed and locked it yesterday, giving the servants a week's vacation and telling them not to return till he sent for them; and had then gone out of town to look over a hominy mill he thought of buying. And yet, as the wake went on, there was a light in the house, and under that light sat Noble Dill.

IRWIN MYERS 1921

And Under That Light Sat Noble Dill.

Returning home, after Florence had placed the shattering news within his hand, Noble had changed his shoes and his tie. He was but a mechanism; he had no motive. The shoes he put on were no better than those he took off; the fresh tie was no lovelier than the one he had worn; nor had it even the lucidity to be a purple one, as evidence of grief. No; his action was, if so viewed, "crazy," as Aunt Fanny had called it. Agitation first took this form; that was all. Love and change of dress are closely allied; and in happier times when Noble came home from work and would see Julia in the evening, he usually changed his clothes. No doubt there is some faint tracery here, too indistinct to repay contemplation.

When he left the house he walked rapidly down-town, and toward the end of this one-mile journey he ran; but as he was then approaching the railway station, no one thought him eccentric. He was, however; for when he entered the station he went to a bench and sat looking upward for more than ten minutes; then rose and went to a ticket-window and asked for a time-table.

"What road?" the clerk inquired.

"All points south," said Noble.

He placed the time-table, still folded, in his pocket, rested an elbow on the brass apron of the window, and would have given himself up to reflections, though urged to move away. Several people wishing to buy tickets had formed a line behind him and they perceived that Noble had nothing more to say to the clerk. The latter encouraged their protests, and even went so far as to exclaim, "For heaven's sake! Can't you let these folks buy their tickets?" And since Noble still did not move: "My gosh, haven't you got no feet?"

"Feet? Oh, yes," said Noble gently. "I'm going away." And went back to his seat.

After a while he sought to study his time-table. Ordinarily, his mind was one of those able to decipher and comprehend railway time-tables; he had few gifts, but this was one of them. It failed him, now; and he wandered back to the ticket-window, and, after urgent coaching, eventually took his place at the end instead of at the head of the line that waited there. In his turn he came again to the window, and departed from it after a conversation with the clerk which left the latter in unconscious accord with Aunt Fanny Atwater's commiserating adjective, though the clerk's own pity was expressed in argot. "The poor nut!" he explained to his next client. "Wants to buy a ticket on a train that don't pull out till ten thirty-five tonight; and me fillin' it all out, stampin' it and everything, what for! Turned out all his pockets and couldn't come nearer'n eight dollars short o' the price! Where you want to go?"

Noble went back to his bench and sat there for a long time, though there was no time long or short for him. He was not yet consciously suffering greatly; nor was he thinking at all. True, he had a dim, persistent impulse to action—or else why should he be at the station?—but for the clearest expression of his condition it is necessary to borrow a culinary symbol; he was jelling. The state of shock was slowly dispersing while a perception of anguish as slowly increased. He was beginning to swallow nothing at intervals, and the intervals were growing shorter.

INVENTOR OF VANE UNKNOWN

But Devices for Showing the Direction of the Wind Have Been in Use for Centuries.

The origin of the weather vane is unknown. One of the most ancient of which there is any record is that mentioned by Vitruvius, and the ruins of the Tower of the Winds, of which he speaks, still stands in Athens. This building was erected about a century before the Christian era. He writes:

"Those who have paid most attention to the winds make them eight in number, and particularly Andronicus Cyrrhestes, who built at Athens an octagonal tower of marble and cut on each face the figure of the several winds, each looking to the quarter from which that wind blows.

"On the tower he placed a marble column, on which was a Triton of bronze holding a rod in his right hand. And he contrived it that the figure moved round with the wind so that it constantly stood opposite it, and the rod, which was above the figure, showed in what direction the wind blew."

Effigies of many creatures have done duty as vanes. Man himself has not escaped. The female form divine even has not been spared this indignity. Such a sentiment as is expressed in the sentence, "Woman fickle as the wind," may have been in the mind of Theodosius the Great when he erected at Constantinople, in the Fourth century, the vane called the "Lady of the Winds."

Don't think that target practice will enable you to shoot folly as it flies

FIGHT RENEWED ON BONUS BILL

Flourish Political Pistol At Congress And Threaten To Pull Trigger If Bill Passes.

LEGION FIGHTS CLEAN

Legions Making a Clean Fight for the Bonus Bill Although Suspected of Holding Political Pistol At Congress.

Washington.—Business and financial interests of the United States, "who contributed least and profited most by the war are waving a political pistol at congress and threatening to pull the trigger if that body passes the adjusted compensation bill for servicemen, according to Hanford MacNider, national commander of the American Legion.

The assertion was made in a statement issued by Mr. MacNider denying that the Legion had any thought of trying to coerce congress.

"Enemies of the bill have declared that the Legion is uttering threats, that it held a politcal pistol at the head of congress. Not the slightest proof of the truth of these statements has been attempted, which has been wise because not a vestige of such proof exists.

"Pistol Gold Plated."

"But now a real effort to coerce congress reveals itself, and the effort is being made by the intrenched financial interests. These interests are flourishing the political pistol, and a gold plated one at that."

Mr. MacNider made reference to the published threat of the financial interests of "Republican persuasion that if the Republican congress passes the adjusted compensation bill there will be no contribution from that quarter to the Republican campaign funds." In the words of one dispatch, the commander declared Adams of the Republican national committee that if congress passes the bonus, it may get some soldier votes but it will lose the support of business.

Legion Fight Clean.

"The Legion has made a clean fight based on the merit, justice, equity and economic soundeness of this legislation and not one scintilla of evidence has been produced to dispute these contentions," Mr. MacNider said.

BOY GETS KILLED IN DUEL

Spills Soup, Boy Is Challenged to Duel and Accepts.

New York.—No witch of by-gone days ever concocted brew in a mystic caldron more potent in disagreement and discontent than was contained in a tomato soup can on a camp fire over which two boys fought a duel to death.

In the woods in Old Queen's village four boy campers banked stones for an Indian style fire. Victor Janouldidich, 16, was cook and spilled a can of tomato soup. Camp Chieftan Jacon Kabitz, eager for breakfast, chided his chef and the challenge to a rifle duel ensued.

The lads got ready with small calibre rifles. As they sneaked through the woods in Indian style, the command to fire was given and both rifles popped. Both missed.

Reloading, firing and missing went on for 10 minutes; then a shot hit Jacon, killing him instantly. Victor was arraigned and is held without bail on a homicide charge.

FARM CREDIT TO BE REVISED

Legislation to provide Six Remedies for Depletive Farm Credits.

Washington.—Legislation to provide six permanent remedies for defects in the agricultural credit system of the country, was recommended by President Harding to Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the War Finance corporation in a report, based upon his recent survey of conditions in the west.

"Pending enactment of the proposed legislation and the erection of required machinery for its administration, Mr. Meyer recommended that the period during which the corporation might make loans be extended to January 1, 1923. Mr. Meyer reported that on his western trip, undertaken at the suggestion of the president, he found marked improvement and that "everywhere hope and confidence are taking the place of the despair which six months ago was so widely prevalent."

"The experience of the past year, has, however," he said, "revealed certain defects in our agricultural credit system, which are of a more fundamental nature, and which cannot be remedied by temporary measures."

Cheaper Fertilizers Are Discovered.

Washington.—A secret process of making cheaper fertilizers has been discovered and is intended for commercial use at the government's nitrate plant at Muscle Shoals, Ala., W. B. Mayo, chief engineer of Henry Ford, told the senate agricultural committee, when it began examination of the Ford modified proposal and lease of the Muscle Shoals properties.

Mr. Mayo declined, when questioned regarding the discovery, to give the committee any detailed information

Is It Genius or Push?

Norman Davey, in "The Pilgrim of the Smile," tells the story of the waiter who took the impresario's place one night and thrilled London with his violin. Apropos of which the successful manager gives his ideas about genius:

"If he's a genius he'll push his way; and when he's pushed his way and made a stir I'll pick him up. Aw, you don't know what genius is; you talk like a bally school girl. Genius is not being able to play or paint or write or any d—d thing—thousands can do that. It's push man, push—genius is guts."

The trouble with some girls is that they are only giddy when they think they are gay.

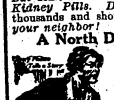
WHY THAT BAD BACK?

Does spring find you miserable with an aching back? Do you feel lame, stiff, tired, nervous and depressed? Isn't it time then, you found out why you are unable to enjoy these fine spring days? Likely your kidneys have weakened. Winter is hard on the kidneys. Colds and chills and a heavier diet with less exercise tax them heavily. It's little wonder spring finds you with backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and bladder irregularities. But don't be discouraged. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A North Dakota Case



Mrs. A. Deckelmann, Cando, N. Dak., says: "I suffered dreadfully with kidney trouble. My back was weak and lame and ached constantly just over my kidneys. When bending, sharp pains caught me and I could hardly straighten again. I had nervous headaches and dizzy spells. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me and I have never needed a kidney remedy since."

The humorist contributor looked in upon the editor of Answers upon his busy day. The humorist contributor should not have looked in upon the editor of Answers on his busy day. The editor of Answers can't feel humorous and busy at the same time.

What was more, the humorist contributor would not go.

At last the editor of Answers decided to stop being busy for one moment and be sarcastic.

"That was a gem, that joke you sent me," he said in his usual dry tone.

The contributor drew himself up with pride.

"Sir," he said, "you flatter me!"

"Not at all," replied the editor. "You should have seen it sparkle when I put it on the fire!"—Answers.

Thomas Robertson, an official of the Eagles club, recently sent notices to several lodge members appointing them members of a committee to visit the sick. The next day one of those thus notified halted Robertson on the street.

"I'm chosen for the sick committee?" he asked.

"Yes—why not?"

"Well," the member replied, "I don't mind serving, but my business—"

"Can't you serve after business hours?" Robertson interrupted. "By the way, what's your business?"

"I'm—I'm an undertaker."

"Excused," said Robertson.—Kansas City Star.

THIS IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY

If you have been waiting and hoping for the day when you could get better tires for less money, now is your time.

Goodyear Tires are at their best. They are bigger, heavier, and more durable than ever. Their quality is at its highest level.

And these better Goodyear Tires today sell for less money than at any previous time in our history.

The prices listed below established a new low level for Goodyears, averaging more than 60 per cent less than the prices of Goodyear Tires in 1910.

These would be low prices for any good tires. They are almost unbelievably low for Goodyears.

You have never had such an opportunity before to buy fine and lasting tire performance at such low cost. Call on your Goodyear Service Station Dealer, and take advantage of this opportunity today.

Notice!

On recent inspection of Route 1 from this office I find that a large majority of the boxes do not conform to official specifications required by the Department. Of 83 boxes only 9 were in good condition; 68 were without name and 16 were much too low. In a few days we are sending notices to all patrons whose boxes are not approved boxes.

If you receive a notice won't you please remedy the defect as soon as possible. If you do not we have to report you to the Department.

The roads are much improved and I wish to thank all patrons who cut weeds or in any way helped this improvment. We are anxious to give you the best service possible and if you do your bit we promise to do the best we can.

Let us try to make our route one that will be a credit to our community.

Death of Miss Ruth Knutson

Miss Ruth Knutson died at 6 o'clock Thursday morning May 11th, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. K. T. Knutson.

Ruth Knutson was born Jan. 30th 1895, at Ada, Minn. She lived there and at Gary with her parents until about 13 years ago when they moved to this county.

She had been sick for the past few years with Brights disease and death came as a welcome relief from her suffering, which she bore with wonderful patience. She was a sincere Christian and was prepared to meet her Savior and is now reaping the Heavenly reward.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and at the Lutheran church at 3 o'clock, Rev. Ordahl officiating and the interment will be made in the Holt cemetery.

The News joins the many friends of the family in extending the deepest sympathy in their hour of sorrow.

Holt Rural School Play-Day

Pupils from four rural schools of the vicinity of Holt participated in the second annual rural school playday of the section which was held at the school in Dist. 59 on Friday, May 5th. This was one of a series of such events that are being held in the county under the supervision of the Co., Supt., of Schools and is to be followed by a County Play-Day at Warren on June 14, at which time the best athletes from each of the sections will meet at the County Seat and contest for the County honors. Those selected to represent the Holt section in the County Contests are: Albert Swenson, Hughey Engstrom, Regina Fier, Palma Udstrand and Evelyn Jahr. Berthine Gysland, teacher. Substitutes: Hazel Sorum, Bernhard Udstrand, Oscar Lunke, Roy Sorum, Pearl Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Rene Werner visited at the R. L. Adams home Sunday.

Miss Olava Sollom has been spending a few days at home this week.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Docken were business visitors in Thief River Falls Tuesday.

You get your money's worth when you buy Tanlac, because it produces results. C. H. Gunheim.

Miss Lilly Rustad has resigned as telephone operator and we understand Mrs. Selmer Reierson has been employed to take her place.

Knute Hagen who was to open a shoe shop here, as we reported last week, decided to locate at Thief River Falls instead, and took the tools there Friday afternoon.

C. L. Stevens has announced his candidacy for state senator. This will make at least four candidates and ought to at least help to make the primary election interesting.

H. T. Steve has rented his farm to Gilbert Michaelson and Peter Schluter and is moving with his father and mother near Bismark, N. Dak. where he has a good position.

S. S. Kolden was a business visitor here Friday and Saturday Mr Kolden has recently moved his family onto a small farm near Middle River and will try his hand at raising spuds.

We received the announcement this week of the birth of Shirley Charlotte, an eight and a half pound baby girl on Saturday, May 6th. to Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Holen of Strathcona.

Keep your money in the bank

Are you troubled by having your money "burn a hole" in your pocket? That is a common fault of money. If you have your money in the bank, whether it be much or little, it will not burn any holes and it will be there when you need it.

Money carried on the person is a temptation to spending. Money in the bank does not offer this temptation. You may hestitate before writing a check where you would not hesitate to spend if you had the money with you.

We offer you the advantage of our banking facilities and invite you to open a checking account with us.

TECKTONIUS SILO

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

HAS FIRST WELL DAY IN 6 YEARS

Huntington Citizen Could Neither Sleep Nor Eat With Any Satisfaction Before He Got Tanlac.

"Before taking Tanlac I had not seen a well day in six years," said W. R. Peoples, 328 22nd St., Huntington, W. Va.

"It seemed like I had lost my health for good. I could neither sleep nor eat with satisfaction. I was badly run down, nervous, had no appetite and had to force down every mouthful I ate. Even then my food soured. I would fill up with gas until I had intense pains in my stomach and chest. Headache almost drove me mad, rheumatism in my arms, shoulder and hips kept me in pain all the time, and I had to force myself to work.

"Tanlac went right after my troubles. On four bottles I gained ten pounds and the rheumatism and stomach trouble soon left me. My wife has given a statement about the good Tanlac did her, and I am glad to add my endorsement of this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Dusk was misting down, outdoors, when with dragging steps he came out of the station. He looked hazily up and down the street, where the corner-lamps and shop-windows now were lighted, and, after dreary hesitation, he went in search of a pawn-shop, and found one. The old man who operated it must have been a philanthropist, for Noble was so fortunate as to secure a loan of nine dollars upon his watch. Surprised at this, he returned to the station, and went back to the same old bench.

A little after six o'clock a clanging and commotion in the train-shed outside, attending the arrival of a "through express," stirred him from his torpor. He walked heavily across the room to the same ticket-window he had blocked before, but there was no queue attached to it now. He rested his elbow on the apron and his chin upon his hand, and for some moments the clerk waited until he should state his wishes. This was a new clerk, who had just relieved the other.

"Well! Well!" he said at last.

"I'll take it now," Noble responded, gently.

"What'll you take now?"

"That ticket!"

"What ticket?"

"The same one I wanted before," Noble sighed.

The clerk gave him a piercing look, glanced out of the window and saw that there were no other clients, then went to a desk at the farther end of his compartment, and took up some clerical work he had in hand.

Noble leaned upon the apron of the window, waiting; and if he thought anything, he thought the man was serving him.

The high, resonant room became clamorous with voices and with the mingling echoes of footsteps on the tiled floor, as passengers from the express hurried to the street, or more gaily straggled through, shouting to friends who came to greet them; and among these moving groups there walked a youthful fine lady noticeably enlivening to the dullest eye. She was preceded by a brisk porter who carried two traveling bags of a rich sort, as well as a sack of implements for the game of golf; and she was warm in dark furs, against which the vasty clump of violets she wore showed dewy gleamings of blue.

At sight of Noble Dill, more than pensive at the ticket-window, she hesitated, then stopped and observed him. Here was a coincidence, in a mild way, for, as it happened, she was herself the most observed person in all that place. She was veiled in two veils, but she had been seen in the train without these, and some of her fellow-travelers, though strangers to her, were walking near her in a hypocritical way, hoping, still not to lose sight of her, even veiled. And although the shroudings permitted the most meager information of her features, what they did reveal was harmfully piquant; moreover, there was a sweetness to the figure, a disturbing grace; and nothing disguises such an air of wearing that many violets as a daily perquisite and matter of course.

It was Julia's fortune (though her father had other ideas concerning the matter) to be the possessor of a personality distinctly pleasing to the masculine eye, and of this the fair Julia was probably aware. In any event she was quite conscious of the stir which her passage through the throng created.

So the coincidence came about that this observed lady stopped and observed Noble, who in return observed her not at all, being but semiconscious.

"Noble!" she said.

He stared at her. His elbow sagged away from the window; the whole person of Noble Dill seemed near collapse. He shook, and had no voice.

"I just this minute got off the train," Julia said. "Are you going away somewhere?"

"No," he whispered; then obtained command of a huskiness somewhat greater in volume. "I'm just standing here."

"I told the porter to get me a taxicab," she said. "If you're going home for dinner I'll drop you at your house."

"I— I'm— I—" His articulation encountered unsurmountable difficulties, but Julia had been with him through many such trials aforetime. She said briskly. "I'm awfully hungry and I want to get home. Come on—if you like."

He walked waveringly at her side through the station, and followed her into the dim interior of the cab, which became fragrant of violets—an emanation at once ineffable and poisonous.

"I'm so glad I happened to run across you," she said, as they began to vibrate tremulously in unison with the fierce little engine that drove them. "I want to hear all the news. Nobody knows I'm home. I didn't write or telegraph to a soul, and I'll be a complete surprise to father and everybody. I don't know how pleasant a one! You didn't seem so frightfully glad to see me, Noble!"

"Am I?" he whispered. "I mean—I mean—I mean: Didn't I?"

"No!" she laughed. "You looked—you looked shocked! It couldn't have been because I looked ill or anything, because I'm not; and if I were, you couldn't have told it, through two veils. Possibly I'd better take your expression as a compliment." She paused, then asked hesitatingly, "Shall I?"

This was the style the Atwaters held Julia responsible for; but they were mistaken: she was unable to control it. She at once went cheerily on: "Perhaps not, as you don't answer. I shouldn't be so bold! Do you suppose anybody'll be glad to see me?"

"I— I—" He seemed to hope that words would come, all in their own good time.

"Noble!" she cried. "Don't be so glum!" And she touched his arm with her muff, a fluffy contact causing within him a short convulsion, naturally invisible. "Noble, aren't you going to tell me what's all the news?"

"There's—some," he managed to inform her. "Some—some news."

"What is it?"

"It's—it's—"

"Never mind," she said soothingly. "Get your breath; I can wait. I hope nothing's wrong in your family, Noble."

"No—oh, no."

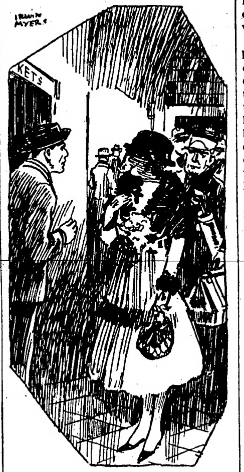
"It isn't just my turning up unexpectedly that's upset you so, of course," she dared to say. "Naturally, I know better than to think such a thing as that."

"Oh, Julia!" he said. "Oh, Julia!"

"What is it, Noble?"

"Noth—ing," he murmured, disjointing the word with a gulp.

"How odd you happened to be there at the station," she said; "just when my train came in! You're sure you weren't going away anywhere?"



"Noble!" She Said.

"No; oh, no."

She was thoughtful, then laughed confidentially. "You're the only person in town that knows I'm home, Noble."

"I'm glad," he said, humbly.

She laughed again. "I came all of a sudden—on an impulse. It's a little idiotic. I'll tell you about it, Noble. You see, ten or twelve days ago I wrote the family a more or less indiscreet letter. That is, I told them something I wanted them to be discreet about, and, of course, when I got to thinking it over, I knew they wouldn't. You see, I wrote them something I wanted them to keep a secret, but the more I thought about it, the more I saw I'd better hurry back. Yesterday it got into my head that I'd better hop on the next train for home."

She paused, then added, "So I did! About ten or twelve days is long as anybody has a right to expect the Atwater family connection to keep the deadliest kind of a secret, isn't it?" And as he did not respond, she explained, modestly, "Of course, it wasn't a very deadly secret; it was really about something of only the least importance."

This was so frightful an understatement that the jar of it restored Noble's voice to a startling loudness. "Only the least importance!" he shouted. "With a man named Crum!"

"What!" she cried.

"Crum!" Noble insisted. "That's exactly what it said his name was!"

"What said his name was?" asked Julia, excitedly.

"The North End Daily Oriole."

"What in heaven's name is that?"

"It's the children's paper, Herbert and Florence's, your own niece and nephew, Julia! You don't mean you deny it, do you, Julia?"

She was in great confusion: "Do I deny what?"

"That his name is Crum!" Noble said passionately. "That his name is Crum and that he's a widower and he's been divorced and's got nobody knows how many children!"

Julia sought to collect herself. "I don't know what you're talking about," she said. "If you mean that I happened to meet a very charming man while I was away, and that his name happened to be Crum, I don't know why I should go to the trouble of denying it. But if Mr. Crum has had the experiences you say he has, it is certainly news to me! I think someone told me he was only twenty-six years old. He looked rather younger."

"You 'think some one told' you!" Noble groaned. "Oh, Julia, Julia! And here it is, all down in black and white, in my pocket!"

"I haven't the slightest idea what you're talking about." Julia's tone was cold, and she drew herself up haughtily, though the gesture was ineffective, so far as Noble was concerned, in the darkness of the quivering interior. The quivering stopped just then, however, as the taxicab halted before her house.

"Will you come in with me a moment, please?" Julia said as she got out. "There are some things I want to ask you—and I'm sure papa hasn't come home from downtown yet. There's no light in the front part of the house."

There was no light in any other part of the house, either, as they discovered after abandoning the bell for an excursion to the rear. "That's disheartening to a hungry person," Julia remarked; and then remembered that she had a key to the front door in her purse. She opened the door, and lighted a hall luster while Noble brought in her bags from the steps where the taxicab driver had left them.

"There's nobody at home at all," Julia said, thoughtfully.

"No. Nobody," her sad companion agreed, shaking his head. "Nobody at all, Julia. Nobody at all." Rousing himself, he went back for the golf tools, and with a lingering gentleness set them in a corner. Then, dumbly, he turned to go.

"Wait, please," said Julia. "I want to ask you a few things—especially about what you've got 'all down in black and white' in your pocket. Will you shut the door, if you please, and go into the library and turn on the lights and wait there while I look over the house and see if I can find why it's all closed up like this.

"It's chilly. The furnace seems to be off," she said. "I'll—" But instead of declaring her intentions, she enacted them; taking a match from the little white porcelain trough on the mantelpiece and striking it on the heel of her glittering shoe. Then she knelt before the grate and set the flame to excelsior beneath the kindling and coal. "You mustn't freze," she said, with a thoughtful kindness that killed him.

"I'm Robinson Crusoe, Noble," she said, when she came back. "I suppose I might as well take off my furs, though." She did so, first unfastening the great bouquet she wore and tossing it upon a table. Noble was standing close to the table, but moved away from it hurriedly. This revulsion she failed to notice; and she went on to explain, as she dropped her cloak and stole upon a chair. "Papa's gone away for at least a week. He's taken his ulster. It doesn't make any differences what the weather is, he never wears his ulster in this town, but when he's going away for a week, or longer, he always takes it with him, except in summer."

"I suppose," said Noble huskily, "I suppose you'll go to some of your aunts or brothers or cousins or something."

"No," she said. "My trunk may come up from the station almost any time, and if I close the house they'll take it back. The servants are having a holiday, not expecting me back."

HUMAN EYE SELDOM PERFECT

Sit down in a chair and fix your attention on some object on the other side of the room. Quickly hold your finger up right in front of the object and instantly shut your eyes. Then, without moving your head or your finger, open your eyes one at a time. If when you open your right eye you find your finger directly in front of the object, you are right-eyed. In that case you will find your finger very much to the right of the object when you open your left eye.

If you are right-handed you will most probably find that you are right-eyed.

This is due to the fact that of the two halves of your brain one is slightly more developed than the other. And the organs and limbs on that side of your body which is controlled by the more-developed half are able to carry out your wishes more easily and quickly than those of the other side.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

St. Cloud—Figures compiled by August Buckman, clerk, indicate that St. Cloud is realizing a building boom of no small proportions this year.

St. James—William Schalaben, representative from Watonwan county, announced he will file for the state senate for the district including Martin and Watonwan counties.

Hibbing—The first arrest on the range of a farmer who insisted on burning brush and slashings without a state fire permit was made by D. L. McIntosh, forest ranger, who brought Wilke Kikaner into court.

St. Cloud—A man who claimed to be able to receive radio message through his body, was committed to the state insane hospital at Fergus Falls.

Virginia—More than 2,000 Virginia grade school students are preparing for a song festival June 1 and 2, according to Miss Mary Ann Williams, graduate music supervisor.

St. Peter—Fisherman John Jeremy of Stillwater has arrived here to take up the search for the body of George Tyler of St. Paul, an inmate of the state hospital, who was drowned in the Minnesota river.

Warroad—The bodies of Garfield Franzon and John Steen, who were lost near Lake of the Woods during the hunting season last fall, were found and brought here on the steamer Reliance.

Pipestone—Authorities are looking for Adolph Swenson and Tommie Fisher, two Ruthton section hands, who are alleged to have administered a beating to Station Agent Sundberg of Ruthton.

Thief River Falls—Sewer and water mains of almost two miles each will be laid this summer, according to action of the city council in ordering the city clerk to advertise for bids to open on May 31.

Grand Rapids—Grand Rapids won in the injunction case to restrain the Grand Rapids school district from issuing bonds for $250,000 to build a new high school. The case may be carried to the supreme court.

Duluth—Hearings will be conducted by the state department of agriculture at the St. Louis courthouse in Duluth to inform the commission merchants and dealers of the operations of the cold storage warehouse law of Minnesota.

Duluth—A gigantic colonization plan, whereby thousands of former service men may be given undeveloped land in northern Minnesota, is being formulated by the committee on adjusted compensation of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce.

New Ulm—Federal prohibition agents swooped down on New Ulm, captured the telephone exchange and then raided simultaneously four soft drink places. Six persons found in charge were arrested and are held in jail here without bail.

Dunnell—In drilling a well on a farm three miles west of here the drillers struck a gas pocket at a depth of 65 feet. The gas escaped with such force that large size rocks were hurled high in the air and the roar of the gas could be heard some distance from the well.

Luverne—Chicken thieves have begun raiding farmers' poultry unusually early in this county. Baby chicks are the most favored and hundreds of them have disappeared with the mother hens, with no clue left as to where they have gone.

Duluth—Louis L. Collins, lieutenant governor of Minnesota, has been extended an invitation to open the Duluth Industrial exposition. The management received a letter from Governor J. A. O. Preus recently, stating his inability to be present at the exposition because of an engagement in Chicago.

Virginia—Sugar beets grown in northern Minnesota yield a higher percentage of sugar with a larger production than is possible in the southern part of the state, according to Nels Nelson, instructor in the department of agriculture of the Virginia high school. Experimental work has been carried on at the Virginia school farm.

Little Falls—Morrison county commissioners refused to appropriate $3,000 for the Farm Bureau county agent and home demonstrator. A delegation of more than 75 members had a meeting in the courtroom following the refusal, and decided to circulate petitions throughout the county to get the pressure necessary to put over the appropriation.

Minneapolis — Forty-nine families passed through the twin cities in April to make their homes on new Minnesota farms, according to Oscar H. Smith, state commissioner of immigration. Five families went to Aitkin county, the highest number. Many of the immigrants came from Nebraska and other midwest states. Mr. Smith says he expects many more persons during May.

Cloquet—Mrs. Peter Oleson, democratic candidate for the United States senate, arriving home after a speaking trip, announced receipt of a letter from William Jennings Bryan offering to come to Minnesota and aid her in her campaign.

Rochester—Built at a cost of more than $2,225,000, the "surgical pavilion" addition to St. Mary's hospital here, recently completed by contractors after several months of work, will be opened to the public, under auspices of the Child Welfare association, with a program of addresses by prominent surgeons.

A REWARD OF $5,000.00

Would be a small amount to pay for saving a man's life. If you could save your life for a dollar bill would you hesitate to spend it? You risk your life everytime you drive your car in the rain because you can't see through your windshield. A dollar bill sent to the Baltimore See-Thru Corporation, Baltimore, Maryland, will ensure you having a clear windshield for the next three years, as their preparation is guaranteed to keep your glass as clear as a summer's day. Nothing like it on the market. One application will last as long as a rain storm even if it lasts a month. It is absolutely guaranteed to give satisfaction or money refunded. Send for it today and be prepared for the next rain storm.—Advertisement.

His Sad Dilemma.

The disheveled stranger made his way into the police station.

"Are you the sergeant in charge?" he asked.

"I am," replied the stout man in uniform, who was seated at a desk and writing in a large ledger.

"I'm lost," said the disheveled man.

"You are—eh?" replied the stout man in uniform as he continued writing. "Well, if you can prove that anybody's missing you we'll take up the case."

HOW TWO WOMEN ESCAPED OPERATIONS

Happy Results in Both Cases

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"Both of my sides swelled and hurt me so that I could not move or do any of my work. There was heavy pressure and pains through my lower organs and the doctor told me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for these troubles. He said I had this one chance, and if the Vegetable Compound did not help me nothing but an operation would. After taking several bottles I felt it was helping me and now I am able to do my own work. If my testimonial will help others I shall be glad for them to read it and hope your Vegetable Compound will do them as much good as it did me."—Mrs. Wm. Lockman, 513 N. 4th St., St. Joseph, Mo.

White Plains, N. Y.—"I had such a pain that I could hardly walk and the doctor said that I needed an operation. I was sick for a year before I started taking your medicine and I could not work. I saw your advertisement in a little book and that is how I came to take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and the capsules and prescription recommended. I am doing all my work and have gained twenty pounds. I am taking the medicines still, but I feel fine. You have my permission to use this letter for the good of others."—Mrs. Mary Mark, 37 Hamilton Ave., White Plains, N. Y.

Some female troubles may through neglect reach a stage when an operation is necessary. But most of the commoner ailments are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors, or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

When disturbing ailments first appear, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent you free upon request. Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

"Luciferous," Illuminated.

Lloyd George is said to have used the word "luciferous." An unusual adjective, but not, we think, an invention of his. An Englishman asked an acquaintance what he would understand by "a luciferous story." The other replied: "Like one of yours; a devilish bad one."—Boston Transcript.

Your New Home should be made artistic, sanitary and livable.

These walls should be Alabastined in the latest, up-to-the-minute nature color tints. Each room should reflect your own individuality and the treatment throughout be a complete perfect harmony in colors.

The walls of the old home, whether mansion or cottage, can be made just as attractive, just as sanitary, through the intelligent use of

Alabastine
Instead of kalsomine or wallpaper

It is absolutely necessary if you expect Alabastine results that you ask for and secure Alabastine.

Avoid kalsomines under various names and insist on the package with the cross and circle printed in red. That is the only way to be sure you are getting the genuine Alabastine.

Alabastine is easy to mix and apply, lasting in its results, and absolutely sanitary.

Alabastine is a dry powder, put up in five pound packages, white and beautiful tints, ready to mix and use by the addition of cold water, and with full directions on each package. Every package of genuine Alabastine has cross and circle printed in red.

BARROWS HAS DOUBLE MURDER

Shoots Wife's Father And Mother, Then Wife's Grandfather, Wounding Him.

MOONSHINE BLAMED

After Shooting Two and Wounding One Youthful Murderer Calls Up Sheriff and Tells Him.

Brainerd, Minn.—E. M. Brandt, 22, shot and killed James McPherson, his wife's father, 50, and Mrs. J. B. McPherson, his wife's mother, 70, and then sent a shot through the knee of his wife's grandfather, J. B. McPherson, 77, in the yard of the McPherson home in Barrows, a mining town seven miles south of Brainerd.

Two Instantly Killed.

Shots through the heart instantly killed the two. The grandmother toppled over in the yard.

James McPherson lay at the barn door, dead, with his pipe still in his mouth.

Neighbors seized Brandt and hurried him to Brainerd in the Barrows bus, where he was lodged in the county jail.

Brandt claimed that his wife's people were influencing her to stay away from him. It is alleged that Brandt had been drinking moonshine at the time of the shooting.

Calls to Sheriff.

When Brandt was taken to the store and postoffice in Barrows, while waiting for the bus, he called up the sheriff of Crow Wing county, saying, "Come down to Barrows and get me. I have killed a couple."

FEAR RIOTS IN MEXIA TEXAS

Fear Riot When Party Lynches Young Negro.

Mexia, Texas.—The situation in Freestone county, growing out of the lynching of Shadrick Green, a young negro, said to have been implicated in the murder of Eula Awsley, 17-year-old white girl, by the alleged confession of Snap Curry, one of the three negroes burned at the stake for the crime, is a precarious one, according to officials here.

Green's bullet riddled body was found hanging to a tree between Teague and Kirvin east of here. There was nothing to connect Green with the crime other than the alleged reference to him Curry's confession. It is believed that the negro was first shot to death and his body suspended from the tree as a warning to other negroes. Green was held by officers on suspicion last Friday, but was released after being questioned.

Fears of an uprising among negroes of the county to avenge the death of the four members of their race, led Sheriff W. M. Mayo to send an urgent telegram to Governor Neff for the assistance of the state rangers. Governor Neff responded by ordering two detachments of the rangers to leave Austin for Freestone couney, but this order was cancelled when Sheriff Mayo sent another telegram stating that he considered he had the situation well enough in hand to forego the assistance of the rangers.

WARDEN WHIPS RIOTERS

Convicts Flogged by Warden Until They Cry for Mercy.

Chicago.—Terrorism tactics by hardened criminals in the Cook county jail were squelched when Warden Wesley Westbrook, aided by guards, whipped rioters.

The men were taken from their cells individually and flogged with canes until they cried for mercy.

Rioting had continued for some time. The men beat on the bars with handcuffs, broke furniture, broke windows and attempted to set fire to bed clothing and mattresses and threw burning brands out of the building.

Outbreak Is Protest.

Rioting outbreak was in protest of prisoners against curtailment of visiting days from two to one.

Warden Enters Tier.

Finally Warden Westbrook was sent for. Arriving at the prison Westbrook entered the tier with half a dozen guards.

"Come on, you big bum. We'll eat you alive," one prisoner yelled at Westbrook.

The jailer opened the cell door and fought with the rioters. The prisoner obtained a long iron bludgeon from breaking up his bed. Westbrook carried a blackjack. When Westbrook emerged from the cell his blackjack was broken in three places and the prisoner was unconscious.

Threaten to Blow Up U. S. Legation.

Sofia, Bulgaria.—A threat to blow up the American legation here unless the United States brings about the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, communists, under conviction for murder in Massachusetts has been received at the legation.

The threat is contained in an article in a clandestinely published anarchist newspaper, which enclosed in a red wrapper was sent to the American minister Charles S. Wilson.

The building is being watched day and night by special agents.

Why Castoria?

YEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupify the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.

Fletcher's
CASTORIA
Have You Tried It?

Everybody has read the above headline; how many believe it? Have you a little-one in the home, and has that dear little mite when its stomach was not just right felt the comforts that come with the use of Fletcher's Castoria? You have heard the cry of pain. Have you heard them cry for Fletcher's Castoria? Try it.

Just help baby out of its trouble tomorrow with a taste of Castoria. Watch the difference in the tone of the cry, the look in the eye, the wiggle in the tiny fingers. The transformation is complete—from pain to pleasure. Try it.

You'll find a wonderful lot of information about Baby in the booklet that is wrapped around every bottle of Fletcher's Castoria.

For Women of Fame.

There will be a hall in the new home of the Women's National Foundation in Washington, where on columns, one for each state, will be inscribed the names of those women of the states whose memory is most worthy of perpetuation. The hall, which is the suggestion of Mrs. George Barnett, wife of Maj. Gen. Barnett, United States marine corps, will be called "The Hall of Remembrance." The choice of names will be left to the people of each state, and will be passed on by a local board. Living women are excluded.

The Bride's Joke.

"Mercy!" said the bridesmaid impatiently to the bride, "are you going to stand there before that mirror all day? Come on, they're waiting for you."

The bride did not move from the glass, but continued gazing at her counterfeit presentment. "Let them wait," she said calmly. "It is well to indulge in some reflection before one gets married, you know."—Boston Transcript.

King George Democratic.

"When he is out of the public eye King George often sacrifices appearance for comfort—indeed, while in conversation with him not long ago I noticed that one of the shoes he wore was adorned with a patch!" This is one of many intimate anecdotes of his long connection with the royal family told by Ernest Brooks, O. B. E., the accredited royal photographer, in the Strand magazine. Queen Mary's favorite portrait of Princess Mary reveals something of the King's tastes in regard to feminine fashions. When Mr. Brooks showed the king the first print, his majesty raised an objection to the width of the panniers on either side of the princess' frock and ordered him to have them taken out of the negative.

Think It Over.

An eminent French doctor declares that love is a disease of the emotions. Not being cynics, we should describe marriage as a long and pleasant convalescence.—London Opinion.

Isn't that slightly cynical, though, cousin?—Boston Transcript.

His Great Mistake.

Joseph Levenson, head of New York's motion picture censorship, said at a luncheon:

"The movies do a lot of good. But they do harm, too, sometimes. Think of the love affairs they break off!

"'It's all over,' a young man groaned one day. 'It's all over now between Mabel and me.'

"'Sorry to hear that, old chap,' said a second young man. 'What caused the split, may I ask?'

"'I took Mabel to the movies last night, and she said that the heroine of the serial called "The Pact of Death" was a beautiful girl.

"'Well?'

"'Well, I agreed with her.'"

Letting Him In.

"Well, well, young gentlemen!" exclaimed the affable old person. "I'd give a great deal to be able to join in your sport."

"Stick around, grandpop," said one sturdy youngster. "If we knock this ball through somebody's window we'll let you go for it."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

The Thrifty Citizen Who Caught the Plugged Nickel

MR. BROWN had swallowed his lunch and had paid his bill. Cautiously he counted his change. "Here!" he said, sharply, "Take back this plugged nickel and give me a good one!"

Mr. Brown walked proudly out. They couldn't fool old Brown.

But old Brown had fooled himself.

Brown's day was heavy and dull. He lacked "pep." There was a mid-afternoon drowsy spell when he needed to be awake—the direct and natural result of heavy, starchy breakfasts and lunches, taken on faith and without question as to value—just because the food looked and tasted like food.

Thousands of shrewd business men who count their change, take their food for granted.

That's what builds up the sanitarium business, and puts the tired "all-done" feeling into the mid-afternoon of a business day.

Grape-Nuts is a scientific food whose delicious, appetizing flavor and crispness are an introduction to well-balanced nourishment—a nourishment easily and quickly assimilated, so that body, brain and nerves are well fed and kept free of the stored up poisons left by so many ill-selected foods.

WHAT THE BIRD MAN SAW

By GEORGE E. FULLER

Whiz-zzzzz! A rush of air—a sensation like shooting upward in a speedy elevator—and my plane rose swiftly from the ground at the Fargo farming demonstration.

"Circle the demonstration field where horses and tractors have been plowing," I instructed the pilot, and he pointed his plane over the paddock tents and headed for the extreme corner of the 640-acre demonstration field.

"Zip!" clicked the camera, as we banked for a turn, and here's the picture the camera saw: Right down in the foreground 110 acres striped with giant swaths of green carpet where the horse-drawn outfits, after sixteen hours, were still toiling on their unfinished ten-acre plots. Along side of them, and on either side of the road, like great fields of black velvet, lay 360 acres of soft black ground plowed, disked and harrowed by tractors in less than ten hours.

Convincing? Yes! Mighty convincing, I thought, as I looked over the whole scene and saw the tractors lined up in their paddocks, with their job completed, while the horse outfits were still hard at work, slowly turning furrows from the great swaths of green weeds.

"How can the horse compete with the tractor in the face of such evidence?" I thought. Looking over the side of the airship, I saw thousands of farmers' automobiles streaming in and out of the demonstration grounds, and I realized then and there that it is inevitable that horses will be displaced by tractors in field work just as surely as automobiles have displaced them on the road.

My mind filled with these thoughts, I hardly realized we had circled the demonstration field, and had once more landed on the ground.

"How did the Red river look from the sky?" asked a farmer as I stepped out of the airship. "How did it look?" I repeated. "Well, I never saw it. I saw something much more wonderful that wiped out every other thought." "What was it?" asked the farmer, as the crowd quickly gathered around.

"It was a new view of power farming," I said, "where tractors are taking the place of horses in field work as automobiles have displaced them on the highways." And I wish every farmer in this country could have been up with me in the airplane to get that vision of power farming I got in the flight over the Fargo demonstration field. Power farming is here to stay—and to grow!

Local Items

Johnny Sollom continues to improve, we are pleased to report.

J. A. Sorum and E. A. Johnson were Warren visitors Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Reierson visited with relatives Sunday at McIntosh.

Mrs. Hjalmer Peterson and children went to Thief River Falls, Tuesday to visit her mother and sister.

Mr. and Mrs. Ramstead, and Mr. and Mrs. Sanden of Thief River Falls attended the funeral of Miss Ruth Knutson last Sunday.

The Misses Evelyn Wegge and Tillie Knutson returned home Tuesday from Thief River Falls where they had been working for several months.

Ludwig Sagstuen took Mr. and Mrs. Nels Nelson to Warren Monday after their daughter, Mrs. Oakes, who has been in the hospital for about a month and is still very sick.

From coast to coast Tanlac is known and honored and millions have taken it and pronounced it the greatest medicine of all times. C. H. Gunheim.

Albert Knutson, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Brunsberg, Mr. and Mrs. N. B. Bagne, who were here to attend the funeral of their sister, Miss Ruth Knutson, all returned to their homes Sunday night.

Mrs. Racine Olson, Oscar Hanson, Selmer Reierson, Andrew Sorum, Clarence Docken, Misses Gunhild and Olava Sollom were all at Thief River Falls Saturday to take the civil service examination for postmaster in Holt, and it is understood that Dehard Johnson took the examination at Minneapolis.

Mrs. A. H. Ahlborn of Detroit, Mich. who has been visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Saastad and sister, Mrs. Fred Peterson and family for the past six weeks, left for Milwaukee Wis. on Monday where she will meet her husband and spend a week at the lakes before returning to Detroit Mr. Peterson accompanied her sister to Thief River Falls.

A picked up nine from Holt went to Stranquist Sunday and were defeated by the latter. During the early part of the game and while running bases, Leroy Anderson sustained a fracture of the knee joint, which was probably caused by the base slipping as he struck it with his foot. He was taken to the Thief River Falls hospital Monday morning and an X-ray picture of the knee was taken by Dr. Fisher, who stated it was a very rare case. The unfortunate young man will probably be in the hospital for some time.

S'more rain, and yet more rain.

The schools of this vicinity will hold a field meet at Greenbush on Saturday May 20th.

Mrs. H. A. Fosholm has been quite sick for the past few days, we are sorry to report.

Nature intended that you should eat what you want. You can do it if you take Tanlac. C. H. Gunheim.

The K. Brown family departed yesterday morning for Bemidji where they expect to make their home.

There will be a W. C. T. U. meeting next Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock May 24th. at the school house.

Miss Nettie Batten was able to ride to town Tuesday for the first time, and is getting well fully as fast as could be expected.

The school board meeting has been postponed a week until Friday May 26, while waiting for instructions from the state department.

The Mission Ladies Aid will entertain at the church next Friday May 26th. Everyone invited.

Albert Jahr and family departed last Friday for Portland, N. D. where he expects to go into business.

Supt. Sewell was here last Friday and hired Gilbert Johnson for the patrolman's work on the road commencing one mile south from Holt and running to the county line.

The Holt creamery commenced shipping butter in car lots last week with other nearby creameries. This way saves them about 65 cents for every hundred pounds of butter they ship to the New York market.

Mrs. O. Wermagr and daughter, Mrs. Iverson of Gary were here Sunday to attend the funeral of their niece and cousin, Miss Ruth Knutson.

During the electrical storm last week Thursday afternoon the farm house of J. A. Sorum was struck by lightning but not much damage was done.

The creamery will commence on Monday May 22, to take cream on Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday's.

MRS. HATFIELD SABINA, OHIO

In Pitiable Condition when she Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabina, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness and irregularity. I was weak and nervous and could hardly stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal. I was this way for about a year and had tried several medicines and had a physician, but to no avail. My sister was taking your medicine and finally induced me to try it. I now feel fine and can do my housework without any trouble at all. You can use this letter for the sake of others if you wish."—Mrs. WELDON G. HATFIELD, R. R. 3, Sabina, Ohio.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so weak and nervous that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial. It surely helped Mrs. Hatfield, just as it has many, many other women.

Slump in Microscopes.

The general depression in the optical trade is being felt very severely by British microscope makers, most of whom are working with reduced staffs. Some are only working alternate weeks. This is partly due, no doubt, to overproduction during the war, when a large number of microscopes were supplied to the order of the government, but even taking this into account, the demand is now abnormally small. With hospitals poverty is a natural excuse, but in other cases, such as that of schools, it is not so easy to explain why so few new instruments are being purchased. According to one large firm the great majority of microscopes now purchased are for purposes connected with mineralogy.—Manchester Guardian.

"You needn't bother about that Julia. I'll look after it."

"How?"

"I could sit on the porch till it came," he said. "I'd tell 'em you wanted 'em to leave it." He paused painfully. "I could wait out on the porch with it, to see that it was safe, until you came back tomorrow morning."

She looked full at him, and he plaintively endured the examination.

"Noble!" She had undoubtedly a moment's shame that any creature should come to such a pass for her sake. "What lovely nonsense!" she said; and sat upon a stool before the crackling fire. "Do sit down, Noble—unless your dinner will be waiting for you at home?"

"No," he murmured. "They never wait for me. Don't you want me to look after your trunk?"

"Not by sitting up all night with it on the porch," she said. "I'm going to stay here myself. I'm not going out; I don't want to see any of the family tonight."

"I thought you said you were hungry."

"I am; but there's enough in the pantry. I looked."

"Well, if you don't want to see any of 'em," he suggested, "and they know your father's away and think the house is empty, they're liable to notice the lights and come in—and then you'd have to see 'em!"

"No; you can't see the lights of this room from the street, and I lit the lamp at the other end of the hall. The light near the front door," Julia added, "I put out."

"You did?"

"I can't see any of 'em to-night," she said resolutely. "Besides, I want to find out what you meant in the taxicab before I do anything else."

"What I meant in the taxicab?" he echoed. "Oh, Julia, Julia!"

She frowned, first at the fire, then, turning her head, at Noble. "You seem to feel quite reproachful about something," she observed.

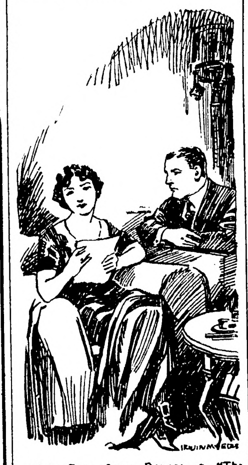
"No, I don't. I don't feel reproachful, Julia. I don't know what I feel, but I don't feel reproachful."

She smiled faintly. "Don't you? Well, there's something perhaps you do feel, and that's hungry. Will you stay to dinner with me—if I go and get it?"

"What?"

"You can have dinner with me—if you want to?—and stay till ten o'clock—if you want to? Wait!" she said, and jumped up and ran out of the room.

She came back and called softly to him from the doorway, half an hour later; and he followed her to the dining-room. "It isn't much of a dinner, Noble," she said a little tremulously; being for once (though strictly as a cook) genuinely apologetic—but the scrambled eggs, cold lamb salad and coffee were quite as "much of a dinner" as Noble wanted. To him everything on the table was hallowed, yet shredded through and through with an excruciating melancholy.



Julia's Eyes Grew Dangerous—"The Little Fiends!"

"Now we'll talk!" said Julia when she had brought him back to the fire again, and they were seated before it. "Don't you want to smoke?" He shook his head dismally, having no heart for what she proposed. "Well then," she said briskly, but a little ruefully, "let's get to the bottom of things. Just what did you mean you had 'in black and white' in your pocket?"

Slowly Noble drew forth the historic copy of the North End Daily Oriole; and with face averted placed it in her extended hand.

"What in the world," she [illegible] unfolding it; and then as its title and statement of ownership came into view, "Oh yes! I see! Aunt Carrie wrote me that Uncle Joseph had given Herbert a printing press. I suppose Herbert's the editor?"

"And that Rooter boy," Noble said sadly. "I think maybe your little niece, Florence, has something to do with it, too."

"Something to do with it? She usually has all to do with anything she gets hold of! But what's it got to do with me?"

"You'll see!" he prophesied accurately.

She began to read, laughing at some of the items as she went along; then she suddenly became rigid, holding the small journal before her in a transfixed hand.

"Oh!" she cried. "Oh, oh!"

"That's—that's what—I meant," Noble explained.

Julia's eyes grew dangerous. "The little fiends!" she cried. "Oh, really, this is a long-suffering family, but it's time these outrages were stopped!"

She jumped up. "Isn't it frightful?" she demanded of Noble.

"Yes, it is," he said, with a dismal fervor. "Nobody knows that better than I do, Julia!"

"I mean this!" she cried, extending the Oriole toward him with a fine sweep of gesture. "I mean this dreadful story about poor Mr. Crum!"

"But it's true, though," he said. "That's what hurts me, Julia!"

"Noble Dill!"

"Julia!"

"Do you dare to say you believed it?"

He sprang up. "It isn't true?"

"Not one word of it! I told you Mr. Crum is only twenty-six. He's not been out of college more than three or four years, and it's the most terrible slander to say he's ever been married at all!"

Noble dropped back into his chair of misery. "I thought you meant it wasn't true."

"I've just told you there isn't one word of tr—"

"But you're—engaged—to him," Noble gulped. "You're engaged to him, Julia!"

She appeared not to hear him. "I suppose it can be lived down," she said. "To think of Uncle Joseph putting such a thing into the hands of those awful children!"

"But, Julia, you are eng—"

"Noble!" she said sharply.

"Well, you are eng—"

Julia drew herself up. "Different people mean different things by that word," she said with severity, like an annoyed instructress. "There are any number of shades of meaning to words; and if I used the word you mention in writing home to the family, I may have used a certain shade and they may have thought I intended another."

"But, Julia—"

"Mr. Crum is a charming young man," she continued, with the same primness. "I liked him very much. I liked him very much indeed. I liked him very, very much. I liked him very—"

"I understand," he interrupted. "Don't say it any more, Julia."

"No, you don't understand. At first I liked him very much—in fact I still do, of course—I'm sure he's one of the best and most attractive young men in the world. I think he's a man any girl ought to be happy with, if he were only to be considered by himself. I don't deny that I liked him very much indeed, and I don't deny that for several days after he—after he proposed to me—I don't deny I thought something serious might possibly come of it. But at that time, Noble, I hadn't—hadn't really thought of what it meant to give up living here at home, with all the family and everything—and friends—friends like you, Noble. I hadn't thought what it would mean to me to give all this up. And besides, there was something very important. At the time I wrote that letter mentioning poor Mr. Crum to the family, Noble, I hadn't—I hadn't—" She paused, in some distress. "I hadn't—"

"You hadn't what?" he cried.

"I hadn't met his mother!"

Noble leaped to his feet. "[illegible] You aren't—you aren't engaged?"

"I am not," she answered decisively. "If I ever was, in the slightest, I certainly am not now."

Poor Noble was transfigured. He struggled; making half-formed gestures, speaking half made words.

"Julia—Julia—" He choked: "Julia, promise me something? Julia—promise to promise me something."

"I will," she said quickly. "What do you want me to do?"

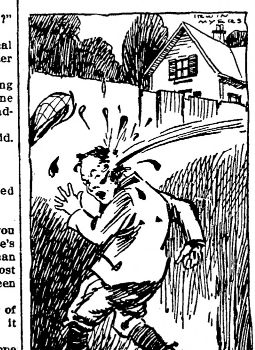
"Give me your word," he said, still radiantly struggling. "Give me your word—your word and sacred promise, Julia—you'll never be engaged to anybody at all!"

At six minutes after four o'clock of the second afternoon following Julia's return, Noble Dill closed his own gate behind him as he set forth upon the four-minute walk that would bring him to Julia's. He wore a bit of indoor geranium in the buttonhole of his new light overcoat.

Passing the foot of an alley which debouched upon the street he was aware of a commotion of splashes hurled and voices clashed.

Casting a glance that way, Noble could see but one person; a boy of thirteen or fourteen who looked through a crack in a board fence, steadfastly keeping an eye to this aperture, and as continuously calling through it, holding his head to one level for this purpose, but at the same time dancing—and dancing tauntingly, it was conveyed—with the other parts of his body. His voice was now sweet, now piercing, and again far too dulcet with the overkindness of burlesque; and if, as it seemed, he was unburdening his spleen, his spleen was a powerful one, and gorged. He appeared to be in a torment of tormenting; and his success was proved by the pounding of bricks, and rocks of size, upon the other side of the fence.

"Oh, dolling!" he wailed, his tone poisonously amorous. "Oh, dolling Henery! Oo's dot de-mos' booful eyes in a dray bid nasty world, Henery! Oh, has I dot booful eyes, dolling Pattywatty? Yes, I has! I has dot pretty eyes!" His voice rose to an unbearably piercing climax. "Oh, what prettiest eyes I dot! Me and Herbie Atwater! Oh, my booful eyes! Oh, my booful—"



The Taunter Screamed in Astonishment.

But even as he reached this apex, the head, shoulders and arms of Herbert Atwater rose momentarily above the fence across the alley, behind the tormentor. Herbert's expression was implacably resentful, and so was the gesture with which he hurled an object at the comedian pre-occupied with the opposite fence. This object upon reaching its goal, as it did with more a splash than a thud, was revealed as a tomato, presumably in a useless state. The taunter screamed in astonishment, and after looking vainly for an assailant, began necessarily to remove his collar, as Noble went on his way.

How blindly we walk our ways! As Noble flourished down the street there appeared a wan face at a prison window and the large eyes looked out upon him wistfully. But Noble went on, as unwitting that he had to do with this prison as he was that he had to do with Master Tomlin's tomato.

The face at the window was not like Charlotte Corday's, nor was the window barred, though the prisoner knew solace in wondering if she did not suggest that famous picture. For all purposes, except during school hours the room was certainly a cell; and the term of imprisonment was set at three days. Florence had finally been obliged to face questions awaiting her; and it would have been better for her had she used less imagination in answering them.

Yet she was not wholly depressed as her eyes followed the disappearing figure of Noble Dill from over the fence of the yard whence she had ventured for a better view of Noble, thereby risking a heavier sentence.

Noble passed from her sight, but nevertheless continued his radiant progress down Julia's street. Life stretched before him, serene, ineffably fragrant, unending. He saw it as a flower-strewn sequence of calls on Julia, walks with Julia, talks with Julia by the library fire. Old Mr. Atwater was to be away four days longer, and Julia, that great-hearted bride-not-to-be had given him her promise and sacred word.

Blushing, indeed divinely, she had promised him upon her sacred word, never, so long as she lived, to be engaged to anybody at all.

BANDITS HOLDUP EXPRESS TRAIN

Old West Is Scene Of Daring Train Robbery By Seven Robbers.

MAIL CLERK KILLS ONE

Golden State Limited Is Held Up by Band of Robbers—Messenger Stewart Breaks Up Robbery.

Tucson, Ariz.—The old West returned when 100 men, armed with six shooters and riding the pick of Arizona cow ponies, struck over the desert on the trail of the seven fleeing train robbers.

The men, fleeing in flivvers—the modern mount of the train robber—held up the Golden State Limited near here. The train, speeding across the desert, was brought to a sudden jarring stop with the explosion of half a dozen torpedoes placed on the rails by the robbers.

True to the traditions of old days of the Pony Express, it was Express Messenger Harold Stewart who broke up the robbery. He unlimbered a heavy rifle which hung in the express car and when the magazine was emptied one bandit lay dead and the other seven were fleeing across the desert.

The pursuit led southward toward the Mexican border, less than 100 miles distant, but over a desert country where water holes are few and far between.

The train, when stopped by the bandits, were about to begin the work of looting the express car. However, Stewart opened fire and the robbery was over. The engine and express car were shoved back down the track, the passenger coaches were picked up and the train sped toward Los Angeles.

CHILE AND PERU MEET IN U. S.

First Close Conference of Two Nations Since Diplomatic Break.

Washington.—The conference of Chile and Peru over the problem of Tacno-Arica, disputed 40 years, was formally opened by Secretary Hughes with a prediction that it not only would herald a new day of international amity in the western hemisphere, but would furnish to the whole world "a needed and inspiring example of the practice of peace."

Both the time and place of meeting, declared the head of the United States state department for the healing of old wounds and the effacement of "whatever differences" may exist in Latin-America."

"There could be no more agreeable harbinger of a better day and of a lasting peace upon this hemisphere," he said, "than the convening of this conference of the representatives of the republics of Chile and Peru. I congratulate you on the high purpose and the noble and conciliatory spirit which have animated both governments in the approach to this meeting and upon the earnest desire which both have manifested that through this friendly intercourse a mutually satisfactory settlement may be found. Permit me to express not only the hope but the firm conviction that your zealous and well directed endeavors dominated by this friendly spirit will be crowned with complete success.

NO HELP FROM AMERICA

America Declines Invitation to Genoa Economic Conference.

Washington.—The state department made public the text of a message to Ambassador Child at Genoa, declining the invitation to participate in the new European economic conference at The Hague.

"Genoa Parley Continuance."

"This government," the American communication said, "is unable to conclude that it can helpfully participate in the meeting at The Hague as this would appear to be the continuance under a different nomenclature of the Genoa conference and destined to encounter the same difficulties if the attitude disclosed in the Russian memorandum of May 11 remains unchanged."

The inescapable ultimate question the American note said "would appear to be the restoration of productivity in Russia, the essential conditions of which are still to be secured and must in the nature of things be provided within Russia herself."

The state department's communication said the American government "has always been ready" to join other governments in arranging for "an inquiry by experts into the economic situation in Russia and the necessary remedies."

Gasoline Stock Shows Increase.

Washington.—A new high record in the national stock of gasoline, the increases in the price of which have been ordered investigated by the senate was established April 1 according to statistics made public by the federal bureau of mines showing supplies of the commodity on that date aggregated 854,232,000 gallons. The stocks on hand April 1 were approximately 176,000,000 gallons greater than on March 1 when the previous high mark of [illegible] gallons in storage was made.

Criticism.

Theodore Dreiser, the novelist, said at a tea in Greenwich Village:

"Criticism is a lost art. The average critic understands the work he criticizes about as well as—as—

"But here's a story. A woman was going through a picture exhibition with her husband. They came to a picture called 'Saved,' which represented a dripping Newfoundland dog standing over a dripping and unconscious child that he had just rescued from the river flowing in the background.

"The woman was deeply interested in this picture. She said:

"'No wonder the poor child's fainted after dragging that great big dog out of the water.'"

More Quality for Less Money

There never was a time when [illegible] so good as now.

They are bigger, heavier and stronger [illegible] than any earlier Goodyears ever were.

Not even in those remembered days before the war did Goodyear Tires sell at such low prices as today.

Look at the figures listed below.

They represent an average decrease of more than 60% from Goodyear prices of 1910.

When you can get these better Goodyears at such prices there is no question of the tire value at your command.

Your Goodyear Service Station Dealer will tell you that never in his experience as a tire dealer has he known the equal of this value. See him today.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Mankato—This year 130 will graduate from the Mankato State Teacher's college.

Luverne—Crops in Rock county are in excellent condition, regardless of the handicap of a late spring.

Balaton—Edward A. Rolloff has been appointed postmaster here, succeeding W. C. Galbraith, who died some time ago.

Minneapolis—Masons, 100 strong, will invade Duluth where they will battle for state honors in a cribbage contest.

Ortonville—The civic department of the Ortonville Women's club is planning to carry on a campaign for general beautifying of the city.

Marshall—Governor J. A. O. Preus will be the principal speaker at the annual picnic of the Lyon county farm bureau here on June 15.

Mora—Virtually all the small grains with the exception of barley already are in the ground in Kanabec county.

Barnesville—Many buildings in this vicinity were damaged during a severe storm. The Great Notrhern depot was partly unroofed and farm buildings were wrenched.

Duluth—Practically 9,000,000 bushels of grain was shipped on steamers from the head of the lakes and the total stocks of grain have been reduced by 3,500,000 bushels, it was estimated.

Slayton—Out of a graduating class of 38 in the Slayton high school, the first six high marks went to boys. Orville Quackenbusch leads the class with a mark of 93 and is valedictorian.

Park Rapids—Crop conditions and prospects in Hubbard county are better than the average. Rye has wintered in excellent condition; and the fields of clover, sown for hay, and seed crops, are good.

Albert Lea—Corn will be the big crop in Freeborn county this year. The lateness of the spring caused farmers to forego seeding of wheat. Oats, barley and rye will be about the same crop as last year.

Red Wing—Daniel Kinney, a jeweler of Mazeppa, is in a local hospital with a serious bullet wound in the abdomen, as the result of an accident in his store while he was cleaning a revolver.

Falmont—The city water and light commisison has a haunted house for sale here, with no buyers. It stands on land which the city acquired by condemnation proceedings a few years ago.

Owatonna—During a heavy electrical wind and rain storm here, M. J. Dunnigan, a farmer, living near here, was injured and two of his horses killed by a bolt of lightning.

Luverne—War has been declared on crows in the rural districts of Rock county because of the liking the crow exhibits for baby chicks. Some farmers report the loss of as many as 50 chickens a day.

Austin—Nearly 200 delegates from the First District Minnesota Federation of Women's Clubs attended the 18th annual meeting, which opened here. The representation was nearly twice that of last year's convention.

Owatonna—M. J. Dunigan, brother of Chief of Police Dunnigan of this city, was injured severely and a team of horses he was driving were killed, as the result of being hit by a bolt of lightning in the recent storm.

Comfrey—The Women's Relief corps will erect a platform in the public park here as a memorial to the soldiers of the community. A fitting tablet will contain the names of the soldier dead.

St. Peter—Mother of three governors of Minnesota and the "first love" of hundreds who have trod the halls and campus, Gustavus Adolphus college of St. Peter will celebrate its 60th birthday.

Red Wing—The Red Wing Milk Dealers association, starting out with approximately 50 members, has been organized as a direct result of differences between the dairymen and the city council over a new city milk ordinance.

St. James—C. N. [illegible] filed for the state legislature from this county on the republican ticket. This makes three candidates in the field, the other two being K. S. Thompson, who served last term, and T. P. Glasson, a farmer of Odin.

St. James—A jury, in the case of F. W. Kempel of Butterfield vs. H. H. Klein et al, brought in a verdict for the defense. Kemple sued for alleged damages resulting from his arrest on a charge of disloyalty during the war and asked damages in the sum of $50,989.65.

St. Paul—A Minnesota crime commission, consisting of 35 women and men from all parts of the state, was appointed by Governor J. A. O. Preus to study causes of crime and to recommend methods for crime prevention which will be submitted to the 1923 legislature.

International Falls—Three persons were drowned when a canoe capsized during a squall on Rainy river here. One girl was rescued.

Lamberton—Arrangements are being made for the reopening of the State Bank of Lamberton, closed several months ago because of a low reserve fund.

Alexandria—Alexandria, surrounded by 208 lakes in Douglas county and hundreds of others in adjoining counties, had summer residents as early as April 10.

Grand Rapids—Kalman, Wood & Co of Minneapolis purchased the $250,000 bonds of school board district No. 1, bearing 5 per cent interest.

Glenwood—The prospects for a big summer trade in Glenwood are the best this city ever had. Reservations for fishing parties at the opening of the pike season have been made.

Brainerd—Ernest M. Brandt, 22 years old, who shot and killed his wife's father and grandmother and seriously wounded her grandfather, in jail, still insisted he had no recollection whatever of the shooting.

Hibbing—The first step in the formation of an Association of Commercial Clubs of northern Minnesota was taken at a meeting of the secretaries of commercial clubs of the northern portion of the state.

Moorhead—A class of 141, the largest number of advanced graduates in the history of the college, will be graduated from the Moorhead State Teachers college this year, O. M. Dickerson, president announced.

Winona—Philip Baier, aged 25, is being held in the city jail without charge, pending an investigation by police of an alleged attempt to poison his 3½ months old baby at his home in this city.

Breckenridge — Breckenridge now has its main thoroughfare paved and before July will have the remainder of its business district paved, while citizens on three other streets filed petitions asking more paving.

Minneapolis—Two bandits who took $60 from a confectionery store proprietor and refused to take $300 from four customers, because "we don't take money from workingmen," were hunted by police.

Owatonna—The Steele county farm bureau is planning a countywide picnic to be held during the third week of June. A program of bureau federation leaders is being prepared. The affair will probably be held at Mineral Springs.

Lismore—Fire completely destroyed the barn on the Roland Krips farm northwest of here. The livestock was rescued, but 1,200 bushels of oats and 20 tons of hay were destroyed. A barn which stood on the same foundation was burned 13 years ago.

New Ulm—New Ulm was host to implement dealers and farmers of six counties in this section of the state when a district convention and community welfare rally was conducted under the auspices of the Minnesota Implement Dealers' association.

St. Paul—The Minnesota motor vehicle tax has yielded $5,418,398.25 since Jan. 1, Mike Holm, secretary of state, said. He has turned that sum over to State Treasurer Henry Hines. Largest collections came in March, when $2,466,327 was paid.

Stillwater—Edwin D. Buffington, city attorney has received a draft for $75,000 from the estate of Mrs. Meta Tozer Mitchell, donated to the city for the purpose of erecting a memorial gymnasium building in memory of her husband, Fred M. Tozer.

St. Paul—C. H. Christopherson of Luverne, an assistant attorney general on the staff of Attorney General Hilton, filed as a candidate for associate justice of the Minnesota Supreme court, a surprise in capital circles.

Owatonna—M. R. Cashman of the Clinton Falls Nursery company and president of the American Nurserymen's association has accepted an invitation of Henry C. Wallace, secretary of agriculture to attend the plant quarantine conference in Washington.

St. Paul—A restraining order prohibiting the state from enforcing special session laws of 1919 regulating control of South St. Paul stock yards was issued by Judge Wilbur F. Booth in United States district court with one exception.

Brainerd—The Brainerd district of the Ten Thousand Lakes is confident this season will be one of its greatest. Forty-five resorts are affiliated with the Brainerd Chamber of Commerce, which acts as a clearing house on information. Inquiries already are flowing in from as far south as Kentucky.

Bemidji—St. Anthony's hospital will close June 1. This hospital was opened in 1898 by Mother Scholastica Kerst who came to Bemidji when there were only two or three buildings, with three Sisters of St. Benedict. The hospital has cared for more than 18,000 patients, and the reason for closing has not been made known.

Thief River Falls—At a meeting of the executive committee of the Pennington County Agricultural association it was decided to hold the annual fair the first week in August, making it the first in the northern counties. The Polk county fair at Crookston will be the second week, the Beltrami fair the third week at Bemidji and the Itasca fair at Grand Rapids the fourth week of the month.

CAN YOU SOLVE BEN FRANKLIN'S PUZZLE?

Brush up on your history, folks. Solve our very latest Benjamin Franklin puzzle. You can do it if you try.

In the picture above you will find the names of ten Great Americans. The letters of their names have been re-arranged. If you can straighten them out to spell correctly the names of the Ten Great Americans you have solved the puzzle. For instance, the first one is Benjamin Franklin.

If you can solve the puzzle, you can win $1,000 or an Oakland Auto which we are offering, together with a number of other valuable prizes to help boost The Minneapolis Daily News.

To help refresh your memory, I am naming a partial list of all the great men in American History: George Washington, Daniel Boone, General U. S. Grant, Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, Roger Williams, Abraham Lincoln, Nathan Hale, John Adams, Stephen Douglass, Robert E. Lee, Andrew Jackson, Wendell Phillips, Patrick Henry, William Penn, Horace Greeley, Alexander Hamilton.

185 POINTS WINS FIRST PRIZE

If you can correctly re-arrange the ten Great Americans' names you will receive 100 points toward winning the $1,000, or ten points for each correct name. You will earn 60 additional points by qualifying your answer, that is, by proving that you have shown a copy of The Minneapolis Daily News to your friends. This will give you 160 points in all. The final 25 points will be awarded by the three judges of the puzzle (who are in no way connected with The Minneapolis Daily News) to the person who sends in the largest correct list of words made up from the letters in the name—"Benjamin Franklin." But DO NOT send in your list of words now. Send the answer to the puzzle first and we will tell you how to get up your list of words.

The winning answer, or the one earning 185 points, will receive $1,000 in cash or an Oakland "Six" Touring Car. The answer receiving 184 points will receive the Second Prize. There are 25 prizes in all, and in case of a tie each tying contestant will receive identical prizes.

COSTS NOTHING TO TRY--$1,000 JUST FOR YOU

Remember, folks, you don't have to spend any of your own money to win. No, siree! Not one penny—and you won't be asked to subscribe to The Minneapolis Daily News. All we want you to do is to help us introduce The Minneapolis Daily News to your friends. That's simple, isn't it?

It's going to be easy for you to win. Opportunity with a great big "O" is looking your way. Send your answer to the puzzle and we'll tell you how to win the $1,000 that's waiting just for you. Only 185 points wins First Prize. You can get them.

It's easy to get points. Start now and send in your answer. List correctly the Ten Great Americans on a piece of paper and send it in. Then we will tell you how to get the list of words made up from the letters of the name, Benjamin Franklin.

June 30, 1922, is the last day to send in your answers, so do not delay.

The Mardi Gras Mystery

By

H. BEDFORD-JONES

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE AND COMPANY

The tale of a carnival joke that led to grim realities.

CHAPTER I.

Carnival.

Jachin Fell pushed aside the glass curtains between the voluminous overdraperies in the windows of the Chess and Checkers club, and gazed out upon the riotous streets of New Orleans. Half an hour he had been waiting here in the lounge room for Dr. Cyril Ansley, a middle-aged bachelor who had practiced in Opelousas for twenty years, and who had come to the city for the Mardi Gras festivities. Another man might have seemed irritated by the wait, but Jachin Fell was quite unruffled.

He had much the air of a clerk. His features were thin and unremarkable; his pale eyes constantly wore an expression of wondering aloofness, as though he saw around him much that he vainly tried to understand. In his entire manner was a shy reticence. He was no clerk, however; this was evident from his attire. He was garbed from head to foot in soberly blending shades of gray whose richness was notable only at close view. One fancied him a very precise sort of man, an old maid of the wrong sex.

Doctor Ansley, an Inverness flung over his evening clothes, entered the lounge room, and Fell turned to him with a dry, toneless chuckle.

"You're the limit! Did you forget we were going to the Maillards' tonight? However, we need not leave for fifteen minutes yet, at least."

Doctor Ansley laid aside his cape, stick and hat and dropped into one of the comfortable big chairs.

"You intend to mask for the Maillards'?" Ansley cast his eye over the gray business attire of the little man.

"I never mask." Jachin Fell shook his head. "I'll get a domino and go as I am. Excuse me—I'll order a domino now. Back in a moment."

Doctor Ansley followed the slight figure of the other man with speculative eyes. Well as he knew Jachin Fell, he invariably found the man a source of puzzled speculation.

During many years Jachin Fell had been a member of the most exclusive New Orleans clubs. He was even received in the inner circles of Creole society, which in itself was evidence supreme as to his position. At this particular club he was famed as a wizard master of chess. He never entered a tournament, yet he consistently defeated the champions in private matches—defeated them with a bewildering ease, a shy and apologetic ease, an ease which left the beholders incredulous and aghast.

With all this, Jachin Fell was very much of a mystery, even among his closest friends. Very little was known of him, he was a lawyer, and certainly maintained offices in the Maison Blanche building, but he never appeared in the courts and no case of his pleading was known.

Ansley knew him as well as did most men, and Ansley knew of a few who could boast of having been a guest in Jachin Fell's home. There was a mother, an invalid, of whom Fell sometimes spoke and to whom he appeared to devote himself. The family, an old one in the city, promised to die out with Jachin Fell.

Ansley puffed at his cigar and considered these things. Outside, in the New Orleans streets was rocketing the mad mirth of carnival. The week preceding Mardi Gras was at its close.

Now, as ever, was Mardi Gras symbolized by masques. In New Orleans the masquerade was not the pale and pitiful frolic of colder climes, where the occasion is but one for display of jewels and costumes, and where actual concealment of identity is a farce. Here in New Orleans were jewels and costumes in a profusion of splendor; but here was preserved the underlying idea of the masque itself—that in concealment of identity lay the life of the thing!

When Jachin Fell returned and lighted his cigar he sank into one of the luxurious chairs beside Ansley and indicated a newspaper lying across the latter's knee, its daring headlines standing out blackly.

"What's that about the Midnight Masquer? He's not appeared again?"

"What?" Ansley glanced at him in surprise. "You've not heard? Good heavens, man! He showed up last night at the Lapeyrouse dance, two minutes before midnight, as usual. A detective had been engaged, but was afterward found locked in a closet bound with his own handcuffs. The Masquer wore his usual costume and went through the party famously, stripping everyone in sight. Then he backed through the doors and vanished."

Fell pointed his cigar at the ceiling and sighed. "Ah, most interesting! The loot was valued at about a hundred thousand!"

"I thought you said you'd not heard of it?" demanded Ansley.

Fell laughed softly and shyly. "I didn't. I merely hazarded a guess."

"Wizard!" The doctor laughed in unison. "Yes, about that amount."

"The Masquer is a piker," observed Fell, in his toneless voice.

"Eh? A piker—when he can make a hundred-thousand-dollar haul?"

"Don't dream that those figures represent value, Doctor. They don't! All the loot the Masquer has taken since he began work is worth little to him. Jewels are hard to sell. Of course, the crook has obtained a bit of money, but not enough to be worth the risk."

"Yet he has got quite a bit," returned Ansley thoughtfully. "All the men have money, naturally; we don't want to find ourselves bare at some gay carnival moment! I'd warrant you've a hundred or so in your pocket right now!"

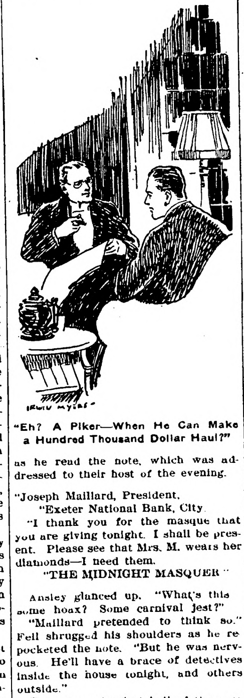
"Not I," rejoined Fell calmly. "One ten-dollar bill. Also I left my watch at home. And I'm not dressed; I don't care to lose my pearl studs."

"Eh?" Ansley frowned. "What do you mean?"

Jachin took a folded paper from his pocket and handed it to the physician.

"I met Maillard at the bank this morning. He called me into his office and handed me this—he had just received it in the mail."

Doctor Ansley opened the folded paper; an exclamation broke from him as he read the note, which was addressed to their host of the evening.



"Eh? A Piker—When He Can Make a Hundred Thousand Dollar Haul?"

"Joseph Maillard, President,
"Exeter National Bank, City.

"I thank you for the masque that you are giving tonight. I shall be present. Please see that Mrs. M. wears her diamonds—I need them.

"THE MIDNIGHT MASQUER."

Ansley glanced up. "What's this—some hoax? Some carnival jest?"

"Maillard pretended to think so." Fell shrugged his shoulders as he repocketed the note. "But he was nervous. He'll have a brace of detectives inside the house tonight, and others outside."

Ever since the first ball of the year by the Twelfth Night club this Midnight Masquer, as he was termed had held New Orleans gripped in terror, fascination and vivid interest. During the past month he appeared at least once a week, now at some private ball, now at some restaurant banquet, but always in the same garb: the helmet, huge goggles and mask, and leathern clothes of a service aviator. On these occasions the throbbing roar of an airplane motor had been reported, so that it was popular gossip that he landed on the roof of his designated victims and made his getaway in the same manner by airplane. No machine had ever been seen, and the theory was believed by some, hooted at by others.

"We'd best be moving, Fell. You'll want a domino?"

"I ordered one. It'll be here in a minute."

"Do you seriously think that note is genuine?"

Fell shrugged lightly. "Who knows? I'm not worried. Maillard can afford to be robbed."

"You're a calm one!" Ansley chuckled. "Oh, I believe the prince is to be there tonight. You've met him, I suppose?"

"No. Heard something about him, though. An American, isn't he? They say he's become quite popular in town."

Ansley nodded. "Quite a fine chap. His mother was an American; she married the prince de Gramont; an international affair of the past generation. De Gramont led her a dog's life I hear, until he was killed in a duel. She lived in Paris with the boy, sent him to school here at home, and he was at Yale when the war broke out. He was technically a French subject, so he went back to serve his time. Still he's an American now. Calls himself Henry Gramont, and would drop the prince stuff altogether if these French people around here would let him."

A page brought the domino. Fell, discarding the mask, threw the domino about his shoulders, and the two men left the club in company.

They sought their destination afoot—the home of the banker Joseph Maillard. The streets were riotous, filled with an eddying, laughing crowd of masquers and merrymakers of all ages and sexes; confetti twirled through the air, horns were deafening, and laughing voices rose into sharp screams of unrestrained delight.

At last gaining St. Charles avenue, with the Maillard residence a half-dozen blocks distant, the two companions found themselves well away from the main carnival throngs.

As they walked along they were suddenly aware of a lithe figure approaching from the rear; with a running leap and an exclamation of delight the figure forced itself in between them, grasping an arm of either man, and a bantering voice broke in upon their train of talk.

"Forfeit!" it cried. "Forfeit—where are your masks, sober gentlemen? This grave physician may be pardoned, but not a domino who refuses to mask! And for forfeit you shall be my escort and take me whither you are going."

Laughing, the two fell into step, glancing at the gay figure between them. A Columbine, she was both cloaked and masked. Encircling her hair was a magnificent scarf shot with metal designs of solid gold—a most unusual thing. Also, from her words it was evident that she had recognized them.

"Willingly, fair Columbine," responded Fell in his dry and unimpassioned tone of voice. "We shall be most happy indeed to protect and take you with us—"

"So far as the door, at least," interrupted Ansley, with evident caution. But Fell drily laughed aside this wary limitation.

"Nay, good physician, farther!" went on Fell. "Our Columbine has an excellent passport, I assure you. This gauzy scarf about her raven tresses was woven for the good Queen Hortense, and I would venture a random guess that, clasped about her slender throat, lies the queen's collar of star sapphires—"

"Oh!" From the Columbine broke a cry of warning and swift dismay. "Don't you dare speak my name, sir—don't you dare!"

Fell assented with a chuckle, and subsided.

Ansley regarded his two companions with sidelong curiosity. He could not recognize Columbine, and he could not tell whether Fell was speaking of the scarf and jewels in jest or earnest. Such historic things were not uncommon in New Orleans, yet Ansley never heard of these particular treasures. However, it seemed that Fell knew their companion, and accepted her as a fellow guest at the Maillard house.

"What are you doing out on the streets alone?" demanded Fell, suddenly. "Haven't you any friends or relatives to take care of you?"

Columbine's laughter pealed out, and she pressed Fell's arm confidingly.

"Have I not some little rights in the world, monsieur?" she said in French. "I have been mingling with the dear crowds and enjoying them, before I go to be buried in the dull splendors of the rich man's house. Tell me, do you think that the Midnight Masquer will make an appearance tonight?"

"I have every reason to believe that he will," said Jachin Fell, gravely.

Columbine put one hand to her throat, and shivered a trifle.

"You—you really think so? You are not trying to frighten me?" Her voice was no longer gay. "But—the jewels—if they are taken by the Masquer—"

"In that case," said Fell, "let the blame be mine entirely. If they are lost, little Columbine, others will be lost with them, fear not! I think that this party would be a rich haul for the Masquer, eh? Take the rich man and his friends—they could bear plucking, that crowd! Rogues all."

"Confound you, Fell!" exclaimed Ansley, uneasily. "If the bandit does show up there would be the very devil to pay!"

Some thrills await you in the next installment.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Pope's Good-by to Cardinal Gibbons.

I cannot help recalling an instance where a lady, a guest at the White House at luncheon, asked the late Cardinal Gibbons whether he really believed that the pope was infallible in all he said. The cardinal smiled and answered: "I can only respond to that, madame, by saying that when the pope bade me good-by the last time he said, 'Addio, Cardinale Jibbones!'"—Maurice Francis Egan in the Review of Reviews.

Veterans, Before Leaving for Home, Decorating the Graves of Buddies Who Paid the Last Full Measure of Devotion.

ALL BELOVED BY GRATEFUL NATION

Tributes of Memorial Day Shared by Each Defender of the Country.

Reverence Alike for Those Who Began and Those Who Completed the Work of Freedom—Graves in France Cared For.

The year 1918 brought the significance of Memorial day directly home to the present generation. The heroism of the sacrifices of 1863 had not been forgotten, but to the great majority of Americans it was merely a tale, not an experience. After 1918 there were few Americans who had not suffered personal loss or bereavement. The real meaning of "dying for one's country" was impressed on the consciousness of the people. The succeeding Memorial days have found the nation honoring the memory of the young men who gave their lives in France and Flanders, and revering, with new sincerity, the men who, more than half a century ago, died that America might live.

America's Part in the War.

Two outstanding facts of the World war are universally conceded. America's participation and America's sacrifice were small in comparison with the labor and sacrifice of the nations which fought through all the bloody years of the struggle. Yet, during the brief period of American participation, America fought as hard as any other belligerent nation, bore her full share of responsibility and burdens, and thus, coming to the front when the other nations were weary, actually won the war. It is generally believed that but for the American army the German offensives of March-June, 1918, would have carried Prussianism to victory. America, therefore, without boasting and with full realization that her sacrifice was small in comparison with the sacrifices of France and England and Belgium and Serbia and Roumania, and even of Russia, can cherish the gratification of having actually won the war by intervention at the most critical moment. Belgium's immortal heroism saved civilization in 1914. American altruism and devotion saved democracy in 1918.

But the story was not begun at Chateau-Thierry. It was not even begun more than a year before, when the United States, driven beyond the extreme limit of patience, formally declared the existence of a state of war. It was begun more than fifty years before, when the young manhood of the North marched forth at Lincoln's call. What was done in 1861-65 made possible the culmination of 1918. It is, really, all a part of the same glorious story. Without Chickamauga there would have been no Cantigny; the campaign in the Wilderness was paving the way for the Argonne.

In Honored Graves.

All over the United States the graves of true American men, graves new and still unclaimed by nature, and graves of long ago, leveled, perhaps, by time's mercy and strewn with flowers by nature's own hand, are honored today by those whose lives have been made livable by the nobility of those who have died. They gave their all, and today we give our very little. Life was as precious to them as it is to us; nothing that we can give can be even a weak beginning of their stupendous gift. Nor do they demand great recompense: gratitude and homage, and a moment's pause in the mad whirl of life to bestow a thought and a flower on the graves of those whose lives were the price of our happiness.

In France, too, and on the dike cut fields of Flanders, our heroes rest. Fear not that these boys of ours who are so far from us today will be neglected or forgotten. France, saved from utter destruction, is still dumbly grateful for the miracle, and generation after generation will weep at the graves of the men who came from afar and stayed in France forever. There where they made their high sacrifice, they are surely at peace, and not even the sorrow of the loved ones over there whose gratitude, though impersonal, is greater than we who had no glimpse of war's horrible presence can comprehend.

In America there is one Memorial day for the boys in blue and gray and the boys in khaki, and there is common reverence for those who began and those who completed the work of freedom. But the day has come to have more than an American significance. Far beyond the Atlantic it means as much as it means right here at home, and it has become, far more truly than our nation's birthday, an observation of worldwide gratitude to the strong-sinewed and strong-hearted republic of the gleaming West.

In Loving Memory

The lilies of France are blooming
By the little white crosses today,
Where America's sons are sleeping
The years of their manhood away.
They died on the altar of Freedom
For liberty, right and truth;
They sleep in glory immortal
In the beauty and splendor of youth.

The soldiers of France are marching
By the fields where our loved ones lie—
Each one lifts a hand, saluting,
As he silently passes by.
The children of France are singing,
While the bugles softly play,
And the lilies of France droop lower
O'er the little white crosses today.

The women of France are kneeling
By the graves they lovingly tend,
And the breezes murmur gently
As the Stars with their Tricolor blend.
The women of France are kneeling
'Mid the graves so far away,
And our hearts are kneeling with them
By the little white crosses today.
—Anna Heald Clayton in the Rocky Mountain News.

NEW GRAVES AT ARLINGTON

Memorial Day This Year, as It Did a Year Ago, Should Have Especial Significance.

There is additional solemnity in this memorial day because of the number of new graves and the number of women and men whose grief is fresh. It is a beautiful custom that the government closes its shops and that business stands nearly still in order that millions of people may speak, sing and think of the dead. It is good that these millions should let their thoughts dwell a few moments on themes different from those which are called the practical affairs of life. Here at Washington Memorial day is strikingly observed. The city more nearly suspends worldly activities than any other, because it is the seat of government, because government is the principal industry here, and because the other industries are mainly dependent on the government's working force. There are more soldier graves in and in the immediate vicinity of Washington than any other like area in the United States and the number of these graves is increasing far faster than elsewhere. Since the great war new graves by acres have been dug at Arlington.—Washington Star.

Enshrined in French Hearts.

The fatherless children of France have made it their duty to care for the graves of the American soldiers and sailors distributing their flowers wherever an American lies. They will not forget and they will pass the story of "the American" on to their descendants, through history, tradition and legend. The value of leagues and agreements is not to be minimized, but France sees the greater cementing influence of common ceremonies that keep noble friendships fresh and untouched by time.

CHANGE OF LIFE WOMAN'S TRIAL

Proof That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is of Great Help at This Period

Metropolis, Illinois.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it is all it claims to be and has benefited me wonderfully. I had been sick for eight months with a trouble which confined me to my bed and was only able to be up part of the time, when I was advised by a friend, Mrs. Smith, to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills. I was so much benefited by the use of these medicines that I was able to be up and about in two weeks. I was at the Change of Life when I began taking the medicines and I passed over that time without any trouble. Now I am hale and hearty, do all my housework, washing, ironing, scrubbing, and cooking, all there is to do about a house, and can walk two or three miles without getting too tired. I know of several of my neighbors who have been helped by your medicines."—Mrs. EMMA CULVER, 705 E. 7th St., Metropolis, Illinois.

Depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Nervousness, irritability, heat flashes, headache and dizziness, are relieved by this splendid medicine.

Of Another Race.

Mrs. Subbubs had hired a green country girl whose looks reflected the benefit of plenty of fresh air and wholesome country food. One morning Mrs. Subbubs entered the kitchen just after the grocer's boy had been there and she said to the girl, "Why, Hester, what a rosy, happy face you have this morning. You look as if the dew had kissed you."

Hester's face grew still rosier and her eyes sought the floor.

"Please, m'm," she murmured, "he isn't a Jew, his name is Michael."

TANLAC KEEPS HIM FIT, SAYS McGRAW

Has Used It for Years With Splendid Results—Fine for Run Down Condition.

"For four years Tanlac has kept me in the pink of condition as I take a few doses of it every time I feel a little run down and it always builds me up again," said Wm. A. McGraw, 207 Beach Place, Tampa, Fla.

"I began taking Tanlac first about four years ago when I was in a very bad state of health and had been run down for several years. I was always taking laxatives, too, but I believe they did me more harm than good.

"Tanlac made me feel like a brand new man in a very short time and I have never had a return of any of my old troubles. The reason of this I am firmly convinced is that I always have Tanlac handy and take a few doses every time I feel a bit under the weather."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

That's the Difference.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

HAD HIGH SENSE OF HONOR

Mark Twain Punctilious to a Degree, in Order to Satisfy His "Presbyterian Conscience."

Mark Twain, it is well known, labored in his older years to repay the debts incurred by his publisher; but probably a great many persons, basing their opinions on Twain's own jests, supposed him to be rather happy-go-lucky in smaller affairs. But he was not, shows Gamaliel Bradford in his sketch of Twain in "American Portraits."

The most obvious instances of his rectitude, says Mr. Bradford, are in regard to money. In spite of his dreams and speculative vagaries, he was punctiliously scrupulous in financial relations, his strictness culminating in the vast effort of patience and self-denial necessary to pay off the debt of honor which fell upon him in his later years. But the niceness of his conscience was not limited to broad obligations of this kind.

"Mine was a trained Presbyterian conscience," Twain says, "and knew but the one duty—to hunt and harry its slave upon all pretexts and all occasions. I don't wish even to seem to do anything which can invite suspicion," he said, as to a matter so trivial as taking advantage in a game.

Insanity Laid to Microbes.

After more than twenty years' work among lunatics an Edinburgh doctor has come to the conclusion that many forms of insanity are caused by the action of microbes.

Never judge a man's religion by what he says when you step on his toes.

Co-operation diffuses wealth and minimizes profiteering.

Lizard Skin Leather.

The island of Ceylon, which sent peacocks, monkeys and baby elephants to King Solomon, for that monarch's zoo, is remarkable for a varied and interesting fauna. One of the oddest of its animals is a huge lizard, called the cabrogoya, which attains a length of four and one-half feet.

The cabrogoya is a very handsome reptile, beautifully marked, and its skin when tanned affords a tough leather of excellent wearing quality and waterproof. It is used for making women's shoes and, with the idea of introducing it in this country for that purpose, specimen hides have recently been sent to our Department of Commerce by the American consul at Colombo.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Out of the Mouths of Babes.

You've heard about the little girl who was given a woolly bear that she would name "Gladly," after the bear in the hymn—"Gladly, my cross-eyed bear."

Another little girl was asked if she knew who Nero was.

"He's the Good Man," she answered, in awed tones.

"The Good Man? What makes you think he's the Good Man?" said her teacher.

Then, in answer, the little girl, still in awed tones, quoted the hymn, "Nero My God to Thee!"

No Labor Saved.

"Why did you quit going around with that labor-saving device?"

"Had to work too hard trying to sell it."

[illegible] loves a grouch [illegible] remember that nearly all [illegible] are cheerful.

Wise is the man who refuses to take his trouble seriously.

No Chance.

Mayor Lew Shank visited school No. 3, and warned the boys and girls of the many traffic dangers, and explained to them their part in keeping the streets "safe for boys and girls." He asked the boys how many wished to be police officers.

One tow-headed little chap held up his hand.

"I want-a be a cop," he piped.

"Are you Irish?" the mayor asked.

"Nope," came the reply.

"Well, there isn't any chance for you, son. You'd better take up something else," was the mayor's disappointing advice.—Indianapolis News.

Costly Language.

In one of the palatial homes of the new rich, a man sat before a blazing fire, a cigar between his teeth, a liqueur at his elbow. His friend sat opposite, likewise fortified.

The host was bewailing the enormous cost of keeping his son at college.

"Such expenses!" he cried. "And the worst of all is the languages."

"Languages?" repeated his friend, "How's that?"

"Well," said the host, "there is one item in the bill which runs, 'For Scotch, $250.'"—London Answers.

Averting Suspicion.

"Some of your constituents are criticising your English."

"Encourage 'em," replied Senator Sorghum. "It'll help to convince folks that although I occasionally mingle in society I still speak as one of the plain people."

It is better to lend than to borrow. Lend a helping hand but don't borrow trouble.

The best men practice better than they preach.

When Hungry Little Muscles Say, "Please Help Me"

Did you ever stop to think who it really is that's talking, when childish voices raise a clamor, "Mother, I'm hungry?"

It's really muscles and bones and nerves and cells worn in the stress and strain of play—that are calling for rebuilding material.

What kind of [illegible] answer? The right thing, or just anything? It makes a big difference.

Grape-Nuts, so deliciously crisp and appetizing to taste and so quick and convenient to serve, is a splendid food for rebuilding young bodies. All the wonderful nutriment put in wheat and barley by Nature, including the vital mineral elements, is there—and Grape-Nuts digests easily, quickly and completely. Served with cream or milk, Grape-Nuts is exceptionally nourishing.

"That's splendid!" says appetite. "That's just the need!" say the hungry muscles, nerves and bones.

Ready to serve right from the package—always crisp and fresh. A favorite dish with all the family. Sold by grocers.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Whereas, default having been made in the conditions of a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Knute O. Shirley, a single man, Mortgagor, to Farmers State Bank of Mavie, Mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of January, 1920, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of January, 1920, at 1 o'clock P. M. in Book 93 of Mortgages on page 549,

And Whereas, the said Farmers State Bank of Mavie, Mortgagee and holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, and whereas there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon said Mortgage and the debt secured thereby the total sum of $1160.00, being the amount of principal and interest secured by the mortgage hereby being foreclosed, and whereas the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFORE; Notice Is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) of Section Six (6) in Township One Hundred Fifty-four (154) North, Range Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Marshall County at the West Front door of the Court House in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 1st day of July, 1922, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of $1160.00, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and attorney's fees as stipulated in said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from day of sale, as provided by law.

To the Voters of Marshall Co.

I am a candidate for re-election to the office of County Attorney.

It is not necessary for me to say what I stand for or what I expect to do if re-elected. My record is before you--it speaks for itself.

When I entered upon my duties as County Attorney I gave you my pledge that I would give you the best that was in me, and enforce the laws without fear or favor.

I will leave it to you to say if that pledge has been redeemed.

I invite your investigation and if it meets with your approval, I will appreciate your saying so by your vote and support on Primary Election Day.

Respectfully
A. N. Eckstrom

Announcement

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Voters of Marshall County, I herewith announce myself as a Candidate for the office of Register of Deeds of Marshall Co. at the comming election. If nominated and elected, I will endeavor to conduct the office to the best interests of the people. Your vote and support will be highly appreciated.

Respectfully Yours,
Carl W. Rodquist.

M. O. Kleven for State Senator

From the sixty-seventh district composed of the counties of Marshall, Kittson and Roseau.

Mr Kleven is a resident of Oslo and has been identified with the growth and development of the village since its birth, being engaged in the furniture business and also carrying a stock of variety goods in connection,

Previous to his coming to Oslo he was engaged in teaching school in Polk county and at one time held a commission as postmaster at Birkhola an inland town south of this place.

Mr. Kleven is a progressive and public spirited citizen, always at the head of all enterprises tending for the good of his community, county and state. He owns a splendid business and residential property in Oslo and by thrift and modern business principles, built up a splendid trade at this place.

Mr. Kleven is a man of education and refinement, ably qualified in every respect to fill the office he seeks, and we are confident should he succeed in winning, he will creditably fill the position with honor and credit to the district he desires to represent.—Oslo Tribune.

Death of Mrs. Oakes

Mrs. Elmer Oakes died Monday afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. N. Nelson, about two miles north of Holt.

The deceased was born August 12, 1890 in Garfield township, Lac Qui Parle county, Minn., where she was baptized and confirmed.

On August 23, 1911 she was united in marriage with Elmer Oakes of Gary, S. D. One son was born to them, who died in infancy.

Mrs. Oakes had been sick for about two years with rheumatism and anaemia and her husband brot her here several months ago so that her parents could help him take care of her.

She leaves to mourn their loss, her husband and parents, four sisters and two brothers, all of whom were present at the funeral.

Funeral services were conducted at the Lutheran church Wednesday afternoon by Rev. Ordahl and the interment was made in the Holt cemetery.

TECKTONIUS SILO
RACINE, WIS. U.S.A.

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

MOST IMPORTANT NEWS OF WORLD

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for Benefit of Busy Readers.

TOLD IN A FEW WORDS

Kernels Culled From News of Moment in All Parts of the World—Of Interest to All the People Everywhere.

Washington

Washington—Marvin G. Sperry, president of the Private Soldiers and Sailors league, was arrested here as a fugitive from justice at the request of Baltimore police, who said they had a warrant charging embezzlement from the Buddies club of that city, which he founded. The complaint against Sperry, detectives said, was sworn out by Edward Smyth, former Canadian soldier.

Washington—Consideration of permanent rural credits legislation was continued by the house committee on banking and currency, with Representative Sydney Anderson, Minnesota, chairman of the joint committee on agricultural inquiry, and Benjamin C. Marsh of the Farmers National council as witnesses.

Washington—Selection of the special grand jury to consider alleged frauds in connection with war contracts, provision for which was made in the bill recently passed by congress appropriating $500,000 to cover costs of prosecuting persons alleged to have been involved in the frauds, has begun.

Washington—Suggestion that an international conference of bankers be called in Washington to devise means of untangling the economic maze in Europe has been made to President Harding by certain of his advisers.

Washington—The house industrial arts committee reported the resolution expressing government indorsement of the Sesquicentennial of the signing of the Declaration of Independence, to be conducted at Philadelphia in 1926 and authorizing the president to invite participation by foreign governments.

Washington—Dismissal of formal proceedings against the Iowa-Nebraska-Minnesota Wholesale Grocers association of Council Bluffs, Iowa, was announced by the federal trade commission. It was stated that the dismissal was "without prejudice."

Washington—Representative Moses Kinkaid announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election. He is the author of the Kinkaid homestead law and will have served 20 years in congress when his term expires on March 3, 1923.

Washington—With 289 landing fields for use of airplane pilots established in the seventh corps area, comprising Minnesota, Arkansas, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Nebraska and North and South Dakota, this section of the country is considered the safest for air travel in the United States.

Washington—Half of the Alaskan fur seals are lost at sea before they reach commercial or bearing age, is the conclusion of the committee on conservation of marine life in the Pacific of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

Domestic

Boston—Drinking among college students has diminished materially since the 18th amendment was enacted, and in a majority of colleges which were canvassed drinking has practically disappeared, according to President F. C. Southworth of the Meadville Theological school. His report of an investigation was made to the Unitarian Temperance society.

Lexington, Va.—Arthur Dawson, official portrait painter of the United States Military academy, announced he had discovered at Washington and Lee university here an original painting of George Washington by Gilbert Stuart. The painting is estimated by art experts to be worth from $75,000 to $100,000.

Buffalo—Thousands watching a circus performance here were startled when a big lion escaped from its cage and ran into the street. Pursued by circus employees it ran three blocks before finally cornered. Several hundred people who followed the lion out of the tent were thrown into a near panic when the beast broke loose from the ropes and charged directly into the crowd.

Conde, Texas—The body of a Negro youth was found by Grimes county farmers swinging to a tree by the roadside near Plantersville. The youth, who was known by the name of Early, apparently had been lynched.

Jersey City—Five hundred and four gallons of whisky shipped by distilling companies in Kentucky to 14 New York firms were seized on the pier of the American Railway Express company by general prohibition agents.

Aurora, Ill.—Miss Minnie Bruno, known as the "taxicab flapper," who was brought back from Clinton, Iowa, to face a charge of robbery, won her freedom by marrying her accuser, James Crowley, Batavia restaurant owner.

New York—The founder of the fortunes of the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. was Joseph Morgan, who, after fighting in Washington's army, settled down as a farmer in Connecticut. He made money enough to invest in lines of stage coaches, and presently controlled the road traffic between New York and Boston.

Northwest

Rapid City, S. D.—Mrs. Kate Whitford of this place is one of the most remarkable of the aged people of South Dakota. In June she will be 93 years of age, but notwithstanding her advanced years, she does the housework for herself and son, C. A. Whitford.

Miller, S. D.—A peculiar robbery and destruction of property occurred 20 miles south of here, when at midnight someone drove off seven of Mrs. May Barrick's choicest milch cows, slashed the tires on the automobile, badly cut the harness and cut the barb wire between the posts around 60 acres of fenced land.

Bismarck—The industrial commission has authorized its secretary to make extensions of time of payment on farm loans as permitted by law in cases where persons who have the loans are unable to pay them. The law permits one year's extension after one year's instalment is due.

Superior, Wis.—The establishment of a fund to be known as the "McCaskill Friendship Fund," to be loaned to needy students of the Superior State Normal school, to enable them to complete the school course, has been decided upon by students, faculty and friends of the institution as a memorial to the late President V. E. McCaskill.

Grand Forks—Plans for marketing North Dakota wheat through the Northwestern Wheat Growers' association were perfected at a conference here by George E. Duis of Grand Forks, president of the North Dakota Wheat Growers' association, and G. C. Jewett of Portland, Ore., general manager of the Northwestern association.

Spooner, Wis.—The Wells-Dickey company of Minneapolis has purchased the $40,000 worth of bonds issued by this city for the purpose of constructing sewers and a sewage treatment plant. The Minneapolis company offered a par bid with accrued interest and a premium of $1,825.

Superior—Severe condemnation of what were termed "political figureheads drawing salaries from the city which they do not earn," was expressed by members of newly appointed advisory council of the city council at a meeting of that body. Sixteen of the 20 councilors participated in the discussions. A committee of three was appointed to confer with the city commissioners relative to the proposed elimination of unnecessary offices and salary expense.

Davenport, Iowa—An alleged attempt to wreck the United Mine Workers of America and place the I. W. W. or the "one big union" in its stead was dramatically charged on the convention floor of the Iowa Federation of Labor, when James Archibald of Oskaloosa, was ejected from the hall and a delegate's badge taken from him.

Sporting

Louisville—Red Herring of Birmingham knocked out Young Leonard of New Orleans in the second round of a scheduled 12 round bout here.

New York—Babe Ruth has begun his belated 1922 home run campaign. His first circuit blow of the season started the Yankees toward a rally that tied the score and enabled them to win a stirring battle with the St. Louis Browns in the thirteenth, 4 to 3.

St. Louis, Mo.—Stanislaus Zbyszko, former heavyweight wrestling champion, will give Ed "Strangler" Lewis $20,000 or the entire gate receipts for a finish match, U. H. Herman, Zbyszko's manager, announced in a dispatch from Richmond, Mo. Lewis, the present champion, can select the site for the match, Herman said, adding that a $1,000 forfeit would be posted to guarantee it.

New York—Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, who fought successfully in middleweight, light heavyweight and heavyweight ranks, won the light heavyweight championship title of America, defeating Gene Tunney of New York in 15 rounds in Madison Square Garden. Greb received the judges' decision. At weighing time Greb tipped the scales at 162¼, and Tunney at 174½.

Paris—The Poincare cabinet has decided that the government will become bakers Tuesday if the bakery proprietors refuse to sell bread for a franc a kilogram, as ordered by the municipal authorities.

Berlin—The Leipzic supreme court, says a dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung, sentenced Emil Scherber, a motor mechanic of Wilhelmshaven, to 18 months' imprisonment on the charge of giving information to the interallied commission last July regarding the location of 21 aerial motors.

Paris—France will spend 325,000,000 francs more on its navy next year than this. The national budget for 1923 was distributed to deputies in the chamber by the minister of finance. The increase in naval appropriations was the most striking feature.

London—Viscountess Rhondda is not entitled to a seat in the house of lords, the committee on privileges decided by a vote of 20 to 4.

Mexico City—J. J. Zahler, an American citizen, has appealed to the American consulate for protection for his large candy factory here. Zahler's employees for the last week have been on strike and refuse to permit him to enter the factory grounds.

Berlin—The reichstag has passed a bill according the same copyright protection to American authors as is accorded to Germans by the United States.

BLIZZARD FOUND NOT GUILTY

Mine Owners Fail To Convict Labor Leader Of Treason Charges.

JURY OUT SIX HOURS

Labor Leader Goes Free After Being Charged With Treason—Is Congratulated by Many Friends.

Charlestown, W. Va.—"Bill" Blizzard, boyish mine union official, was freed of the charge of treason by a jury in the circuit court of Jefferson county and from the moment court adjourned, was the center of a cheering crowd that shrieked its rejoicing and congratulations in the court room and on the streets.

The jury had been out for six hours and 10 minutes when it returned the verdict, just as arrangements were being made to adjourn court.

Blizzard and his wife were complaining of sore hands long before the throngs of friends and strangers had finished their congratulations.

"It's a year since I have felt so happy," was Mrs. Blizzard's comment, and her husband in the center of another handshaking throng cried out: "Good old Jefferson county!"

Other groups gathered about Blizzard's mother, who accepted their congratulations with a beaming smile that warred for mastery over the little latch in her voice.

Jury Locked Up 30 Days.

The jury had been locked up since April 27 while trying this case and before adjournment Judge Woods announced these jurors were excused from any further service at this term.

The defendant and his wife shook hands with all the jurors and Blizzard also expressed his thanks to Judge Woods.

Blizzard, 28, is president of subdistrict No. 2 of district 17, United Mine Workers. He was indicted with 52 other men, mainly union officials and members or sympathizers of the miners' union, on the charge of treason against the state of West Virginia as a result of last summer's disturbances in southern West Virginia, variously referred to as the armed march, or, as the invasion of Logan county.

CIVILIAN SHOOTS SOLDIER

British Soldier Was Slain and Another Wounded, in Belfast.

Belfast.—A British soldier was murdered and another soldier seriously wounded at the postoffice on College green in Dublin, says a Dublin dispatch. The shooting was done by a civilian.

Seventeen fires were started in the campaign of incendiarism waged throughout the city.

Six fire bombs were used in starting the blaze which destroyed the model school in the Falls road.

There were no burials in the city cemetery on Thursday, owing to the sniping at the gravediggers.

The restaurants and theaters are suffering severely from the campaign of terrorism.

One restaurant reports a big slump in business after the discovery of a bomb in a telephone manhole nearby.

Bishop MacRory has cancelled all conferences with his clergy throughout the diocese of Down and Connor, owing to the perils of traveling.

It is believed they had planned to capture the Jonesboro barracks.

WAR MOTHERS HELP FUND

Contribute $200 to Help Devils Lake Boys Entertain State Convention.

Devils Lake, N. D.—War Mothers of Devils Lake have presented the American Legion with the first contribution the ex-soldiers have accepted for their convention fund, a check for $200. The check represented the entire balance left in the treasury of the War Mothers organization.

In spite of the fact that they are bringing National Commander Hanford MacNider and Judge Kenesaw M. Landis here for their convention, June 20-21, as well as providing an elaborate series of entertainments, including a flying circus, automobile races, a spectacular parade, a water carnival, dances galore, nine bands, and a mysterious trip "Back to Deadwood" the Legionaires have not solicited a penny from the local business men. They have accumulated a fair sized convention fund by staging an annual show and now assert they will personally defray any deficit contracted.

Lloyd George Calls Conference.

London.—Lloyd George has called a conference of British and Irish leaders to meet at Downing street. They will discuss the pact for the preservation of peace in Ireland signed by free state and republican rebel representatives and which the British fear conflicts with the Anglo-Irish treaty. Michael Collins, head of the Irish provisional government, had a preliminary conference with Arthur Griffith and other Irish leaders here to meet the British.

Her Mother's Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Led Her To Try It

Kenosha, Wisconsin.—"I cannot say enough in praise of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. My mother had great faith in it as she had taken so much of it and when I had trouble after my baby was born she gave it to me. It helped me so much more than anything else had done that I advise all women with female trouble to give it a fair trial and I am sure they will feel as I do about it.—Mrs. FRED. P. HANSEN, 562 Symmonds St., Kenosha, Wisconsin.

A medicine that has been in use nearly fifty years and that receives the praise and commendation of mothers and grandmothers is worth your consideration.

If you are suffering from troubles that sometimes follow child-birth bear in mind that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a woman's medicine. It is especially adapted to correct such troubles.

The letters we publish ought to convince you; ask some of your women friends or neighbors—they know its worth. You will, too, if you give it a fair trial.

Newfoundland Industry.

A total of 25,000 horsepower is estimated as the probable output of a project which comes from a rather surprising locality. The development is to be undertaken in the Humber valley, Newfoundland, with the expenditure of $7,000,000 within the next two years. The power project is tied up with logging and other operations in a way which will involve the permanent employment of 1,500 men in the works and 2,000 more in the woods. The paper resources of the island will be very largely expanded by the new development, which is actually under contract at the present writing.—Scientific American.

TAKES NO CHANCES ON MASQUER.

Synopsis—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell.

"And Maillard would do the paying." Fell's dry chuckle held a note of bitterness. "Let him. Who cares? Look at his house, there, blazing with lights. Why pays for those lights? The people his financial tentacles have closed their sucker-like grip upon. His wife's jewels have been purchased with the coin of oppression and injustice. His son's life is one of roguery and drunken wildness—"

"Man, are you mad?" Ansley indicated the Columbine between them. "We're not alone here—you must not talk that way—"

Jachin Fell only chuckled again. Columbine's laugh broke in with renewed gaiety:

"Nonsense, my dear Galen! We masquers may admit among ourselves that Bob Maillard is—"

"Is not the man we would have our daughters marry, provided we had daughters," said Fell.

They had come to a file of limousines and cars, and approached the gateway of the Maillard home. They turned into the gate. Jachin Fell touched the arm of Ansley and indicated an inconspicuous figure to one side of the entrance steps.

"An outer guardian," he murmured. "Our host, it seems, is neglecting no precaution! I feel sorry for the Masquer, if he appears here."

They came to the doorway. Columbine produced an invitation, duly numbered, and the three entered the house together.

CHAPTER II.

Masquers.

Joseph Maillard might have hopefully considered the note from the Midnight Masquer to be a hoax perpetrated by some of his friends, but he took no chances. Two detectives were posted in the grounds outside the house; inside, two others, masked and costumed, were keeping a quietly efficient eye on all that transpired.

Each guest upon entering was conducted directly to the presence of Joseph Maillard himself, or of his wife; was bidden to unmask in this private audience, and was then presented with a favor and sent forth masked anew to the festivities. These favors were concealed, in the case of the ladies, in corsage bouquets; in that of the men, inside false cigars. There was to be a general opening of the favors at midnight, the time set for unmasking. All this ceremony was regarded by the guests as a delightful innovation, and by Joseph Maillard as a delightful way of assuring himself that only invited guests entered his house. Invitations might be forged—faces, never!

Lucie Lemanois entered the presence of her stately relative, and after unmasking, dutifully exchanged kisses with Mrs. Maillard. Until some months previously, until she had come into the management of her own property, or what was left of it, Lucie had been the ward of the Maillards.

"Mercy, child, how [illegible] you look, tonight!" exclaimed Mrs. Maillard, holding her off and examining her high color with obvious suspicion.

"Thank you, ma'am," and Lucie made a mock courtesy. "Do you like little Columbine?"

"Very much. Here, Sally, take Miss Lucie's cloak, Sally."

An old colored servant bobbed her head in greeting to Lucie, who removed her cloak. As she did so, she saw that Mrs. Maillard's eyes were fastened in utter amazement upon her throat.

"Isn't it pretty, auntie?" she asked smilingly.

"My goodness gracious!" The stern eyes hardened. "Where—where on earth did you obtain such a thing? Why—why—"

Columbine's features flinched. She was a poor relation, of course, and the look in the older woman's eyes and the implication of the words formed little less than an insult.

Quietly she put one hand to her throat and removed the collar, dropping it into the hand of Mrs. Maillard. It was a thing to make any woman's [illegible] a collar of exquisitely wrought gold studded with ten great blazing star sapphires. Beside it the diamonds that bejeweled Mrs. Maillard's ample front looked cold and lifeless.

"That?" queried Lucie, innocently, producing a scrap of chamois and dabbing at her nose. "Oh, that's very interesting! It was made for Queen Hortense—so was this scarf that keeps my ragged hair from lopping out! They were a present—only this morning."

"Girl!" The lady's voice was harsh. "A present? From whom, if you please?"

"Oh, I promised not to tell; he's a particular friend of mine. Aren't the stones pretty?"

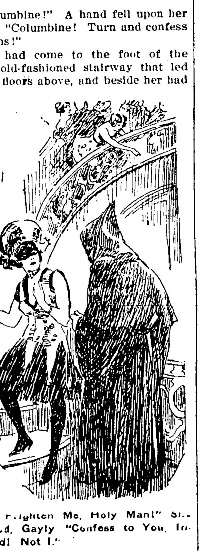
Mrs. Maillard was speechless. She compressed her firm lips and watched Lucie replace the sapphire collar without a word to offer. Silently she extended a corsage bouquet from the pile beside her; then, in a trembling voice, forced herself to explain about the favor inside.

Slipping her mask into place Lucie was gone, not without relief. She knew very well that within half an hour Bob Maillard would be informed that she had accepted gifts of jewels from other men, with all the accompanying implications and additions that imagination could furnish. For, although Bob Maillard wanted very much indeed to marry her, his mother had no intention of sanctioning such a union.

"Neither has Uncle Joseph," she reflected, smiling to herself, "and neither have I! So we're all agreed, except Bob."

"Columbine!" A hand fell upon her wrist. "Columbine! Turn and confess thy sins!"

She had come to the foot of the wide, old-fashioned stairway that led to the floors above, and beside her had suddenly appeared a Franciscan monk cowled and gowned in sober brown from head to foot.



"You Frighten Me, Holy Man!" She Cried, Gayly. "Confess to You, Indeed! Not I."

"You frightened me, holy man!" she cried, gaily. "Confess to you, indeed! Not I!"

"Never a better chance, butterfly of the world. Haste not to the dance, fair sister; tarry a while and invite the soul in speech of import! Having passed the dragon at the gate, tarry a moment with this man of vows."

"Shrive me quickly, then," she said laughing.

"Now, without confession? Would you have me read your thoughts and give penance?"

"If you can do that, holy man, I may confess; so prove it quickly!"

The Franciscan leaned forward. His voice came low, distinct, clear cut, and he spoke in the French which Lucie understood as another mother tongue, as do most of the older families of New Orleans.

"See how I read them, mademoiselle! One thought is of uneasy suspicion; it is typified by a hard-lipped, grasping man. One thought is of profound regret; it is typified by a darkly welling stream of oil. One thought—"

Suddenly Lucie had shrunk away from him. "Who—who are you?" she breathed, with a gasp that was almost of fear. "Who are you, monsieur?"

"A humble brother of minor orders"—and he bowed. "Shall I not continue with my reading? The third, mademoiselle, is one of hope; it is typified by a small man who is dressed all in gray."

Lucie [illegible] away from him [illegible].

"I think that you have made some grave error, mon père," she said. Her voice was cool, charged with dismissal and offended dignity. "I pray you, excuse me."

Not waiting any response, she hastily ran up the stairs. After her, for a moment, gazed the Franciscan, then shrugged his wide shoulders and plunged into the crowd.

While she danced, while she chattered and laughed and entered into the mad gaiety of the evening, Lucie Lemanois could not banish from her mind that ominous Franciscan. How could he have known? How could he have guessed what only she and one other barely suspected? There was no proof, of course; the very breath of suspicion seemed a calumny against an upright man!

Joseph Maillard had sold that Terrebonne land six months before any gas or oil had been discovered there, and eight months before Lucie had come into the management of her own affairs. He had not known about the minerals, of course; it was a case only of bad judgment. Yet, indubitably, he was now a shareholder and officer in the Bayou Oil company, the concern which had bought that strip of land.

Lucie strove angrily to banish the dark thoughts from her mind. Why, Maillard was a rich man, a banker, an honorable gentleman! To doubt his honor, although he was a harsh and a stern man, was impossible. Lucie knew him better than most, and could not believe—

"May I crave pardon for my error?" came a voice at her elbow. She turned, to see the Franciscan again beside her. "With a thousand apologies for impertinence, mademoiselle; I am very sorry for my faults. Will not that admission obtain for me one little dance, one hint of forgiveness from fair Columbine?"

Something in his voice spelt sincerity. Lucie, smiling, held out her hand.

"You are pardoned, holy man. If you can dance in that friar's robe, then try it!"

Could he dance, indeed! Who could not dance with Columbine for partner? So saying, the monk proved his word by the deed and proved it well. Nor did he again hint that he had recognized her; until, as they parted, he once more left her astonished and perturbed. As he bowed he murmured:

"Beware, sweet Columbine! Beware of the gay Aramis! Beware of his proposals!"

He was gone upon the word.

Aramis? Why, that must be the Musketeer, of course—Bob Maillard! The name, with its implications, was a clever hit. But who was this brown monk, who seemed to know so much, who danced so divinely, whose French was like music? A vague suspicion was in the girl's mind, but she had no proof.

Half an hour after this Bob Maillard came to her, and with impatient words made a path through the circle which surrounded her. "I know you now, Lucie!" he murmured. "I must see you at once—in the conservatory."

She was minded to refuse, but assented briefly. The words of the monk intrigued her; what had the man guessed? If Bob were indeed about to propose, she would this time cut off his hopes for good. But—was it that sort of a proposal?

As she managed to rid herself of her admirers, and descended to the conservatory, she was highly vexed with herself and the Franciscan, and so came to her appointment in no equable frame of mind. She found Maillard waiting in the old-fashioned conservatory; he had unmasked, and was pulling a cigarette.

"By gad, Lucie, you're beautiful tonight. Where did you get that collar of jewels?"

"Indeed!" The girl proudly drew herself up. "What business is that of yours, sir?"

"Aren't you one of the family? Hang it—Lucie! Don't you know that I want to marry you?"

"My dear Robert, I certainly do not want to marry any man who swears to my face—you least of all!" she coldly intervened. "I have already refused you three times; let this be the fourth and last. Now, kindly inform me why you wished me to meet you here."

"I have a chance to make some money for you in a hurry," he said. "Your father left you a good deal of land up Bayou Terrebonne way."

"Your father sold some of it," she put in, idly. His eyes flickered to the throat.

"Yes; but you've plenty left near [illegible]. It's away from the gas field, but I'm interested in an oil company. We've plenty of money, and we're going to go strong after the liquid gold. That land of yours is good for nothing else, and if you want to make some money out of it I'll swing the company into leasing at a good figure and drilling there."

"You think there's oil on the land?"

"No." He made a swift, energetic gesture of dissent. "To be frank, I don't. But I'd like to throw a bit of luck your way, Lucie. That fellow Gramont, the prince—you know him—he's an engineer and a geologist, and he's in the swim."

Next week the Midnight Masque.

Highest Quality—Lowest Prices

The entire Goodyear effort of many years has been toward one result—the tire buyer's advantage.

Goodyear has taken two methods to achieve that result.

One has been to raise the quality of Goodyear Tires.

The other, to lower Goodyear prices.

Goodyear has succeeded in both—to your great advantage.

Goodyear Tires are better today than ever—larger, heavier and stronger. Many users tell us they are getting double the mileage from them they got from Goodyears ten years ago.

Goodyear prices are lower today than ever. On the average they have decreased more than 60% from the prices of 1910.

Look at the figures listed below.

Think of the fine performance of the Goodyears you have known, and remember that Goodyear Tires are giving even better performance now.

"Where is you pa, missy?" he inquired in ingratiating manner. "He's burying the dog, mister," was the reply. "Why, what happened to the dog?" said the sympathetic candidate. "He barked himself to death, barking at candidates," was the unsympathetic answer.

Uniform of Italian Colonel Protected Fuad Pasha From the Threatened Indignity.

In 1913 Fuad I, the new king of Egypt, was an unsuccessful candidate for the Albanian throne, after having been colonel of artillery in the Italian army. When he became sultan of Egypt his role under the protectorate of England was not always easy to maintain.

One day a messenger of the British Resident asked him to sign an ordinance against the Egyptian nationalists. He refused. And the messenger of the Resident signified to him with the utmost courtesy:

"I shall then to my regret have to arrest and imprison your highness."

"Permit me," replied Fuad Pasha, "to go for a moment to my room to reflect."

A few minutes later Fuad came back in the uniform of an Italian colonel.

He was not arrested.

Petersburg Resident Says She Had About Lost Hope of Getting Better—Now Well and Happy.

"Tanlac has been such a blessing to me I can't help singing its praises," said Mrs. T. J. Archer, highly esteemed resident of 1147 Shepard St., Petersburg, Va.

"I had indigestion so bad I couldn't eat a thing without being in misery for hours, and the pain around my heart caused by the gas seemed all I could stand. I constantly had headaches and awful spells of dizziness. Then to make matters worse rheumatism in my arms, shoulders and knees almost drove me to distraction, and for three months I couldn't do a stroke of work.

"I had just about decided it was no use to take any more medicine when my husband brought me a bottle of Tanlac. Now I never have a touch of indigestion. Headaches and dizzy spells are a thing of the past, and rheumatism has left me entirely. I never have known a medicine to equal Tanlac."

THE PRAYER OF A HORSE

By Laurence E. Cash.

O MAN, my Lord and Master, hear Thou my prayer:

Water me, feed me, keep me clean and work me in reason. O Lord, when my day's work be done give me shelter from rain, wind and cold and a clean, dry bed in a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position or cut off my tail, which is my only defense against flies. Do not, O Man, drive me rapidly down hill. O Lord, do be merciful and considerate of me in hot weather, and do not kick, strike or otherwise abuse me when I do not understand your desires. Prod me not with merciless spurs. Teach Thou me to understand Thy desires. Speak gently unto me, O Lord, Thy voice means more to me than whip and reins. I have a sense of humor. Play with me, and pet me, O Man, and I will gladly lend myself to Thee in willing service.

Have mercy on me, O Master, when I have colic, and do give me one spoonful of Di-Col-Q. It will relieve me quickly. When I have scours drench me with Di-Col-Q. And, O Master, when I be galled, have sores on shoulders or back, wire cuts, scratches, mange or swellings, apply Thou Di-Col-Q to mine affected parts and I will praise Thee for relief from mine afflictions. Di-Col-Q will enable me to do Thy bidding with delight.

Remember, O Lord, Di-Col-Q is made in mercy by New York Drug Concern, 401 Lafayette Street, New York City. Praise Thou this firm for their alleviation of beastly ills.

O Master, when I fail to eat examine my mouth for the cause. Do not work me when I can not eat. Be merciful unto me, O Man, and I will serve Thee and Thy family many years with a glad heart.

Finally, O Lord, when my youthful beauty and strength be gone, and my days of service ended, neither turn me out to starve and freeze, nor sell me to some cruel man to be tortured. O Man, if Thou be financially unable to care for me in my old days, take Thou my life in the kindest way.

Hear and answer my prayer, O my Lord, and YOUR God will reward you both here and in the hereafter.

With all reverence I so pray unto Thee in the name of Him, who was born in a manger.—AMEN.

GRAMONT AND FELL

SYNOPSIS—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are surprised by the Midnight Masquer.

—4—

"You money trickster! Do you think I would spare such a man as you? You draw your rents from the poor and destitute, your mortgages cover half the parishes in the state, and in your heart is neither compassion nor pity for man or woman. Bah! I could shoot you down without a qualm!"

In his voice was so deadly a menace that Maillard trembled.

"There is nothing of mine in that safe," he said, his voice a low growl. "I have given it to my son to use. He is not here."

"That," said the Masquer calmly, "is exactly why I desire you to open it. Your son must make his contribution, for I keenly regret his absence. If you are a criminal, he is worse! You rob and steal under shelter of the law, but you have certain limitations, certain bounds of an almost outgrown honor. He has none, that son of yours. Why, he would not hesitate to turn your own tricks back upon you, to rob you, if he could! Open that safe or take the consequences; no more talk, now!"

The command cracked out like a whiplash. With a shrug of helplessness the banker turned and fumbled with the protruding knob of the safe. With one exception all eyes were fastened upon this amazing Masquer. The exception was Jachin Fell, who, suddenly alert and watchful, had turned his attention to Maillard and the safe, a keen speculation in his gaze as though he were wondering what that steel vault would produce.

All were silent. There was something about this Midnight Masquer that held them intently. Perhaps some were inclined to think him a jester, one of the party masquerading under the famous bandit's guise; if so, his last words to Maillard had removed all such thought. That indictment had been deadly and terrible—and true, as they knew. Bob Maillard was not greatly admired by those among his father's friends who best knew him.

Now the door of the safe swung open. The compartments appeared empty.

"Take out the drawers and turn them up over the table," commanded the Masquer.

Maillard obeyed. From the last drawer there fell out on the table a large envelope, sealed. The Masquer leaned forward, seized upon this envelope, and crushed it into his pocket.

"Thank you," he observed. "That is all."

"D—n you!" cried Maillard, shaking a fist. "You'd try blackmail, would you?"

The bandit regarded him a moment, then laughed.

"If you knew what was in that envelope, my dear financier, you might not speak so hastily. If I knew what was in it, I might answer you. But I don't know. I only suspect—and hope. And now, my friends—au revoir!"

The Masquer sprang backward into the hall. The door slammed, the key clicked. He was gone!

Maillard was the first to wake into voice and action. "The other door!" he cried. "Into the dining room—"

He flung open a second door and dashed into the dining room, followed by the other men. Here the windows, giving upon the garden, were open. Then Maillard came to a sudden halt, and after him the others; through the night was pulsating, with great distinctness, the throbbing roar of an airplane motor! From Maillard broke a bitter cry:

"The detectives—I'll get the fools here! You gentlemen search the house. That fellow can't possibly have escaped—"

They hastily separated. Maillard dashed away to summon the detectives, also to get other men to aid in the search.

The result was vain. No one had been seen to enter or leave the house, and certainly there had been no airplane about. The Masquer had not appeared except in the library, and now he was most indubitably not in the house. By all testimony, he had neither entered it nor left it!

"Well, I'm d—d!" said Maillard, helplessly, to Judge Forester, when the search was concluded. "Not a trace of the scoundrel! Here, Fell—can't you help us out? Haven't you discovered a thing?"

"Nothing," responded Jachin Fell, calmly.

At this instant Bob Maillard rushed up. He had just learned of the Masquer's visit. In response to his excited questioning his father described the scene in the library, and added:

"I trust there was nothing important among those papers of yours, Robert?"

"No," said the younger man. "No. Nothing valuable at all."

Henry Gramont was passing. He caught the words and paused, his gaze resting for an instant upon the group. A faint smile rested upon his rather harshly drawn features.

"I just found this," he announced, holding out a paper. "It was pinned to the outside of the library door. I presume that your late visitor left it as a memento?"

Jachin Fell took the paper, the other men crowding around him.

"Ah, Maillard! The same handwriting as that of your letter!"

Upon the paper was penciled a single hasty line:

"My compliments to Robert Maillard—and my thanks."

Bob Maillard sprang forward, angrily inspecting the paper. When he relinquished it, Fell calmly claimed it.

"Confound the rogue!" muttered the banker's son, turning away. His features were pale, perhaps with anger. "There was nothing but stock certificates in that envelope—and they can be reissued."

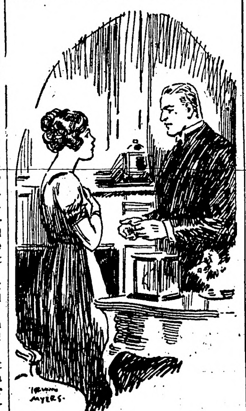
The festivities were not broken up. News of the robbery gradually leaked out among the guests; the generally accepted verdict was that the Masquer had appeared, only to be frightened away before he could secure any loot.

It was nearly two in the morning when Jachin Fell, who was leaving, encountered Henry Gramont at the head of the wide stairway. He halted and turned to the younger man.

"Ah—have you a pencil, if you please?"

"I think so, Mr. Fell." Gramont felt beneath his Franciscan's robe, and extended a pencil.

Jachin Fell examined it, brought a paper from beneath his domino, and wrote down a word. The paper was that on which the farewell message of the Midnight Masquer had been written.



"Did You Actually See the Midnight Masquer Last Night?"

"A hard lead, a very hard point indeed!" said Fell. He pocketed the paper again and regarded Gramont steadily as he returned the pencil. "Few men carry so hard a pencil, sir."

"You're quite right," and Gramont smiled. "I borrowed this from Bob Maillard only a moment ago. Its hardness surprised me."

"Do you know, a most curious thing—"

"Yes?" prompted Gramont, his eyes intent upon the little gray man.

"That paper you brought us—the paper which you found pinned to the library door," said Fell, apologetically. "Do you know, Mr. Gramont, that oddly enough there were no pin holes in that paper?"

Gramont smiled faintly, as though he were inwardly amused over the remark.

"Not at all curious," he said, his voice level. "It was pinned rather stoutly—I tore off the portion bearing the message. I'll wager that you'll find the end of the paper still on the door downstairs. You might make certain that its torn edge fits that of the paper in your pocket; if it did not, then the fact would be curious! I am most happy to have met you, Mr. Fell. I trust we shall meet again, often."

With a smile, he extended his hand, which Mr. Fell shook cordially.

Upon gaining the lower hall Fell glanced at the door of the library. There, still pinned to the wood where it had been unregarded by the passers-by, was a small scrap of paper. Mr. Fell glanced at it again, then shook his head and slowly turned away, as though resisting a temptation.

"No," he muttered. "No. It would be sure to fit the paper in my pocket. It would be sure to fit, confound him!"

A little later he left the house, striding briskly down the avenue. When he approached the first street light he came to a pause, and began softly to pat his person as though searching for something.

"I told you that you'd pay for knowing too much about me, young man!" he said, softly. "What's this, now—what's this?"

A slight rustle of paper, as he walked along, had attracted his attention. He passed his hands over the loose, open domino that cloaked him; he detected a scrap of paper pinned to it in the rear. He loosened the paper, and under the street light managed to decipher the writing which it bore.

A faint smile crept to his lips as he read the penciled words:

"I do not love you, Jachin Fell,
The reason why, I cannot tell;
But this I know, and know full well,
I do not love you, Jachin Fell!"

"Certainly the fellow has wit, if not originality," muttered Mr. Fell, as he carefully stowed away the paper. The writing upon it was in the hand of the Midnight Masquer.

CHAPTER IV.

Callers.

The house in which Lucie Ledanois lived had been her mother's; the furniture and other things in it had been her mother's; the two negro servants, who spoke only the Creole French patois, had been her mother's. It was a small house, but very beautiful inside. The exterior betrayed a lack of paint or the money with which to have painting done.

The Ledanois family, although distantly connected with others such as the Maillards, had sent forth its final bud of fruition in the girl Lucie. Her mother had died while she was yet an infant, and through the years she had companioned her father, an invalid, during the latter days. He had never been a man to count dollars or costs, and to a large extent he had outworn himself and the family fortunes in a vain search for health.

With Lucie he had been in Europe at the outbreak of war, and had come home to America only to die shortly afterward. Once deprived of his fine recklessness, the girl had found her affairs in a bad tangle. Under the guardianship of Maillard the tangle had been somewhat resolved and simplified, but even Maillard would appear to have made mistakes, and of late Lucie had against her will suspected something amiss in the matter of these mistakes.

It was natural, then, that she should take Jachin Fell into her confidence. Maillard had been her guardian, but it was to Fell that she had always come with her girlish cares and troubles, during even the lifetime of her father.

At precisely three o'clock of the Sunday afternoon Jachin Fell rang the doorbell and Lucie herself admitted him.

"Tell me quickly, Uncle Jachin!" eagerly exclaimed the girl. "Did you actually see the Midnight Masquer last night? I didn't know until afterward that he had really been downstairs and had robbed—"

"I saw him, my dear," and the little gray man smiled. There was more warmth to his smile than usual just now. Perhaps it was a reflection from the eager vitality which so shone in the eyes of Lucie. "I saw him, yes."

A restful face was hers—not beautiful at first glance; a little too strong for beauty, one would say. The deep gray eyes were level and quiet and wide apart, and on most occasions were quite inscrutable. They were now filled with a quick eagerness as they rested upon Jachin Fell. Lucie called him uncle, but not as she called Joseph Maillard uncle; here was no relationship, no formal affectation of relationship, but a purely abiding trust and friendship.

Jachin Fell had done more for Lucie than she herself knew or would know; without her knowledge he had quietly taken care of her finances to an appreciable extent. Between them lay an affection that was very real. Lucie, better than most, knew the extraordinary capabilities of this little gray man; yet not even Lucie guessed a tenth of the character that lay beneath his surface. To her he was never reserved or secretive. Nonetheless, she touched sometimes an impenetrable wall that seemed ever present within him.

> "When I have finished with the Masquer I shall take up his trail."

TORNADO DEAD FILL MORGUES

Swift Swoop of Storm on New York City Engulfs Hundreds.

LASTS FIVE MINUTES

Marine Police Predict Victims in Bay Will Bring Toll to at Least 80 and Still Grapple for Bodies.

New York.—Morgues and undertaking shops of the metropolitan area held the bodies of more than three score men, women and children—victims of the brief cylonic thunderstorm.

Marine police, who continued all day their work of grappling in Pelham bay and Long Island sound, off City island, where the greatest toll was taken among canoeists and fishermen, predicted they would find at least a score more victims—enough to push the death toll past 80. Eyewitnesses of the swift tragedy placed the number even higher.

Engulfed in Storm.

At least 250 canoes, rowboats and small motorboats were bobbing about off the island, witnesses said, when the storm came screaming down on the resort, at a velocity of 86 miles an hour or better. Occupants of the little craft, sensing their danger, made a run for shelter, but scarcely had they got under way when they were engulfed in a blinding storm of rain and hail.

As quickly as it had come, the storm vanished. It had lasted less than five minutes. But scarcely a dozen of the 250 small craft had survived.

Crowds Helpless to Aid.

Horror stricken, but helpless to aid, the crowds on the beach and about the Casino pier saw scores of men and women clinging to wrecked and overturned craft in the choppy sound and bay. One by one, they gave up the struggle, and dropped quietly off, to be carried out toward the open sea by the tide.

Some bodies, the police say, probably never will be recovered. The tide, turning, brought more than a score of them back today.

Heroic Work Saves Hundreds.

Eyewitnesses estimated there were between 500 and 750 persons in the wrecked craft. Heroic work by United States life guards, members of nearby yacht clubs, and volunteers from the shore crowd saved hundreds.

More than 50 craft of all sorts were out, dragging to safety the survivors of the disaster. A score or more saved themselves by clinging to the sides of Cornelius Vanderbilts' schooner yacht Intrepid, until they were hauled in or picked up by rescue craft.

Bodies Occasionally Found.

The waters had been cleared by nightfall of all the living, but the search for the dead continued through the night. Guided by the searchlight of a policeboat, a score of boats cruised about, grappling for, and occasionally finding bodies.

Meantime, chaos reigned on shore, where darkness descended, unbroken by the usual flare of electric lights. The island power plant had been put out of commission by the storm, as had telephone and telegraph lines.

Mothers, fathers and wives of the missing besieged the police station, where a temporary morgue had been set up—gazing fearfully at the faces of the dead by the flickering light.

COULTER ANNOUNCES PLANS

Commencement Address of A. C. President Is Key to Policies.

Fargo, N. D.—Dr. John Lee Coulter, president of the North Dakota Agricultural college, in his commencement address to the class of 64 students who received degrees on completion of their work this week, outlined for the first time his policy of conducting the school, some phases of which would mean changes of far-reaching consequence, the chief change suggested being the removal of the "regulatory department" from college control, and the placing of this work under a separate department.

Dr. Coulter advocated retaining the present name of the institution, admitting that it does not cover all of the activities of the institution, but because of "its historic use, the tremendous importance of agriculture in North Dakota and to prove our appreciation of the dignity of that vocation."

Indians To Greet Landis.

Devils Lake, N. D.—When Judge Kenesaw M. Landis arrives in Devils Lake on June 21 for the state convention of the American Legion, he will be met with a war whoop from a band of Sioux Indians in battle regalia. The Indians, from the Fort Totten reservation across the lake, will play a part in the entertainment of the veteran Chicago jurist, and will stage a special ceremony at Lakewood in honor of the man who fined the Standard Oil company $29,000,000.

Read What Mrs. Lucas Writes Concerning Her Troubles, Which May be Just Like Yours

St. Louis, Mo.—"I had troubles that all women are apt to have, with pains in my back, weak, tired, nervous feelings and a weak stomach. I had been this way about a year and was unable to work or stand on my feet for any length of time. My husband's aunt told me how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done her and begged me to try it, so I did. All my pains and weakness are gone, my stomach is all right and I do my work at home and also work for Swift's Packing Company. I recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends and you may publish my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. LULU LUCAS, 719A Vandeventer St., St. Louis, Mo.

Again and again one woman tells another of the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

You who work must keep yourself strong and well. You can't work if you are suffering from such troubles. Mrs. Lucas couldn't. She tried our Vegetable Compound and her letter tells you what it did for her. Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial now.

"Willing to Pay."

Two colored ball teams were assembled and were about to start their game, but discovered one of their fielders missing. Their captain asked for someone from the crowd to fill the fielder's place. A tall gent said he had some experience, so they put him in the game. Everything went all right till it came his turn at bat. After the newcomer had swung at two pitched balls he connected with the next one and it went soaring over the fence. The crowd all began to yell "Run! Run!" But he didn't get it, and turning to the crowd he shouted: "Run nothing. I'll buy them another ball!"

Clever Boy.

Help That Aching Back!
Is your back giving out? Are you tortured with backache and stabbing pains? Does any exertion leave you "all played out"? Feel you just can't keep going? Likely your kidneys are to blame. Overwork, strains, hurry and worry tend to weaken the kidneys. Backache is often the first warning. Headaches and dizziness may come, too, and annoying bladder irregularities. Help the kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills—the remedy recommended by thousands. Ask your neighbor!

Literary Amenities.

George Moore, the English novelist, and a group of other litterati were discussing recent books. Mr. Moore wished to refer to the author of a new publication, but could not recall his name. "You know," said Moore, "the man with the funny name. Dear, dear, what is it? You know, a stupid name, a silly name." "Shaw?" suggested some one. "That's it," said Moore. "Shaw! What an extraordinary name!"

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

St. Paul—St. Paul has been officially characterized as "the wettest spot in Minnesota" by Federal Judge Page Morris.

St. Paul—North Oaks, the James J. Hill farm, may be worth more than contestants of the will of Mrs. Hill ever dreamed. It is thought oil underlies the property.

Slayton—About 5,000 people attended the third annual picnic of the Murray County Farm bureau at Avoca park here.

St. Paul—Appointment of A. D. Wilson as a regent of the University of Minnesota was announced by Governor J. A. O. Preus.

Minneapolis—E. B. Heiberg, aged 63, state dairy and food inspector for 12 years and United States inspector of internal revenue, is dead.

Akeley—Citizens of Akeley have completed an up to date tourists' camp on Eleventh lake. Everything has been made convenient for the traveler.

Fairmont—The juniors and seniors may continue to dance at their annual reception, as has been the custom for several years, if they so desire, according to decision of the school board.

Moorhead—Governor A. M. Hyde of Missouri will give the commencement address for the graduating class of the Moorhead State Teachers college.

Winona—Crop conditions in southern Minneosta have not been better in several years, according to the weekly report issued here by H. J. Wagan, division freight and passenger agent of the Chicago & North Western railway.

Hibbing—The grand jury which has been in session here finished its work, returning 23 true bills which were made public by Assistant County Attorney Phil Stone.

Rochester—Arrangements are complete for the 50th annual convention of fire departments of Minnesota, to be held here.

Marshall—Governor J. A. O. Preus is to deliver an address at a picnic to be given by farmers of Lyon county. There will be ball games, races, wrestling matches and other sports.

Thief River Falls—Nine women are in the list of grand and petit jury filed with the sheriff. The grand jury is sumomned to appear on June 27 and the petit jury will report on the following day.

St. Cloud—Several thousand faremrs of Stearns, Sherburne and Benton counties are expected to attend the annual Tri-County Farm bureau picnic here.

St. Paul—The 17th annual meeting of the Tri-State Postmasters' association of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, took place at the Hotel St. Francis. H. B. Brown of Clark, S. D., president of the association, presided.

St. Paul—The last written address prepared by Dr. Cyrus Northrop, president emeritus of the University of Minnesota, written especially for the Macalaster senior class of 1922, will be read at the exercises by George D. Dayton, president of the colloge board of trustees.

St. James—E. Z. Dasey, age 77, of this city, was elected Minnesota state commander of the G. A. R. at the annual encampment in Minneapolis. He enlisted when 17 years old, in the Thirty-second Wisconsin regiment.

Minneapolis—Three women from England, France and Germany concluded a series of addresses given in Minneapolis in an attempt to stir Minneapolis women to join their movement to prevent war in the future.

Austin—N. V. Gardner, of the First National bank of Winona, was elected president of the Minnesota First District Bankers association, which closed its annual session here.

Mankato—Blue Earth county, through the board of county commissioners, will pay to the farm bureau $3,000 for aid in conducting the business of the organization in this county for the coming year.

Hibbing—The extermination of obnoxious weeds in the district surrounding Hibbing will begin at once. Orders were issued to residents of Kittzville and Brooklyn to start the cutting of weeds at once.

Minneapolis—This city leads every other metropolis in the United States in aeronautical development, and now is offered the opportunity of becoming the aerial center of the northwest.

Minneapolis—Repair crews worked in Minneapolis, St. Louis Park and the vicinity to repair thousands of dollars in damage caused by one of the most severe storms in recent years which swept the northwest. A boy was killed by a broken power wire.

Minneapolis—An innocent-looking brown-paper parcel left in a side-room near the main waiting room of St. Mary's hospital provided a big surprise for nurses, when they opened it to find its "contents" a healthy, daintily-dressed baby boy.

Claremont—W. C. Coffey, dean of the state agricultural college was the principal speaker at the picinic of Dodge County Shorthorn Breeders here.

Bemidji—A delegation of 100 automobiles carrying Beltrami county farmers to the National Dairy show at the State Fair grounds at Hamline, Oct. 7 to 14 is now being planned by the Beltrami county farm bureau.

Luverne—Thirty-three motorists were taken in charge of the Special License Inspector William Martin of St. Cloud for failing to comply with the motor laws, and fined accordingly.

EACH IS A GENUINE GOODYEAR

One is the famous reliable 30 x 3½ inch Goodyear All-Weather Tread Clincher.

Its companion is the popular 30 x 3½ inch Goodyear Cross Rib.

The Goodyear Cross Rib is built of the same high grade Egyptian cotton fabric that goes into the All-Weather Tread Goodyear.

It has a long-wearing but differently designed tread, and sells for less money.

More than 5,000,000 of these tires have been sold in the last five years.

Their fine performance has demonstrated the folly of buying unknown and unguaranteed tires of lower price.

Ask your Goodyear Service Station Dealer about their advantages.

HAD NAVAL OFFICER GUESSING

Peculiar Combination of Names Seemed to Be Almost Too Much Out of the Ordinary.

While Lieutenant Commander H. E. Parsons, navy recruiting officer at Houston, Tex., was sitting at his desk a few days ago a young man entered and said he wanted to enlist.

"What is your name?" the officer asked.

"Bryan Dry," was the reply.

"You are a namesake of William Jennings Bryan, I take it," suggested the officer.

"Yes, sir."

"What is your home address?" was the next question.

"Moonshine Hill."

Parsons found on further inquiry that there is a Moonshine Hill in Texas and that Bryan Dry was one of its young inhabitants. Without more questioning, the applicant was signed up for a term of service in the navy.—Kansas City Star.

The Styles.

"What, in your opinion, has been the outstanding feature of woman's emancipation?"

"She talks less and reveals more." —Judge.

Cutting Off the Last Word.

Archeologists have recently been puzzled over the finding of the headless body of an Egyptian princess in an ancient tomb. It seems that the question as to how the lady lost her head is important in archeologic circles.

In certain Oriental countries it is customary for the head of the house, in the event of a domestic argument, to behead the lady, thus cutting the lady as well as the argument short. Doubtless, the last words that issued from the lips of the headless princess were: "Where have you been?"—Judge.

Sure of It.

Margaret looked up at her mother one day and said:

"Mother, Jesus has wash days, hasn't he?"

"Why, no, child," her mother replied.

"But he has," insisted Margaret.

"Why do you say that?" the mother asked.

"Because, mother, didn't He wash my sins away?"

An honest man's word is as good as his bond.

Envy will find faults where there are none.

Unkind Remark.

A scenario writer experienced great difficulty in getting his plots accepted. As a rule, they were so uninteresting that a complete hearing was seldom granted. At last he managed to persuade a weary producer to listen to the synopsis of his latest play.

"Imagine," he began, "midnight, all silent as the grave.

"Two burglars force open library windows, and eventually commence operations on the safe. The clock strikes one—"

"Which one?" yawned the producer.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage, executed by A. S. Chase, Mortgagor, to John C. Arvidson, Mortgagee, dated on the 1st day of January, 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 84, of Mortgages on Page 262 thereof.

That such default consists in the non-payment, when due, of the principal sum of Seventeen Hundred, ($1700.00) Dollars, which fell due January 1st, 1922, and the interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1921 and interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1922. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is the sum of Nineteen Hundred Sixty and 68-100 ($1960.63) Dollars.

That the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in Marshall County, Minnsota, and described as follows: The South Half of Southeast Quarter (S1-2SE1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-eight (28) and the West Half of the Southwest Quarter (W1-2 SW1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-seven (27), all of the above being in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North of Range Numbered Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian and containing One Hundred Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government Survey thereof.

That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Marshall County, Minnesota, at the West front door of the Marshall County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 1st day of August, A. D., 1922, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five ($75.00) Dollars Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof; which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon by said mortgage secured which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two Thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninety-six cents ($2763 96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155) North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75 00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

Big Happenings of the Week Condensed for Benefit of Busy Readers.

TOLD IN A FEW WORDS

Kernels Culled From News of Moment in All Parts of the World—Of Interest to All the People Everywhere.

Washington

Washington—The regular army still is nearly 70,000 short of the authorized strength of 280,000 officers and men.

Washington—The interstate commerce commission has denied application of the Southern Pacific railroad for a loan of $5,028,000 to purchase new equipment.

Washington—Soft coal production for the week of October 30 was 12,338,000 tons, a new maximum for the year's figures as made public by the U. S. Geological survey.

Washington—The United States has definitely informed both Great Britain and France that it will not under any circumstances participate in the blockade against Russia instituted by the two allied nations.

Washington—The new tactical peacetime organization of the Regular Army, based on the recently enacted army reorganization bill passed, was announced by Secretary N. D Baker. It provides for one skeleton of 337,221 men.

Washington—The last vestige of government control over sugar has been removed through signature by President Wilson of a proclamation providing for revocation Nov. 15 of licenses held by wholesalers, refiners, exporters and importers.

Washington — Representative John J. Esch of Wisconsin, joint author of the Esch-Cummins railroad bill who was defeated for re-election, will probably be named a member of the Interstate Commerce commission, according to Republican leaders here. It was labor's opposition to the railroad bill which, it is said, was responsible for Congressman Esch's defeat.

Sporting.

New York—The Army football players will wear distinguishing numbers in their annual game with the navy here, Nov. 27, Major Phillips Hayes announced.

Boston—Hugh Duffy, former Boston National outfield star, was announced as the new manager of the Red Sox, succeeding Ed Barrows, who resigned to become business manager of the New York Americans.

Princeton, N. J.—The Princeton alumni weekly has asked that Harvard and Princeton meet on a neutral field Dec. 4, to play off last Saturday's tie game. The Yale bowl was suggested as the scene by Donald Herring, former All-American star.

New York—Pugilism has entered the realm of "frenzied finance." Jack Dempsey, the world's champion, and Georges Carpentier, the French war hero and European titleholder, signed articles for a fight for which they will split half a million dollars. Dempsey will receive $300,000 and his opponent $200,000.

Domestic

Springfield, Mass.—The first labor college in this country was opened with a registration of 20.

Sacramento, Calif.—William Beckman, 89, said to be the oldest bank president in the United States in point of service died.

Chicago—Winfield J. Held, court clerk at the Maxwell police station, and Joseph Pijanowski, policeman, were probably fatally wounded in a gun battle with two assailants.

San Francisco—James J. Tierney, arrested here on a charge of embezzlement of approximately $50,000 from a Chicago bank, waived extradition. Tierney admitted embezzlement to the court.

Chicago—In the first of a projected series of citywide night raids, federal prohibition authorities descended on five saloons and one still. They captured nearly $25,000 worth, retail, of liquor.

El Paso, Texas—Mexico will not accept recognition from any government "under conditions that will lessen the respect due" the Mexican government, according to Provisional President De la Huerta.

Chicago—Major Robert Wilson McClaughry, formerly warden of the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, and of the state penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., died at his home here. He was 81 years old.

Chicago—Mayor William Hale Thompson requested the resignation of Chief of Police John J. Garrity, and after receiving it appointed his secretary, Charles C. Fitzmorris, chief for the announced purpose of "ridding Chicago of crooks."

New York—The names of six men and one woman were added to the American Hall of Fame in an election announced by the senate of New York university. The seven additions are: Samuel Langhorne Clemens, author; James Buchanan Eads, engineer; Patrick Henry, statesman; William Thomas Green Morton, physician; Augustus Saint Gaudens, sculptor; Roger Williams, theologian; Alice Freeman Palmer, educator.

Detroit—Four masked men held up three messengers of the Detroit State Savings bank, robbed them of $20,000 and escaped.

Denver, Colo.—Coal miners in the Northern Colorado fields who have been on strike since September 27, voted to return to work, union officials announced.

Marion, Ohio—George Busby Christian, Jr., of Ohio is to succeed Joseph P. Tumulty, Jr., on March 4, when President-elect Harding is ushered into office, according to close advisors of the senator.

Baltimore—Two soldiers from Camp Holabird were shot and painfully wounded when a detachment of soldiers were making a raid on a liquor cache, where whisky valued at $40,000 alleged to have been stolen by Holabird soldiers was recovered.

Northwest

Madison, Wis.—Wisconsin buttermakers in convention here reorganized their association by adopting a new constitution, which sets up a new standard for its membership.

Grandon, Wis.—The first genuine black fox to be killed in the forest country in many years was shot near this city by Ren Marvin. It is said the pelt is valued at more than $600.

Madison, Wis.—Fourteen paroles have been granted to prisoners at the state reformatory at Green Bay, M. J. Tappin, secretary of the state board of prison control says. Eight applications were deferred and eight denied.

Beloit, Wis.—Charles Hopkins, 37, was killed when he jumped from an airplane with a parachute, which failed to open until he was nearly to the ground. The plane was at an altitude of 1,000 feet when Hopkins jumped.

Ladysmith, Wis.—Joseph Maciak, 35 years old, a farmer living near Hawkins, was accidentally shot and killed by Joseph Heubeck while hunting near this place. Heubeck, it is said, shot at Maciak, mistaking him for a deer.

Winnipeg, Man.—Tentative plans for co-operative marketing of wheat by which farmers may be protected from depression in prices, are being worked out here by a joint committee of the United Farmers of Manitoba and the Canadian Council of Agriculture.

Billings, Mont.—A case of unusual interest which has attracted wide attention in this section begins in the state courts. It is the Earl Wade case, who, it is said, killed 26 head of cattle belonging to a neighbor. The killing is alleged to have been the result of ill feeling growing out of a quarrel.

Ashland, Wis.—United States submarine chaser has entered the lists against whisky runners plying their trade between the Canadian side of Lake Superior and points along the American shore. The chaser made his first haul when a fast motor boat carrying 20 cases of whisky was seized and the owner arrested.

Winnipeg—Farmers of Lethbridge northern irrigation district have decided to bond their land for $50 an acre, a total of $5,400,000 to construct an irrigation project to water annually 108,000 acres. This is the first time in the history of Canada that farmers have ever bonded their land to construct an irrigation system.

HOLD WHEAT, GET $3 BUSHEL

Oklahoma Growers to Organize North Dakota Farmer for Marketing.

BANKERS TO ASSIST

Holding Crop 20 Days Will Send Price Upward, Declares National Organizer at Fargo Meeting.

Fargo.—If every farmer in the wheat belt would hold his wheat for 20 days the price would advance to near $3 a bushel and would remain at a high level, according to Abraham Slaughter, Waukita, Okla., national organizer for the Wheat Growers' association of America, here at the head of a delegation of seven Oklahoma farmers to organize the farmers of North Dakota for the holding of their wheat.

Farmers Are Holding.

"In the eight states in the wheat belt approximately 55 per cent of the wheat is still in the hands of the farmers," said Mr. Slaughter. "This wheat should be held for a $3 price. So far we have organized the states of Texas, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska and part of Colorado. Now we expect to organize the farmers of North Dakota, particularly in those counties east of the Missouri river.

"If there is 60 per cent of the wheat left in North Dakota, we believe the farmers should adopt the holding policy. Some of them will have to sell part of their grain to meet their expenses and pay their notes at the bank, but at least 40 per cent of the wheat should be held, and if this system is carried out in a businesslike manner, the wheat held will bring the farmer close to $3 a bushel. We are asking that price because it will pay the cost of production and give us a legitimate profit.

No Money Made.

"Farmers who sold their wheat around $2.50 when they threshed it did the right thing for this year, but they didn't make any money on their crop.

"Our organization is purely a farm organization for the betterment of farm marketing conditions and nothing else. We feel the need of a more businesslike management of the farm and its products, but we are not interested in the banking business or the milling business to a point where we wish to control them. Our sole object is to get a fair price for our wheat and we have no kick on how anyone else is conducting his business. If we organize properly and have proper co-operation we will get the results."

To Start Organizing.

The seven farmers in Fargo representing the National Wheat Growers association are Mr. Slaughter, Dan Murley, Ed Garrett, V. L. Hughes, F. F. Parker, W. C. Scott and A. C. Hoeffer, all of Oklahoma. After a conference here these men will be sent out over the state to various county seats to form county organizations and urge the farmers to co-operate with the national association to hold their wheat for $3 a bushel. No state organization will be formed.

The bankers in the states, already organized, have given their fullest co-operation to the plan, according to the representatives of the association. In Oklahoma the bankers have agreed to finance the farmers who agree to hold their grain until the grain is sold and the farmers are able to meet their obligations. The organizers said that the bankers in other states had been equally interested in the movement.

Rescue Steamer Passengers.

Superior, Wis.—Half of the crew of the steamer Francis J. Widlar has been taken off the vessel, which is wrecked on Pancake shoals, on the shore of Lake Superior, just outside of Whitefish bay, according to word received by agents for the boat here.

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—The Great Lakes Towing company tug Iowa fought its way through the storm tossed waters of Lake Superior toward Pancake shoals, bent upon rescuing a part of the crew of the Becker line steel freighter Francis J. Widlar, that was wrecked during one of the most severe storms in the lake's history.

Captain Arthur Forbes of Ashtabula, O., in command of the stricken vessel, probably accompanied by some members of the crew, was picked up by the steamer Livingstone.

Captain Forbes, who is assumed to have fought his way to the channel in a small boat in order to notify the world of the plight of his crew, sent a wireless message for aid immediately upon boarding the Livingstone. His message made no mention of loss of life.

League of Nations Meets.

Geneva.—Determination to meet intricate problems in world affairs and to lay firmly the foundation stones of the League of Nations was evident in the demeanor of delegates of 41 countries when they convened for the first session of the assembly of the league. Although differences of opinion have already arisen relative to the Danzig question and the admission of Germany to the league with some of her former allies, there is disposition on the part of delegates to meet every situation with fairness.

ASK TARIFF ON CANADA WHEAT

Kansas Launches Move to Have Law Passed at Coming Short Session.

SENATOR CURTIS ACTS

Representatives From Spring Wheat Belt Will Meet Soon After Congress Convenes to Get Early Action on Measure.

Washington.—Senators and representatives from the various wheat growing sections of the United States will be asked to join the Kansas delegation in a movement to force the passage of a bill by the short session of congress putting a tariff on Canadian wheat, Senator Curtis of the Sunflower state announced here.

Kansas Willing to Lead.

Canadian wheat pouring into the Twin Cities and other American markets, according to Senator Curtis, is largely responsible for the continued slump in wheat prices. Kansas wheat farmers are demanding relief. The members of congress from that state are ready to take the lead in restoring a tariff that will protect the American wheat grower from the Canadian products.

Such a tariff was asked by the recent convention here of farmer organization representatives. It was not generally expected, however, that anything would be done at the special session. While it was not doubted that congress would pass such a bill the thought was that President Wilson would veto it.

Big Majority Predicted.

Senator Curtis and other Kansans, however, believe they can get results before the Republican administration comes into power. They expect to get such a big majority for the legislation that it can be repassed over the president's veto in case he disapproves.

Members from the spring wheat belt, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, and Montana, will be invited to a conference shortly after congress convenes December 6. Because of the hostility in that section to former President Taft's Canadian reciprocity program Senator Curtis expects the fullest co-operation from senators and representatives of the northwest states. There is good reason to believe he will get it. The spring wheat growers have been hit even harder than the winter wheat farmers by the slump in wheat prices. They marketed none of their crop at the top price of $2.55 a bushel. Nearly half of the winter wheat belt output was on the market before the cash price dropped below $2.

Higher Priced Bread Hinted.

Senator Curtis does not anticipate any trouble in getting quick action by congress despite the fact that a tariff on Canadian wheat might result in higher priced bread. The house must act first. A Kansas member of the house will introduce the measure and it must be considered by the ways and means committee. That committee last winter went on record in favor of cancelling Canadian reciprocity. It reported out a bill by Representative Young of North Dakota to repeal the present law.

There will be no trouble getting the wheat tariff measure before the house, Senator Curtis explained. Representative Campbell of Kansas is chairman of the rules committee, which determines what legislation shall be considered. The northwest is represented on this committee by Johnson of South Dakota and Schall of Minnesota.

Senator Curtis is Republican whip of the senate. With the aid of Senators Kellogg and Nelson of Minnesota McCumber and Gronna of North Dakota and other wheat belt members quick action can be obtained there, he thinks.

MILLION DOLLAR MAIL LOOT

Biggest Train Robbery in History Nets Fabulous Sum Near Omaha.

Omaha.—The biggest train robbery in the history of the United States mail service was committed between Omaha and Council Bluffs. Police of Omaha and Council Bluffs, sheriffs of both counties, postal inspectors, private detectives, and others in swarms are searching for the robbers, who disappeared completely with their loot.

According to official reports, which cannot be verified, the robbers secured $1,000,000 or more in gold, currency, bonds, and jewelry.

The train robbed was a through fast mail from San Francisco to New York, and the treasure car carried registered mail from the Pacific to the Atlantic.

A portion of the loot was a United States treasury shipment of gold from the mint in San Francisco to Washington, D. C.

Children Die in Theatre.

New York.—Seven children were burned to death in a Cherry St. moving picture theatre fire. Three children are missing.

Livestock Receipts Heavy.

South St. Paul.—Last week was the heaviest in car load receipts, since the stockyards were opened here more than thirty years ago. More than 3,000 car loads of livestock arrived, which exceeds the previous record made last year by 200 car loads. The record for cattle receipts also was broken.

Grand Forks—John Hurley, conductor and J. E. Williams, brakeman of a Great Northern work train, were killed, when an engine, hauling a caboose, ran into the rear end of their train.

St. Paul—Governor J. A. A. Burnquist was re-elected president of the St. Paul branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the annual meeting of that organization.

Duluth—A. R. Burns, who pleaded guilty October 21 to two charges of smuggling whisky and who is now serving a 60-day sentence in the Duluth workhouse, today was sentenced to six months in the Cook county jail in federal court.

St. Paul—Reports from small game hunters indicate that on an average only 15 ducks per hunter were killed this year as compared to an average of 27 last year. The weather was unfavorable for duck hunting this season, according to Carlos Avery, state game and fish commissioner.

St. Paul—During October $1,239,581 was paid out in soldier's bonuses and during the first week in November $250,000 was paid out. Up to July 1, $9,000,000 in soldiers bonuses had been paid, making the total payment approximately $11,500,000, according to George LaFond, chief accountant in the office of M. J. Desmond.

Minneapolis—Falling in 10 days $1.50 a barrel from its price on Saturday, Oct. 30, and selling in the Minneapolis market at $9.75 to $10 for the best family patents and $9.25 to $9.75 for standard patents, flour became a prime factor in the downward tendency of the cost of living. The price now quoted compares with $10.40 to $10.80 for best patents on Nov. 6, last Saturday, and with $11.20 to $11.50 on the Saturday preceding that.

St. Paul—Governor Burnquist issued a proclamation making it unlawful to trap muskrats in the state of Minnesota for the 1920-1921 season. This proclamation was issued on the recommendation of Carlos Avery, state game and fish commissioner, who sent out questionnaires to fur dealers and trappers in all parts of the state. The answers to the questionnaires were about 10 to 1 in favor of a closed season in order to save the muskrats from extermination.

St. Paul—The Minnesota Railroad and Warehouse commission filed formal protest yesterday against the federal valuation of railroads in Minnesota which they charge are $23,025,037.50 higher than was filed with the Interstate Commerce commission. The state alleges that the amounts of the federal excesses are as follows: Great Northern, $13,387,004, or 23 per cent; Soo line, $9,254,023, or 35.1 per cent; Hill City railway, $135,559.82, or 45.2 per cent; Minneapolis & Rainy River, $661,888, or 46 per cent; Dubuque & Sioux City, $186,582, or 36.9 per cent.

St. Paul—J. P. Kinney, chief forester of the Indian service of the federal Forestry department, with headquarters at Washington, has just arranged for the sale of 17,000,000 feet of timber on Indian reservations in the state. He conferred with W. T. Cox, state forester, at the capitol. Sawmills operated by the Indians on the Mett Lake reservation are providing keen competition for the commercial mills in selling lumber, he reports. The Indians are doing considerable logging themselves and more of them are entering the lumbering and logging business each year, he said.

St. Paul—The Duroc Jersey boar, Long Pathfinder, Second, has been sold for $1,800 to J. L. Donovan of Clontarf, Minn., by the animal husbandry division of the University of Minnesota.

Roseau—Farmers in the vicini[illegible] Roseau are selling flax straw to [illegible]luth firm for $7 a ton. Thirty to 40 tons are being delivered daily. The flax is being stacked and will be baled before shipping.

Duluth—Scores of potato growers from all parts of the state displayed their products at the state potato show which was held in conjunction with the Minnesota Potato Growers' association convention.

Stillwater—The five steel barges that were constructed for the government by the Twin City Forge & Foundry company have been taken to St. Louis where they will be launched to trade in the Ohio river.

Spooner—Wild strawberry bushes in the vicinity of Rapid River township are bearing their second crop of fruit and many quarts have been picked by the settlers in that section, according to reports reaching here.

Owatonna—Rev. John Kildahl, at present in charge of a Wisconsin parish and well known in northwest Lutheran circles, has accepted a call as pastor of the Trinity English Lutheran church of this city.

Marshall—Unless some errors are found in the returns, A. E. Anderson and Siver Erickson, candidates for county commisioner in the fifth district, will have to draw lots to see who shall qualify for the office.

Fergus Falls—Search of almost two months duration for Arvid Anderson, patient of the state hospital for the insane here, ended with the finding of his body in Hoot Lake. Boys who were fishing made the discovery.

Duluth—A coroner's jury in session here returned a verdict that Chris F. Lahman, 55 years old, a farmer of Floodwood, had been murdered by an unknown assailant and had not died of heart disease as had been first announced by the family.

St. Paul—The coal shortage situation hereafter will be referred to Judge Ira B. Mills, chairman of the Railroad and Warehouse commission, following announcement by Governor Burnquist that this work had been transferred from Judge John F. McGee of Minneapolis, to that state department.

Duluth—After being out one hour and thirty minutes the jury in the trial of John Murphy, former chief of police of Duluth, and ex-deputy United States Marshall Frank L. Bradley and nine others charged with transporting bottled liquor, returned a verdict of not guilty against all of the defendants.

Minneapolis — Charles Vogtel, wealthy miller of New Ulm, Minn., whose body was found in an alley after he had fallen from the ninth floor of the Radisson hotel, met his death in an accident, Coroner Seashore declared. He is believed to have toppled out of the window while seized with a fainting spell.

St. Paul—A resolution urging that the marriage laws be made more stringent by legislation at the next meeting of the state Legislature and that a provision be made that five days elapse between the application for, and the granting of a marriage license, was adopted at a meeting of the Minnesota State Humane society.

Owatonna—Steps will be taken at a meeting here toward the organization of Company I, First Minnesota infantry. The new organization is to replace Company I of the Second Minnesota infantry, which served as a unit of the 136th infantry during the World war and was mustered out of the service in the spring of 1919.

Minneapolis—Full indorsement of the 1920 Christmas Seal sale to be conducted in every community in Minnesota beginning December 1, was voiced by representative teachers from every section of the state, in a resolution unanimously adopted at the concluding session of the annual meeting of the Minnesota Education association.

Owatonna—The quarterly conference of the state board of control, in conjunction with representatives from state institutions throughout the state, including superintendents, educators and teachers, was conducted here. It was decided to request that the university farm make a survey of all state farm institutions and make a report on small fruits.

Virginia—Leo and Thomas Smegelo, 13 and 15 years old, were found unconscious in the snow here one with his right leg and the other his right arm severed. Two men, attracted by cries, found one of the boys, who pointed to his brother a few feet away. The lads were lying alongside the railroad tracks leading to the Mesaba mountain pile.

Redwood Falls—Formation of the proposed Minnesota Valley Drainage and Conservancy district which will include a greater part of the Minnesota valley, now has reached a stage where a general public hearing is to be conducted at New Ulm, Dec. 3, at which the 10 district judges in whose jurisdictions the proposed drainage project will be carried out will hear evidence for and against the petition which has been presented, asking that the big ditch be constructed.

Thief River Falls—The city council adopted a resolution whereby the cost of putting in the sanitary sewer connections from laterals to lots will be assessed against the lots in question, such assessments to be incorporated by the county auditor with the regular real estate tax.

Minneapolis—Maj. Bruce M. Mohler, for nine years a chemist with the division of sanitation of the Minnesota state board of health, is back from Poland, where he has served for more than a year as deputy commissioner for the American Red Cross in Warsaw.

LAST NIGHT'S DREAMS

—WHAT THEY MEAN

DID YOU DREAM ABOUT CHEESE?

"PERHAPS," said Scrooge to the ghost of Marley when the old skinflint fell asleep by the fire and had the delightful Christmas dream which Mr. Dickens has set down for us, "perhaps you are but a bit of undigested cheese." And cheese, from the days when Odysseus visited the dairy of the Cyclops in the early dusk and dawn of time down to the present era, has always been considered to have an intimate relation to dreams. Especially if the cheese is gathered in the form of a Welsh rarebit.

Strange to say, with all this intimate connection and with all the centuries given to a study of the subject, the authorities are far from agreed upon the subject of Dreamland cheeses. One expounder of the mystic meaning of dreams declares that to eat cheese in the visions of the night foretells certain financial gain, while another declares that in order to have the cheese of your dreams bring you real money you must dream of making it instead of eating it.

From an examination of all the best dairy experts of Dreamland it is evident that there is a subtle connection between cheese and money. Some say that to dream of cheese indicates that while you will probably attain fortune, at least you will have a long, hard struggle in doing it.

One or two soothsayers are of the opinion that it is not lucky to eat cheese in a dream, and say that if you do you will soon be very angry about something. The majority opinion would seem to be that to dream anything at all about cheese foretells for you financial success achieved by strenuous efforts. And one sort of cheese appears to be just as potent as another in this respect. Those who don't like strong cheese can have mild just as well. (Copyright.)

THE GIRL ON THE JOB

How to Succeed—How to Get Ahead—How to Make Good

By JESSIE ROBERTS

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS

WHO shall say that adventure and variety are not allied to the home and domestic science? The girl who chooses household economics for her career need not give up hope of travel and excitement. Witness Miss Grace Ferguson, who has only lately returned to New York City from an absence of six years in Porto Rico, where she was teaching the elements of home economics to an entire nation.

Miss Ferguson covered fifty-odd towns in her work, and established schools in all the places visited. She made an exhaustive study of foods and their value, and of prices, and she taught women in that tropic isle how to get the most for their money when they went marketing, and how to have the best meals at the least cost the year round.

A woman who takes a course in domestic science of the advanced type can now-a-days look forward to plenty of work and a good income. She is going to do quite as well, if not better, than her sister who took a business course and went in an office, and she has practically no male competition to fear.

The American home is being put more and more on a scientific basis. The women in the homes want to be shown, they want to know how they can get the most out of their incomes, save themselves hard work, manage for the best. They are glad to come to lectures and demonstrations and to attend classes.

The day for the ill-trained is over. Any woman who wants to make a success must get thorough training. Excellent courses are offered in almost any part of the United States and Canada not too far removed from a town. The best courses are to be had in various colleges at a small price. It is work for which many women have a special genius and love. For such a woman to go into teaching or office work "because I have to earn a living" is a pity. She can earn it, and a good one, in teaching household economics in all its many branches.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"DOLLAR."

WHILE the United States was the first to coin the piece of money known as the "dollar," the word itself was coined long before, as evidenced by the fact that Shakespeare uses it frequently. In "Macbeth," for example, appears the statement:

"Nor would we deign him burial of his men
Till he disbursed, at St. Colme's Inch,
Ten thousand dollars to our general use."

This quotation, which sounds suspiciously like a modern "strike order," proves that Shakespeare was familiar with the dollar, despite the fact that there were no coins of that name known prior to July 5, 1785, when the United States congress passed the resolution referring to the first money put out by the new government. Where, then, did Shakespeare get the word?

The answer lies in the fact that "dollar" is an Anglo-Saxon corruption of the German "thaler," first coined about 1486 in the valley (or thaler) of Joachimsthal. The coin met with popular favor and, during the reign of Charles V, emperor of Germany, king of Spain and lord of Spanish-America, it became the standard currency of the world. Shakespeare merely adopted a slight change of the name, thus antedating both the United States and Great Britain—for the first and only English dollar was coined at the Bank of England in 1804.

An' jest as glad it chatters
As if it fed on biscuit fine
All soaked in milk er dipped in wine

Tooth Bottles.

A new invention is a miniature hot-water bottle for toothache. It holds only half an ounce, and is just big enough to be comfortably retained between the cheek and a painful tooth. All toothaches are not curable by application of heat, but in many instances this method is successful.

MOTHER'S COOK BOOK by Nellie Maxwell

"The young man thinks the Swiss apron with the lace makes his intended look like a picture, as she presides at the chafing dish; but after he puts the ring on her finger and planks down the five to the preacher he sighs because she hasn't a pinchecked blue gingham and can't preside gracefully over the cook stove."

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

Dates are so wholesome and full of food value, a dessert of dates is easy to prepare and is sufficiently satisfying. Wash and cut the dates in halves, sprinkle with broken bits of pecan meats; drop over each dish of dates a spoonful of sweetened and flavored whipped cream and serve.

Simple Salad.

Arrange balls of cheese which have been mixed with cream and seasonings, on the white leaves of lettuce with a spoonful of crab apple jelly on the side of each salad plate.

A pie that is simply delicious is prepared in the usual way for a custard pie, then just before going into the oven sprinkle with a cupful of minced black walnut meats. It bakes making a rich crust over the top, too good to be true.

Frizzled Beef.

Pull the white thread-like portions from a half-pound of dried beef, cover with boiling water and stand on the back of the range where it will keep hot but not cook. In ten minutes, drain and dry on a cloth. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter in a frying pan, put in the meat and stir while it absorbs the butter and curls. Pour over a cup of hot cream and add a well beaten egg. Serve hot.

Hot Water Gingerbread.

Take one cupful each of sugar and molasses, one-half cupful of melted lard, one teaspoonful of salt, three cupfuls of flour, one egg, and lastly one cupful of boiling water in which a teaspoonful of soda has been stirred. Sift a tablespoonful of ginger into the flour. Pour the mixture which will seem very thin into a large-sized baking pan and bake until firm. This makes an ideal dessert with apple sauce and cottage cheese. This cake may be baked in small gem pans and served as pudding with any desired sauce or whipped cream.

Tea Biscuits.

Bake baking powder biscuits after cutting with a cutter one inch in diameter. When baked split open, butter, spread with raspberry or any preferred jam, put together and serve with a cup of tea. They make a most dainty mouthful.

Onion Soup.

Slice six medium-sized onions and cook in two tablespoonfuls of butter, stirring until a light brown; add two small cans of consomme, or one quart of well-flavored clear broth; let cook 15 minutes. Add three tablespoonfuls of parmesan cheese, one teaspoonful of kitchen bouquet, salt, pepper paprika and celery salt to taste; add two cupfuls of hot water and simmer until the cheese is thoroughly blended.

AUTUMN PARTY.

"We must give a party for the Autumn Paint club," said Jack Frost.

"We must indeed," said Master Chilly.

"Let us have one," said all of the Frost Brothers together.

"Ah, yes, let us have one," said Master Heavy Frost, and Master Very Cool said:

"By all means, let us have a party."

"We will decorate all the windows and nip the flowers and dance over the lawns and bushes," said Jack Frost, "for we want plenty of decorations for our party. And we will all give the party and come to the party and enjoy the party, for we are the Autumn Paint club members."

They agreed to have the party that very night.

"You take the lead, Jack Frost," they said, "and as soon as you tell us what we must do, we will off and do it.

"We will go wherever you say. And we will gladly do our work, for our work is our play."

"They call a day that is not far off," said Master Heavy Frost, "Thanksgiving day. It seems they're all thankful that day, or rather they stop that day and think of all they have to be thankful for.

"They think of all sorts of things, such as how nice it is they live in beautiful places, where they have such good times and where there are many things to do.

"And they're thankful they're warm and have lots to eat, and they're thankful that when it is summer time they often have ice cream.

"They're thankful, too, that they have people to love them—mothers and fathers, and so forth.

"And turkeys do not mind being eaten on Thanksgiving day, for they consider it quite an honor to be taken as the special food of such a fine and special occasion.

"But I say," Master Heavy Frost continued, "that we, too, celebrate our Thanksgiving day.

"We, too, should celebrate it, for we can. Listen to my plan."

"Let us hear it," said Master Very Cool.

"I'd like to hear it," said Master Chilly.

"And so would I," said the other Frost Brothers.

"Do tell it to us at once," said Jack Frost. "I am eager to hear."

"Well," said Master Heavy Frost, "it doesn't matter if we celebrate Thanksgiving day a little before or a little after the day, as long as we celebrate it.

"We should celebrate it, for we have a great deal to be thankful for.

"In the first place, we come around every autumn and have a great many fine parties. This is just one of many, many fine parties.

"And we enjoy life so much!

"We paint beautiful pictures, and enjoy it so. We nip the flowers and dance over the lawns and bushes and enjoy doing that.

"Ah, we have beautiful times, and we should be thankful for them.

"And then I believe the squirrels and the chipmunks would come to our Thanksgiving party, and the boys and girls agree that we do a good work, for we see that the nuts are right for them to gather in the autumn.

"Yes, Chippy Chippy and Bright Eyes and Nutty Chum will all enjoy the nuts, and that will be their Thanksgiving party.

"Let's call our Autumn party a Thanksgiving party and let us all be thankful that we come in the autumn on the still, cool nights.

"And, too, that we are allowed to play and work with our magic paint brushes and that no one stops us, but that we, too, can have a little season of the year all of our own.

"What does everyone else say who is a member of the Autumn Paint club?"

"We all agree that it's a fine, a marvelous, a wonderful idea," they shouted.

"Then for our party, our party of joy and work and play, where we tell how thankful we are for our time of the year, for the time of dear old Jack Frost and his brothers and his workers!"

"Our Magic Paint Brushes."

Terrible.

The Turkey's Story

Told by Himself

While the eagle has been given first place as the "national bird," some people have thought that the turkey should have been accorded this place because it is in so general use on our national feast day, and because it had been domesticated by the Indians long before the discovery of America by Columbus.

The name was given in error, as it was supposed to have come from Turkey, which it did not, the common turkey being native to North America. But let the turkey tell his own story:

I can introduce myself as of the type vertebrate, because I have a backbone. I am classed as a bird because I am an animal that dresses in feathers rather than in skin like men or to wear wool like sheep, hair like a horse's or fur like a bear.

My order is gallinaceous, from a Latin word, meaning hen; and our order is sometimes called rasores, also from the Latin, because we scratch for a living. We practice "the strenuous life" which others preach.

My family is a large one, the Phasianidae, which includes most of the domestic fowls and also pheasants, grouse and quail—nearly 100 species in all.

You notice that I have some jaw-breaking words in my scientific record, but my jaws are called mandibles, from a Latin word that means to chew, the upper and lower mandibles forming my bill.

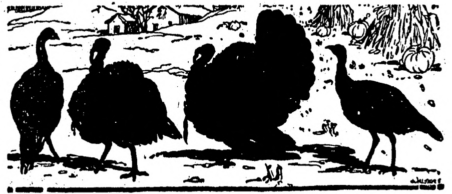
The whole opening of my mouth is called my gape (broad a, please,) and sometimes the rictus; but that word should always be restricted to the back corner of my mouth.

You must have noticed how beautifully my neck is wattled. That word wattle is Old English and means a bag. The other name for my wattles, caruncle, comes from the Latin and means flesh.

I go bareheaded, but wear a great many feathers from my neck down to my tibia. Everybody's leg below the knee (including yours and mine) has two bones, of which one is the tibia.

My tibia is feathered. Below that is the tarsus (Greek—heel in vertebrates, the joint that bends back, while the knee-joint bends forward), and this tarsus is bare of feathers, but covered with big scales. I wouldn't dare pronounce all the long words that go with this part of my anatomy, but it may be interesting for you to go turkey-hunting in the dictionary for "sculated" and related wards. Look for "drumstick" and see why it is called "tibia-tarsus."

While on my feet and legs I'd better tell you something of my toes, of which I have four, besides the spur, this last-named weapon being mercifully denied to the females of our family. My first toe grows out in a seemingly awkward way behind the spread of my foot; but it is really a convenience when I want to clutch anything, as, for instance, the branch of the tree where I generally roost. This toe is two-jointed and called the hallux. The second toe, the inner front one, is three-jointed; the third or middle one has four joints, and the fourth or outer one has five joints.



Now, when you prepare me for the oven don't throw away my lower legs and feet, but clean them thoroughly with a brush and warm water, to which you have added a pinch of soda. Lay in cold water after a generous rinsing, and when you start the fire to roast my carcass put my legs (the tarsus only) and feet into a basin, cover with cold water and let them sit where they will simmer until the roast is done—when you have a foundation or stock for the most delicious broth. I could tell you how the chicken soup trade began in Washington Market with a poor woman who utilized what the marketmen threw away, only to buy back from her in the form of a bowl of steaming hot soup, for which they each paid her a dime—and she became rich from this humble beginning.

My "giblets," too (heart, liver and gizzard), are used by the thrifty housewife, who chops them fine after cooking them in the dripping pan with the "bird," and then adds them to the already rich gravy for "home consumption."

My gizzard is a sort of mill where my food is crushed, being the second or true stomach, after being softened in the first one, the "crop," in the lower part of the neck.

My wishbone has a longer name, furculum, from the Latin word that means fork. The meaning is obvious.

As to my plumage, first are the "contour feathers." These give outline color and are ornamental appendages. These feathers are moved by muscles which are located under the skin, give me a chance to "spread myself" by brushing the ground with my wings, erecting my body and tail feathers until I seem twice my usual size while strutting about and uttering my "gobble." That word, by the way, is Old English.

The tail feathers, the great quill feathers of the wings, are the remiges, or oarsmen, of our tribe. They do the heavy pulling in flight, as the oar does in rowing. These form the spread of the wing and are stiff, strong and "pennaceous," pen-like. My tail feathers and upper-tail coverts are tipped with a beautiful chestnut brown or bronze in my wild state, and with white in my tame state.

Let me tell you a bit of my history. Domestication has diminished my size and strength, dulled my plumage and improved my temper.

In the savage life of the forest I am likely to attack my own children (poults they are called) and be in return attacked and beaten off by my wife in their defense. Then I "get mad," and hunt up other maltreated turkey husbands whose hens will not let them run the house. We go away in groups of a dozen to a hundred, and we do the tramp act to perfection, until mating time arrives, when we generally get into a pretty fierce fight, a "free-for-all."

We were introduced into Europe early in the sixteenth century, and in many places have become "naturalized."

The wild members of our tribe are disappearing before the onward march of civilization, but we domestic turkeys are increasingly appreciated and are being raised in so great numbers that I have heard it stated authoritatively that if the "turkey" money were applied to the national debt it would be wiped out in less than ten years.

Turkey eggs are from nine to fifteen at a "clutch"—the next complement sometimes reaching twenty. They are highly prized for eating by some, and are large, with white shells "freckled" with brown.

Our young turkeys are delicate, needing careful watching for a few weeks, as the hen turkey is likely to take them off on long tramps in wet grass during the early morning, and they are not often able to endure this heroic treatment. We turkeys feed on grass, grains, fruits, vegetables, insects and even "gobble" young frogs and lizards, picking up a living almost anywhere.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof; which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon by said mortgage secured which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two Thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninty-six cents ($2763 96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155) North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota. which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75 00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

NAESETH SAYS--

I was born on the farm of my father, former Sen. O. K. Naeseth, in Goodhue Co., Minn., in 1882, entered Luther College in the year 1900, received my bachelor of arts degree in 1907 taught school 1 year, entered the law school of the University of Minnesota in 1908 and received my bachelor of laws degree in 1911. We used to come home from school in time to cultivate the corn and by the time that we went back we had all the grain stacked and most of the plowing done.

I came to Warren in the spring of 1912, and the first money I earned in Marshall Co., was earned as a farm laborer on the Spaulding Farm under Ed Sommers its foreman, and Math Johnson the shocking boss.

I was a candidate for county attorney in 1918, and in the election received 1558 out of 3132 votes, in other words I was defeated by only 26 votes. I carried 30 precincts out of 48 precincts in the county and was tied in two. I carried my home town, Warren, by 38 votes.

If nominated and elected County Attorney of Marshall Co., I shall endeavor to give justice and protection to all alike, and enforce the laws without favor to anyone.

Your vote and support will be appreciated just as much after as before election.

Big auction sale of new farm machinery, milk cows, work horses, harnesses, autos, on Monday June 26, at Middle River, by M. R. Implement Co.

Primary Election

The candidates endorsed by the republican and democratic state conventions were all nominated at Mondays primary election.

Quinn and Anderson are nominees for associate justice of the state supreme court. This office is intended to be non-political.

Landby and Marschalk, both of Roseau county, were nominated for state senator. Wilson is probably behind in the race for district judge.

The Warren Sheaf had complete returns from all precincts, except Fork, Linsell and Veldt, which give the following nominations for the county officers:

auditor, Lundgren and Malberg; register of deeds, Grinder and Olson sheriff, Hanson and Carlson; attorney, Eckstrom and Naeseth; supt, of schools Johnson & Engen; commissioner, Fladeland & McMillian.

Holt village cast 62 votes, the most of which were pretty well mixed among the different candidates.

For district judge the vote was: Halvorson 29, Bishop 20, Watts 24, Grindeland 11, Wilson 15; for senator Landby 18, Klevens 13, Stevens 12, Marschalk 10; for auditor Lundgren 11, Malberg 46; for register Grinder 22, Olson 31, Rodquist 5; for sheriff Carlson 6, Fisher 14, Hanson 41, for attorney Brekke 22, Naeseth 24, Eckstrom 14; for superintendent Johnson 35, Engen 11, Strandberg 14; for commissioner Fladeland 5, McMillian 9, Olson 14 and Sorum 31.

Mike Holm and P. B. Malberg each with 46 votes were the highest on the tickets.

Mesdames C. L. Heinze, Racine Olson and Selmer Reierson served as judges of election. Misses Gunhild Sollom and Mathilda Morck as clerks, and the ladies did the work to the satisfaction of all the voters.

Holt township gave for judge: Bishop 30 votes, Grindeland 12, Halvorson 17, Watts 20, Wilson 15.

For senator, Kleven 21, Landby, 16, Marschalk 8, for auditor, Malberg 43, for register Grinder, 15, Olson 22, Rodquist 16, for sheriff, Carlson 12, Hanson 40, for attorney, Brekke 14, Nasseth 35, for superintendent Johnson 26, Engen and Strandberg 15 each. for commissioner, Sorum, 43

Tanlac overcomes rheumatism by toning up and invigorating the vital organs, thereby enabling them to eliminate poisons from the system. C. H. Gunheim.

J. A. Leonard a deputy inspector of the state food and dairy dept., was in town last week looking after the egg trade. Mr. Leonard states that the merchants are liable to a heavy penalty if they fail to candle all eggs after the middle of May, and that farmers should not blame the merchants for doing this. He strongly urges that as soon as the hatching season is over, that all roosters should either be penned up or disposed of, as an infertile egg will keep just twice as long as the others.

The Middle River Implement Co., will have a big auction sale of new machinery, milk cows, horses, harnesses, autos, on Monday June 26.

Weddings

Miss Ingeborg Nelson and R. A. Holmgren were united in marriage last Saturday evening at the Lutheran parsonage in Thief River Falls, Rev. Kriedt performing the ceremony. The bride was handsomely attired in a white satin dress and bridal veil and carried a lovely bouquet of flowers. They were attended by Miss Mabel Hagberg and Jesse Sorum. The happy couple departed the same evening for the Twin cities, returning home the first of the week. The bridal couple are Holt's popular young people and are well liked and esteemed by their many acquaintances. Mr. Holmgren is Holt's popular and efficient agent of the Great Northern Railway and has won his way in the esteem of the people thru his genial courtesy.

The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Nelson and is of the same genial and pleasant disposition which will make her an ideal home-maker for the one of her choice. They immediately went to house keeping in rooms of R. L. Adams' residence.

Their many friends join the News in wishing them a happy journey thru life.

FELL AND LUCIE

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie.

—5—

"You saw him?" repeated the girl, quickly. "What was he like? Do you know who he is?"

"Certainly I know," replied Fell, still smiling at her.

"Oh! Then who is he?"

"Softly, softly, young lady! I know him, but even to you I dare not breathe his name until I obtain some direct evidence. Let us call him Mr. X., after the approved methods of romance, and I shall expound what I know.

"The bandit did not enter the house during the evening, nor did he leave, nor was he found in the house afterward," he went on, tonelessly. "So, incredible as it may appear, he was one of the guests. This Mr. X. came to the dance wearing the aviator's costume, or most of it, underneath his masquerade costume. When he was ready to act, he doffed his outer costume, appeared as the Midnight Masquer, effected his purpose, then calmly donned his outer costume again and resumed his place among the guests. You understand?

"Well, then! Maillard yesterday received a note from the Masquer, brazenly stating that he intended to call during the evening. I have that note. It was written with an extremely hard pencil, such as few men carry, because it does not easily make very legible writing. Last night I asked Mr. X. for a pencil, and he produced one with an extra hard lead—mentioning that he had borrowed it from Bob Maillard, as indeed he had."

"What! Surely you don't mean—"

"Of course I don't. Mr. X. is very clever, that's all. Here is what took place last night. Mr. X. brought us another note from the Masquer, saying that he had found it pinned to the library door. As a matter of fact, he had written it on a leaf torn from his notebook. I took the note from him, observing at the time that the paper had no pin holes. Probably Mr. X. saw that there was something amiss; he presently went back downstairs, took the remainder of the torn leaf from his notebook, and pinned it to the door. A little later I met him and mentioned the lack of pin holes; he calmly referred me to the piece on the door, saying that he had merely torn off the note without removing the pins. You follow me?"

"Of course," murmured the girl, her eyes wide in fascinated interest. "And he knew that you guessed him to be the Masquer?"

"He suspected me, I think," said Fell, mildly. "It is understood that you will not go about tracing these little clues?"

"Don't be silly, Uncle Jachin!" she broke in. "You know I'll do nothing of the sort. Go on, please! Did you find the airplane?"

"Yes." Jachin Fell smiled dryly. "I was thinking of that as I left the house and came to the line of waiting automobiles. A word with one of the outside detectives showed me that one of the cars in the street had been testing its engine about midnight. I found that the car belonged to Mr. X.

"How simple, Lucie, and how very clever! The chauffeur worked a powerful motor with a muffler cutout at about the time Mr. X., inside the house, was making his appearance. It scarcely sounded like an airplane motor, yet frightened and startled, people would imagine that it did. Thus arose the legend that the Midnight Masquer came and departed by means of airplane—a theory aided ingeniously by his costume. Well, that is all I know or suspect, my dear Lucie! And now—"

"Now, I suppose," said the girl, thoughtfully, "you'll put that awful Creole of yours on the track of Mr. X.? Ben Chacherre is a good chauffeur, and he's amusing enough—but he's a bloodhound! I don't wonder that he used to be criminal. Even if you have rescued him from a life of crime, you haven't improved his looks."

"Exactly—Ben is at work," asserted Jachin Fell. "The gentleman under suspicion is very prominent. To accuse him without proof would be utter folly. To catch him in flagrante delicto will be difficult. So I am in no haste. Besides, I can as yet discover no motive for his crimes, since he is quite well off financially. Well, no matter! Now that I have fully unbosomed myself, my dear, it is your turn."

"All right, Uncle Jachin." Lucie took a large morocco case from the chair beside her, and extended it. "You lent me these things to wear last night, and I—"

"No, no," intervened Fell. "I gave them to you, my dear—in fact, I gave them to you two years ago, and kept them until now! You have worn them; they are yours, and you become them better than even did poor Queen Hortense! So say no more."

Lucie leaned forward and imprinted a kiss upon the cheek of the little gray man. "There! that is all the thanks I can give you, dear uncle; the gift makes me very happy, and I'll not pretend otherwise. Only, I feel as though I had no right to wear them—they're so wonderful!"

"Nonsense! But all this isn't why you summoned me here, you bundle of mystery! What bothered you last night, or, rather, who?"

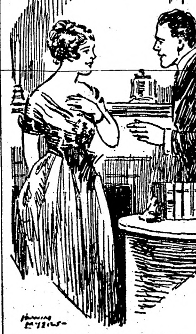
Lucie laughed. "There was a Franciscan who tried to be very mysterious, and to read my mind. He talked about oil, about a grasping, hard man, and mentioned you as my friend. Then he warned me against a proposal that Bob might make; and sure enough, Bob did propose to buy what land is left to me on Bayou Terrebonne, saying he'd persuade his oil company that there was oil on it, and that they'd buy or lease it. I told him no. The Franciscan, afterward, proved to be Henry Gramont; I wondered if you had mentioned—"

"Heaven forbid!" exclaimed Mr. Fell, piously. "I never even met Gramont until last night! Do you like him?"

"Very much." The girl's eyes met his frankly. "Do you?"

"Very much," said Jachin Fell.

Lucie's gray eyes narrowed, searched his face. "I'm almost able to tell when you're lying," she observed calmly. "You said that a trifle too hastily, Uncle Jachin. Why don't you like him?"



"Poor Taste, Mademoiselle, to Grow Weary of Such Beauty!"

Fell laughed, amused. "Perhaps I have a prejudice against foreign nobles, Lucie. Our own aristocracy is bad enough, but—"

"He's discarded all that. He was never French except in name."

"You speak as though you'd known him for some time. Have you had secrets from me?"

"I have!" laughter dimpled in the girl's face. "For years and years! When I was in New York with father, before the war, we met him; he was visiting in Newport with college friends. Then, you know that father and I were in France when the war broke out—father was ill and almost helpless at the time, you remember. Gramont came to Paris to serve with his regiment, and met us there. He helped us get away, procured real money for us, got us passage to New York. He knows lots of our friends, and I've always been deeply grateful to him for his assistance then.

"We've corresponded quite frequently during the war," she pursued. "I mentioned him several times after we got home from France, but you probably failed to notice the name. It's only since he came to New Orleans that I really kept any secrets from you; this time I wanted to find out if you liked him."

Jachin nodded slowly. His face was quite innocent of expression.

"Yes, yes," he said. "Yes—of course He's a geologist or engineer, I think?"

"Both, and a good one. Well, about last night—he probably guessed at some of my private affairs; I've written or spoken rather frankly, perhaps. Also, Bob may have blabbed to him. Bob still drinks—prohibition has not hit him very hard!"

"No," agreed Fell, gravely. "Unfortunately, no. Lucie, I've discovered a most important fact. Joseph Maillard did not own any stock in the Bayou Oil company at the time your land was sold them by him, and he had no interest at all in the real estate concern that bought your St. Landry swamp lands and made a fortune off them. We have really blamed him most unjustly. I do not believe that he has profited in the least from you. His investments in the companies concerned were made afterward, and I am certain he sold the lands innocently"

Lucie drew a deep breath.

"I am glad you have said this," she returned simply. "It's been hard for me to think that Uncle Joseph had taken advantage of me; I think that he honestly likes me, as far as he permits himself to like anyone."

"He'd not loan you money on it," said Fell. "Friendship isn't a tangible security with him."

"Well, who really did profit by my loss? Anyone?"

Fell's pale gray eyes twinkled, then cleared in their usually wide innocence.

"My dear Lucie, is there one person in this world to whose faults Joseph Maillard is deliberately blind—one person to whom he would refuse nothing, in whom he would pardon everything, of whom he would never believe any evil report?"

"You mean—" Lucie drew a quick breath—"Bob?"

"Yes, I mean Bob. That he has profited by your loss I am not yet in a position to say; but I suspect it. When I have finished with the Masquer, I shall take up his trail."

Jachin Fell rose. "Now I must be off, my dear. "Will you dine with us tomorrow evening, Lucie? My mother commanded me to bring you as soon as possible—"

"Oh, your mother!" exclaimed the girl, contritely. "I was so absorbed in the Masquer that I forgot to ask after her. How is she?"

"Quite as usual, thank you."

"I'll come tomorrow night gladly, Uncle Jachin."

"And we'll take a look at the Proteus ball afterward, if you like. I'll send Ben Chacherre for you with the car, if you're not afraid of him."

"I'm not exactly afraid of him," Lucie responded, soberly, "but there is something about him that I can't like. I'm sorry that you're trying to regenerate him, in a way."

Fell shrugged lightly. "All life is an effort, little one! Well, goodby."

Jachin Fell left the house at three-forty. Twenty minutes later the bell rang again. Lucie sent one of the servants to admit Henry Gramont; she kept him waiting a full fifteen minutes before she appeared, and then she made no apologies whatever for the delay.

Not that Gramont minded waiting; he deemed it a privilege to linger in this house! He loved to study the place, so reflective of its owner. He loved the white Colonial mantel that surrounded the fireplace, perpetually alight, with its gleaming sheen of old brasses, and the glittering fire-set to one side. The very air of the place, the atmosphere that it breathed, was sweet to him.

The Napoleon bed that filled the bow window, with its pillows and soft coverings; the inlaid walnut cabinet made by Sheraton, with its quaintly curved glasses that reflected the old-time curios within; the tilt tables, the rosewood chairs, the rugs, bought before the oriental rug market was flooded with machine-made Senna knots—about everything here had an air of comfort, of long use, of restfulness. It was not the sort of place built up, raw item by raw item, by the color-frenzied hands of decorators. It was the sort of place that decorators strive desperately to imitate, and cannot.

When she made her appearance, Gramont bent over her hand and addressed her in French.

"You are charming as ever, Shining One! And in years to come you will be still more charming. That is the beauty of having a name taken direct from the classics and bestowed as a good fairy's gift—"

"Thank you, monsieur—but you have translated my name at least twenty times, and I am weary of hearing it," responded Lucie, laughingly.

"Poor taste, mademoiselle, to grow weary of such beauty!"

"Not of the name, but of your exegesis upon it. Why should I not be displeased? Last night you were positively rude, and now you decry my taste! Did you leave all your manners in France, M. le prince?"

> "You ask anybody on the inside if they ever heard of Memphis Izzy Gumberts!"

Crookston—The Spirit of the Red River Valley has communicated with Mayor Charles P. Booth of Crookston, that she and her faithful children will be present at the banquet to be given the delegates attending the Minnesota League of Municipalities at the Northwest School of Agriculture.

Minneapolis—With Minnesota rapidly becoming the summer playground of America and tourists flocking here by thousands, a state constabulary is necessary both to protect them and safeguard the people of the state, Governor Preus told the Minneapolis Lions club.

Minneapolis—On the University of Minnesota campus at the right of the arched entrance there stands a permanent memorial to the 132 Marines from Minnesota who gave their lives in the World war.

St. Paul—Eastern states with large bond issues at their disposal for highway improvements and intensive road maintenance, are outdistancing Minnesota as a good roads state, but Minnesota continues a leader for better highway grades and superelevated and widened curves, Commissioner C. M. Babcock, state highway commissioner, said.

REVOKE CUTS OR STRIKE IS CERTAIN

Union Leaders Affirm That Withdrawal of Labor Board's Order Is Only Help.

MILLION TO WALK OUT

Tieup of Railroads on July 1 Unless Wage Slash Is Altered Is Threat of Union Men at A. F. of L. Convention.

Cincinnati.—Withdrawal of wage reductions ordered by the railroad labor board and the taking back by the railroads of contracts farming out shop work only can avert the threatened strike of approximately 1,000,000 workers on July 1, rail union executives state.

Union leaders declare complete strike plans have been approved, and unless the railroad labor board revokes the decision cutting wages and altering working conditions the threatened strike will go into effect as scheduled.

The triple barrelled strike vote of seven unions so far returned has been announced by union leaders as being 98 per cent in favor of a walkout. However, leaders said this percentage is high and they do not expect the final vote to reach more than 95 per cent.

Miner-Rail Union Topic.

The rail and miners' unions officials will meet to discuss "co-operative action" between members of these organizations, John L. Lewis, president of the miners, formally announced that the meeting would discuss "the industrial situation affecting the strike of organized mine workers and the outrageous action of the United States railroad labor board in imposing unwarrantable and unjustifiable reductions upon the railway employes."

In accepting the invitation extended by B. M. Jewell of the railway employes for the meeting, Mr. Lewis stated that the mine workers would seek to prescribe "a course of action which will afford that essential degree of justice which is necessary to the men in these industries and at the same time give every proper consideration to the welfare of the organized men and women."

Change Convention Date.

The principal business at recent sessions of the American Federation of Labor was an overwhelming decision to change the convention date from June to October. Numerous other changes in the federation's constitution also were considered, but none was adopted.

The session also was marked by the federation's executive council, made up of 11 of its officers, submitting a report condemning the supreme court decision in the Coronado coal case, which held labor unions liable for damages under the Sherman anti-trust act. No remedy was suggested for overcoming the decision as a special policy committee has been named to recommend a remedial program.

WOULD RECALL COMMISSION

City of Fargo Faces Possible Change in Government.

Fargo.—Petitions are being circulated in Fargo asking for the recall of the present members of the city commission and a special election to vote on the question of the city changing back to the aldermanic form of government. About 15 sets of petitions have been started.

As cause for the recall of the city commissioners the petitions allege:

"That they are incompetent in the management of the business of the city of Fargo; that by reason of this incompetency, no adequate and proper means for the disposal of the garbage of the city of Fargo is being provided for; that the citizens are being discriminated against; that a monopoly has been created; that the property of our citizens is being confiscated without compensation; that contracts of the city are being let without advertising for bids."

Clash Over Bonus Bill.

Washington.—The soldiers' bonus bill fight broke unexpectedly in the senate when Democratic senators attacked the reported compromise agreement of Republican leaders not to call up the measure this week but to have it follow the tariff bill. For two hours the party leaders clashed, but with no result except for additional indications that the Republican plan would prevail.

Kidnapper Is Caught.

Rawlins, Wyo.—Fred Brown, Omaha's bad man, rests on a cot in the hospital at the Wyoming penitentiary hovering between life and death. It is a 50-50 chance that Brown, who was wounded by a posse that captured him near Medicine Bow, will recover. A steel jacketed bullet from a .30-30 rifle is embedded in Brown's body just above the heart. It was this bullet that ended Brown's career of lawlessness that began in Omaha May 27 last, when he kidnapped two young women.

"This Can't Be True."

A traveling man had missed his train and went back home. He took his keys out of his pocket, opened the door, and to his great surprise his wife was sitting on his best friend's lap and kissing him.

"Smith, I've set a trap for you and caught you!" shouted the husband.

Smith replied: "With bait like this you can catch me any time."—Exchange.

His sweetheart clung to him.

"Oh, I'm so glad you're back from New York!" she said. "And now, tell me, did you remember all the beautiful things you said to me—even among the fascinating New York girls?"

"Remember them?" said he. "Why, I kept on repeating them, dearest."

OBJECTED TO SHOW PILLOWS

Usually Amiable Bachelor Had Reason for Returning From Week-End Visit With Grouch.

"Did you have a nice week-end?" inquired the sweet young thing brightly of the popular bachelor.

"O, I suppose you might say so," he grumbled, with unexpected ill humor. "But I'd like to know how anybody can have a nice week-end when he can't sleep."

"What was the matter?"

"O, the usual thing—the guest pillow. How many times have I had a good night in an otherwise pleasant and comfortable room ruined by an elephantine pillow. If you lay just your head on it you break your neck; if you try to ease the slant by moving it down under your shoulders you might as well be sitting up.

"For themselves people have decently low, soft, comfortable things which are tucked out of sight in the daytime. But in the guest room the show pillows are the only pillows provided."—New York Sun.

LABOR OPPOSES RETAIL SALE TAX

A.F. of L. Delegates See Menace in Present Program to Raise Bonus Money.

STRIKE VOTES TAKEN

Final Week's Work of Convention Finds Union Leaders Taking Definite Actions—Criticize Federal Budget Administration.

Cleveland.—A strike vote of railway clerks and freight handlers employed by the New York Central railway has been authorized.

Cincinnati.—Opposition to a retail sales tax, accompanied by the warning that an effort can be expected to have it written into the soldier bonus bill, and the redeclaration of a policy opposed to unrestricted immigration marked the latest action of the American Federation of Labor convention as it settled down to its final week's work.

Debate Importation of Labor.

By unanimous vote, the convention directed officers of the federation to wage the fight against the sales tax with "unabated force," the decision of the delegates coming without debate on the legislative committee's report.

The immigration policy provoked only brief discussion, during which Max Greenstein, of the Jewelry Workers' union, urged unrestricted immigration at least for skilled workers, while Charles L. Bayne, of the Shoe Workers' union, replied there was "too much unemployment in this country now without bringing in more immigrants."

Budget Law Hit.

Administration of the federal budget law also was brought before the convention by the committee report, asserting that the "budget administrators have prostituted the high purpose of the budget system by using it for "political propaganda." The committee, however, declared in favor of a satisfactory budget system," provision, instructing the federation's executive council to use every "effort to correct glaring administrative defects which are operating to the disadvantage of the present system.

Special complaint was made by the committee that administrators of the budget had been overzealous in reducing expenditures of the department of labor.

Faced with a big work program for the final week, the delegates were not inclined to debate. Quick action generally ruled in the disposition of all questions, and adjournment came when no more work was ready for immediate consideration.

CONVENTION RUNNERS LEAD

Indorsed Candidates Favored in Incomplete Minnesota Returns.

St. Paul.—Convention-indorsed candidates on the Republican ticket were leading in returns available the day following the statewide primary election in Minnesota, while on the Democratic ticket Mrs. Anna Dickie Oleson was running a close race for the senatorial nomination.

Senator Frank B. Kellogg, Governor J. A. O. Preus and other state candidates indorsed by the Republican convention were leading for their respective office nominations when scattered returns from 23 of the 86 counties had been received.

HUNDREDS TO TOUR HOLSTEIN DAIRY CIRCUIT

Fargo.—Professor J. H. Shepperd, animal husbandman of the North Dakota Agricultural college, predicts that 1,500 people will attend the annual picnic and tour of the New Salem dairy circuit this week.

"The interesting features of the dairy circuit and the community will be shown and demonstrated to visitors by members of the circuit as they pass from farm to farm and to the creameries. It will be a moving picture in real life," says Professor Shepperd.

McCormick Acquires New Life.

Chicago.—Newly equipped with the elixir of youth, Harold F. McCormick ordered arrangements rushed for his romantic trip to Europe with his daughter Mathilde. From his bed at Wesley Memorial hospital, where the life-giving glands of a poor youth were reported grafted onto his body, the harvester king directed plans to take him to Paris in a month. There, after seeing his 17-year-old daughter and ward, Mathilde, safely married to Max Oser, her Swiss lover, he will be free to marry Ganna Walska, Polish opera star.

Feudists Join in Cleanup.

Manchester, Ky.—Feudists of Clay county, who a few months ago were ready to shoot opposing clansmen on sight, have joined hands with each other, and with the civil authorities to clean up Mill creek, following the action of Circuit Judge Hiram J. Johnson, who issued warrants for the arrest of 200 residents of the mountain territory. All persons in the Mill creek territory over 12 years of age will be taken into custody by the posse in Judge Johnson's drive to stop lawlessness.

GAINS 8 POUNDS IN TWO WEEKS' TIME

Dyspepsia Entirely Overcome and She Eats, Sleeps and Feels Better Than in Years, Says Boston Resident.

"I have actually gained eight pounds in two weeks' time and am now eating better, sleeping better and feeling better than I have in three or four years," said Mrs. Celesta Fell, 32 Prince street, Boston, Mass., recently, in telling of the great benefits she has derived from the use of Tanlac.

"My stomach was in such a bad fix before I took Tanlac that I did not dare eat much of anything, for if I did I would have so much pain and distress from indigestion that I felt like I was going to die. I was so run down and weak from lack of nourishment that I could not do my housework.

"I was so nervous I couldn't keep still during the day nor sleep at night. I can see now if it had not been for Tanlac I would have had to give up entirely. I am now feeling strong and healthy and all the credit belongs to Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Fred Knew Johnny.

Fred Smith was badly crippled, physically; but his indomitable spirit kept him on a par with other lads of his age. He joined the pig club, and took care of his pig with great skill and enthusiasm.

One day I overheard Fred talking to his crony, and this is what he said:

"John Mitchell says his pig is bigger'n mine!"

And then in a tone of great scorn, he added:

"I'll bet if we swapped he'd still say his was the biggest!"—Farm Life.

Not Custodians.

At the town meeting of a small place "up country" a citizen made a motion that was seconded in an astonishing way.

"Mr. Moderator," he said, "I move that the town set aside money for three cuspidors to be stationed at proper places."

At that an old fellow in the rear of the hall who was hard of hearing rose stiffly to his feet. "I second the motion," he said, "and I move that Jack Davis be made one of 'em!"

FROM GIRLHOOD TO WOMANHOOD

Woman Relied Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Emporia, Kansas.—"I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's medicines years ago when I was a girl. For several years I had severe pains at menstrual periods, making me very weak and interfering with my regular duties. I tried several remedies without obtaining relief. I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound by friends and it restored me to normal health. I often have occasion and do recommend your Vegetable Compound to my friends who have troubles similar to my own. You may use these facts as a testimonial."—EVA ALDRICH, 218 Union St., Emporia, Kansas.

There are many women who first used our Vegetable Compound during their girlhood days. They found it a valuable help during trying periods. In later years they use it whenever they feel those annoying symptoms which women often have.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a woman's medicine. It is prepared carefully from the best quality of medicinal plants, whose properties are especially adapted to correct the troubles women have.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

WHO SAID "WEAKER VESSEL"?

Little Incident Shows How Much Chance Mere Man Has With Real Mistress of Finance.

Mrs. Norman Whitehouse, the patrician ex-suffragist who has gone into the leather business, said at a tea in New York:

"Woman should succeed magnificently in business, she is such a past grand mistress of finesse.

"I know a pretty girl who once took the part of palmist in a gypsy tent at a fair. A young man came in to have his fortune told, and the pretty girl, holding his hand in hers tenderly, said:

"'You have an extraordinary character. Your most remarkable quality is generosity. You hate skinflints, you despise the money hoarder, and you look on avarice as a shameful vice. A large and almost reckless liberality marks your path through life.'

"'Thank you,' said the young man, blushing and giggling. 'You are flattering me, I'm afraid.'

"'Not at all,' said the pretty girl, 'and now I'm going to wrap you up these three dozen tickets for our turkey raffle. They're only a simoleon apiece. Three tens, a five, and a one. Thank you; that's just right.'"

Bug's Eggs.

Superintendent Comer of the Whitetown schools took some figs, which his mother intended for cooking, without her knowledge. The following conversation ensued.

"Did you get some of the figs, Philip?"

"Yes."

"What did you do with them?"

"I threw them away."

"What did you do that for?"

"Well, mother, I bit into one and it had bug's eggs in it and I wasn't going to eat bug's eggs was I?"—Indianapolis News.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage, executed by A. S. Chase, Mortgagor, to John C. Arvidson, Mortgagee, dated on the 1st day of January, 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 84 of Mortgages on Page 262 thereof.

That such default consists in the non-payment, when due, of the principal sum of Seventeen Hundred, ($1700.00) Dollars, which fell due January 1st, 1922, and the interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1921 and interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1922. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is the sum of Nineteen Hundred Sixty and 68-100 ($1960.63) Dollars.

That the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in Marshall County, Minnesota, and described as follows: The South Half of Southeast Quarter (S1-2SE1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-eight (28) and the West Half of the Southwest Quarter (W1-2 SW1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-seven (27), all of the above being in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North of Range Numbered Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian and containing One Hundred Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government Survey thereof.

That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Marshall County, Minnesota, at the West front door of the Marshall County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 1st day of August, A. D., 1922, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five ($75.00) Dollars Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage.

MORTGAGE FORECLOSURE SALE

Whereas, default having been made in the conditions of a certain Mortgage duly executed and delivered by Knute O. Shirley, a single man, Mortgagor, to Farmers State Bank of Mavie, Mortgagee, bearing date the 3rd day of January, 1920, and with the power of sale therein contained, duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for the County of Marshall and State of Minnesota, on the 9th day of January, 1920, at 1 o'clock P. M. in Book 93 of Mortgages on page 549,

And Whereas, the said Farmers State Bank of Mavie, Mortgagee and holder of said Mortgage, has duly elected and does hereby elect to declare the whole principal sum of said Mortgage due and payable at the date of this notice under the terms and conditions of said Mortgage and the power of sale therein contained, and whereas there is claimed to be due and is due at the date of this notice upon said Mortgage and the debt secured thereby the total sum of $1160.00, being the amount of principal and interest secured by the mortgage hereby being foreclosed, and whereas the power of sale has become operative and no action or proceeding having been instituted at law or otherwise to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof,

NOW, THEREFORE, Notice Is Hereby Given, That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said Mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said Mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said Mortgage, viz:

The Southeast Quarter (SE 1-4) of Section Six (6) in Township One Hundred Fifty-four (154) North, Range Forty-one (41) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian in Marshall County and State of Minnesota, with the hereditaments and appurtenances; which sale will be made by the Sheriff of Marshall County at the West Front door of the Court House in the City of Warren in said County and State, on the 1st day of July, 1922, at 10 o'clock A. M. of that day, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of $1160.00, and interest and taxes, if any, on said premises, and attorney's fees as stipulated in said Mortgage in case of foreclosure, and disbursements allowed by law; subject to redemption at any time within one year from day of sale, as provided by law.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof; which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died, and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon by said mortgage secured which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two Thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninty-six cents ($2763 96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155) North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75 00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

TECKTONIUS SILO

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

GRAMONT AND LUCIE

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer.

"Some of them, yes—and all that prince stuff with them." Smiling as he dropped into English, Gramont glanced about the room, and his eyes softened.

"This is a lovely and lovable home of yours, Lucie!" he exclaimed, gravely. "So few homes are worthy the name; so few have in them the intimate air of use and friendliness—why are so many furnished from bargain sales? This place is touched with repose and sweetness; to come and sit here is a privilege. It is like being in another world, after all the money striving and the dollar madness of the city."

"Oh!" The girl's gaze searched him curiously. "I hope you're not going to take the fine artistic pose that it is a crime to make money?"

Gramont laughed.

"Not much! I want to make money myself; that's one reason I'm in New Orleans. Still, you cannot deny that there is a craze about the eternal clutching after dollars. I can't make the dollar sign the big thing in life, Lucie. You couldn't, either."

She frowned a little.

"You seem to have the European notion that all Americans are dollar chasers!"

He shrugged his shoulders slightly. "In a sense, yes; why not?" he answered. "I am an American. I am a dollar chaser, and not ashamed of it. I am going into business here. Once it is a success, I shall go on; I shall see America, I shall come to know this whole country of mine, all of it! I have been a month in New Orleans—do you know, a strange thing happened to me only a few days after I arrived here!"

With her eyes she urged him on, and he continued gravely:

"In France I met a man, an American sergeant named Hammond. It was just at the close of things. We had adjoining cots at Nice—"

"Ah!" she exclaimed, quickly. "I remember, you wrote about him—the man who had been wounded in both legs! Did he get well? You never said."

"I never knew until I came here," answered Gramont. "One night, not long after I had got established in my pension on Burgundy street, a man tried to rob me. It was this same man, Hammond; we recognized each other almost at once.

"I took him home with me and learned his story. He had come back to America only to find his wife dead from influenza, his home broken up, his future destroyed. He drifted to New Orleans, careless of what happened to him. He flung himself desperately into a career of burglary and pillage. Well, I gave Hammond a job; he is my chauffeur. You would never recognize him as the same man now! I am very proud of his friendship."

"That was well said." Lucie nodded her head quickly. "I shan't call you M. Le prince any more—unless you offend again."

He smiled, reading her thought. "I try not to be a snob, eh? Well, what I'm driving at is this: I want to know this country of mine, to see it with clear, unprejudiced eyes. We hide our real shames and exalt our false ones. Why should we be ashamed of chasing the dollar? So long as that is a means to the end of happiness, it's all right. But there are some men who see it as an end alone, who can set no finis to their work except the dollar dropping into their pouch. Such a man is your relative, Joseph Maillard. I do not wish to offend you, and I shall therefore refrain from saying all that is in my mind. But you have not hesitated to intimate very frankly that you are not wealthy. Some time ago, if you recall, you wrote me how you had just missed wealth through having sold some land. I have taken the liberty of looking up that deal to some extent, and I have suspected that your uncle had some interest in putting the sale through——"

The gray eyes of the girl flashed suddenly.

"Henry Gramont! Are my family affairs to be an open book to the world? Do you realize that you are intruding most unwarrantably into my private matters?"

"Unwarrantably?" Gramont's eyes held her gaze steadily. "Do you really mean to use that word?"

"I do, most certainly!" answered Lucie with spirit. "I don't think you realize just what the whole thing tends toward——"

"Oh, yes I do! Quite clearly." Gramont's cool, level tone conquered her indignation. "I see that you are orphaned, and that your uncle was your guardian, and executed questionable deals which lost money for you. Come, that's brutally frank—but it's true! I came here to New Orleans and became involved in some dealings with your cousin, Bob Maillard. I believed, and I believe now, that in your heart you have some suspicion of your uncle in regard to those transactions in land. Therefore, I took the trouble to look into the thing to a slight extent. Shall I tell you what I have discovered?"

Lucie Ledanois gazed at him, her lips compressed. She liked this new manner of his, this firm and resolute gravity, this harshness. It brought out his underlying character very well.

"Hm! Memphis Izzy Gumberts, Eh? What Kind of a Crook Is He, Sergeant?"

"If you please, Henry," she murmured very meekly.

"Well, then, I have discovered that your uncle appears to be honestly at fault in the matter——"

"Thanks for this approval of my family," she murmured.

"And," continued Gramont, imperturbably, "that your suspicions of him were groundless. But, on the other hand, something new has turned up about which I wish to speak—but about which I must speak delicately. Has Bob Maillard offered to buy your remaining land on the Bayou Terrebonne?"

She started slightly. So it was to this that he had been leading up all the while!

"He broached the subject last night," she answered. "I dismissed it for the time."

"Good!" he exclaimed with boyish vigor. "Good! I warned you in time, then! If you will permit me, I must advise you not to part with that land—not even for a good offer. This week, immediately Mardi Gras is over, I am going to inspect that land for the company; it is Bob Maillard's company, you know. Is my unwarrantable intrusion forgiven?"

She nodded brightly. "You are put on probation, sir. You're in Bob's company?"

"Yes." Gramont frowned. "I invested perhaps too hastily—but no matter now. I have the car outside, Lucie; may I have the pleasure of taking you driving?"

"Did you bring that chauffeur?"

"Yes," and he laughed at her eagerness.

"Good! I accept—because I must see that famous soldier-bandit-chauffeur. If you'll wait, I'll be ready in a minute."

She hurried from the room, a snatch of song on her lips. Gramont smiled as he waited.

CHAPTER V

The Masquer Unmasks.

In New Orleans one may find pensions in the old quarter—the quarter which is still instinct with the pulse of old-world life. These pensions do not advertise. The average tourist knows nothing of them. Even if he knew, indeed, he might have some difficulty in obtaining accommodations, for it is not nearly enough to have the money; one must also have the introductions, come well recommended, and be under the tongue of good repute.

Gramont had obtained a small apartment en pension—a quiet and severely retired house in Burgundy street, maintained by a very proud old lady whose ancestors had come out of Canada with the Sieur d'Iberville. Here Gramont lived with Hammond, quite on a basis of equality, and they were very comfortable.

The two men sat smoking their pipes before the fireplace, in which blazed a small fire—more for good cheer than through necessity. It was Sunday evening.

Gramont stared into the flickering fire and sucked at his pipe. Suddenly he roused himself and shot a glance at Hammond.

"Sergeant! You seem to have a pretty good recollection of that night at the Lavergne house, when I found you entering and jumped on you."

"You bet I have!" Hammond chuckled. "When you'd knocked the goggles off me and we recognized each other—h—l! I felt like a boob."

Gramont smiled. "How many places had you robbed up to then? Three, wasn't it?"

"Three is right cap'n," was the unashamed response.

"We haven't referred to it very often, but now things have happened." Gramont's face took on harsh lines of determination. "Do you know, it was a lucky thing that you had no chance to dispose of the jewels and money you obtained?"

"No chance?" snorted the other. "No chance is right, cap'n! And I was sore, too. Say, they got a ring of crooks around this town you couldn't bust into with grenades! Listen here, and I'll tell you something big."

Hammond leaned forward, lowered his voice, and tamped at his pipe.

"When I was a young fellow I lived in a little town up north—I ain't sayin' where. My old man had a livery stable there, see? Well, one night a guy come along and got the old man out of bed, and slips him fifteen hundred for a rig and a team, see? I drove the guy ten miles through the hills, and set him on a road he wanted to find.

"Now, that guy was the biggest crook in the country in them days—still is, I guess. He was on the dead run that night, to keep out o' Leavenworth. He kep' out, all right, and he's settin' in the game to this minute. Nobody never pinched him yet, and never will."

"Why?"

"Because his gang runs back to politicians and rich guys all over the country. You ask anybody on the inside if they ever heard of Memphis Izzy Gumberts! Well, cap'n, I seen that very identical guy on the street the other day—I never could forget his ugly mug! And where he is, no outside crooks can get in, you believe me!"

"Hm! Memphis Izzy Gumberts, eh? What kind of a crook is he, sergeant?"

"The big kind. You remember them Chicago lotteries? But you don't, o' course. Well, that's his game—lotteries and such like."

Gramont's lips clenched for a minute, then he spoke with slow distinctness:

"Sergeant, I'd have given five hundred dollars for that information a week ago!"

"Why?"

Gramont shook his head. "Never mind. Forget it! Now, this stunt of yours was clever. You showed brains when you got yourself up as an aviator and pulled that stuff, sergeant. But you handled it brutally—terribly brutally."

"It was a little raw, I guess," conceded Hammond. "I was up against it, that's all. When you took over the costume and began to get across with the Raffles stuff—why, it was a pipe for you, cap'n! Look what we've done in a month. Six jobs, every one running off smooth as glass! Your notion of going to parties ready dressed with some kind of loose robe over the flyin' duds was a scream! And then me running that motor with the cut-out on—all them birds that never heard an airplane think you come and go by air, for certain! Nobody will ever find us out."

Gramont nodded thoughtfully.

"Yes? But, sergeant, how about the quiet little man who came along last night at the Maillard house and asked about the car? Perhaps he had discovered you had been running the engine."

"Him?" Hammond sniffed in scorn. "He wasn't no dick."

> "I dare not risk it. That man Fell is too smart."

EFFORT TO END STRIKE FAILS

Union Policy Unaltered Says Lewis After Talk With Harding.

MANY PARLEYS HELD

Lewis Confers With President Harding on Coal Strike—Would Have Operators Hold Conference.

Washington.—After conferences with President Harding and Secretary of Labor Davis, John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, announced that the union policy still was unalterable and unyielding in its insistence that a new wage scale must be set up for the strike-ridden mining districts by national or semi-national conferences with operators.

Last of Parleys.

The meeting between Mr. Harding, Secretary Davis and Mr. Lewis, which took place around the White House luncheon table, was the last of a series of conferences into which Secretary of Labor Davis took Mr. Lewis after his arrival from Cincinnati.

Officially no statement was forthcoming, though Secretary Hoover was also called to the White House for a word with the president about the situation immediately after Mr. Lewis left.

Lewis Was Invited.

"With relation to the present strike, we considered the matter of a joint conference of operators and miners, especially the merits of proposals to hold district joint conferences between operators and miners for wage settlements, as compared with a joint conference in the central competitive field, or a national conference of all fields, through representatives. No definite plans affecting the strike were decided upon. The strike situation is unchanged.

Sees Shortage Danger.

"I explained to the president the futility of attempting settlements in individual mining districts. There are no groups of operators willing to hazard their competitive relationship with other producing sections by fixing a wage scale until they know what their competitors are going to pay. The country will be facing a serious shortage of coal within a few weeks, and if the strike continues the railroads will be unable to transport enough to take care of industries and domestic consumers."

RAILROAD STRIKE CERTAIN

After Meeting of Railroad Employes, Strike Looks Certain.

Chicago.—The strike of 1,200,000 union railroad employes July 1 appeared certain as the policy committee of the shop crafts met here to canvas the strike votes.

The strike call will be sent out ordering men to walk out Saturday, according to the best available information. The vote of the 11 railroad unions affiliated with the railroad department of the American Federation of Labor was overwhelmingly in favor of a walkout in preference to acceptance of wage cuts and working rules revisions ordered by the United States railroad labor board.

The move by the board to avert one of the causes for a strike by ordering railroads to cease letting out work under contracts will not prevent the walkout, union leaders indicated. It was doubted whether the railroads would obey the order.

WOMAN SMUGGLER ARRESTED

Necklace Worth $100,000 Is Smuggled Into United States by Woman.

Chicago.—Mrs. Laura Kachelmacher of Fargo, N. D., is being held by federal authorities in connection with the smuggling into this country of a $100,000 pearl necklace, according to Chas. Salter, special treasury agent from Seattle, Wash.

From City to City.

Treasury officials in every large city have been looking for this necklace, which has been taken from city to city in an attempt to evade federal treasury agents, Mr. Salter said. The necklace is said to have been purchased in France and brought to this country by a circuitous route.

Mr. Salter left for New York where he is to appear in connection with the case before the federal grand jury in session there.

Husband Killed Self.

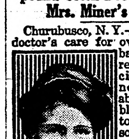
Mrs. Kachelmacher is the widow of Dr. Christian Kachelmacher, who killed himself in a Chicago hotel two years ago, following a nervous breakdown. She is the mother of two children.

Bonus Deal Nears Completion.

Bismarck, N. D.—Completion of the deal by which North Dakota soldiers' bonus certificates will be turned into cash was considered almost completed with the signatures of all state officials excepting Adjutant General Angus Fraser to the tentative agreement entered into before the matter was presented to the American Legion convention last week. Representatives of the Twin Cities financial firms who are willing to take the state paper are here to complete details.

SUCCEEDS WHERE DOCTORS FAIL

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Often Does That.—Read Mrs. Miner's Testimony



Churubusco, N. Y.—"I was under the doctor's care for over five years for backache and had no relief from his medicine. One day a neighbor told me about your Vegetable Compound and I took it. It helped me so much that I wish to advise all women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles and backache. It is a great help in carrying a child, as I have noticed a difference when I didn't take it. I thank you for this medicine and if I ever come to this point again I do not want to be without the Vegetable Compound. I give you permission to publish this letter so that all women can take my advice."—Mrs. FRED MINER, Box 102, Churubusco, N. Y.

It's the same story over again. Women suffer from ailments for years. They try doctors and different medicines, but feel no better. Finally they take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and you can see its value in the case of Mrs. Miner.

That's the truth of the matter. If you are suffering from any of the troubles women have, you ought to try this medicine. It can be taken in safety by young or old, as it contains no harmful drugs.

Pattern for Husbands.

"Young women nowadays," remarks an ornithologist in the employ of the government, "take too light a view of marriage. While in the West last summer I was induced to lecture to a summer school. During the course of this lecture I chanced to remark:

"Whereupon a girl on the front bench exclaimed, sotto voce, to her neighbor: 'Gee! What an ideal husband an ostrich must make!'"

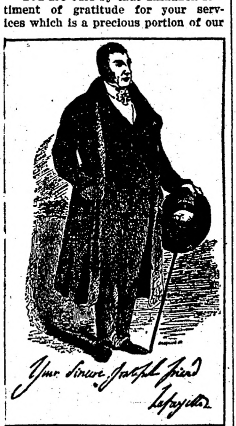
Lafayette's Last Visit to America

Lafayette's last visit to this country was in 1724-25. When the time which he had allotted for his tour had expired, after he had visited every one of the 24 states of the Union, Lafayette repaired to Washington to pay his parting respects to the chief magistrate of the nation, John Quincy Adams. This took place at the Presidential mansion September 6, 1825, 98 years ago, and on the sixty-eighth anniversary of Lafayette's birth.

The farewell address of President Adams in behalf of the whole American people was a most affecting tribute to the lofty character and patriotic services of Lafayette during his long and eventful career, and closed with the following words:

"You are ours by that unshaken sentiment of gratitude for your services which is a precious portion of our inheritance; ours by that tie of love and stronger than death which has linked your name for the endless ages of time with the name of Washington.



Your Sincere Grateful friend Lafayette

Lafayette in 1824.

"At the painful moment of parting with you we take comfort in the thought that, wherever you may be, to the last pulsation of your heart, our country will ever be present to your affections; and a cheerful consolation assured us that we are not called to sorrow; most of all, that we shall see your face no more, for we shall indulge the pleasing anticipation of beholding our friend again.

"In the name of the whole people of the United States I bid you a reluctant and affectionate farewell."

To this parting address from President Adams, Lafayette replied in a strain of patriotic and impassioned eloquence.

On the same day Lafayette embarked for France on board the Brandywine, a new frigate named in compliment to him, who on the banks of that river was wounded in his first battle for American freedom.

These were the main incidents of New York's reception to Lafayette:

Aquatic procession from Staten Island to the Battery. General Lafayette on board the Chancellor Livingston.

St. Louis Citizen Eats Anything on the Table and Has Gained Several Pounds in Weight—Gives Tanlac Full Credit.

"The other medicines I tried before didn't even budge my troubles, but three bottles of Tanlac have fixed me up in fine shape," said H. Mohr, well-known citizen living at 112 S. Fourth St., St. Louis, Mo.

"Two years ago my stomach went wrong and my appetite failed me. Gas formed from what little I would eat and pressed on my heart until it palpitated so I could hardly breathe. I wasn't able to do regular work, because of pains in the back, bad headaches and dizzy spells.

"But I have gained several pounds now since taking Tanlac and eat just anything I want without any trouble. The pains and headaches never bother me any more, and I am only too glad to pass the good word along about Tanlac. It is simply wonderful."

ART TREASURES NOT INSURED

For One Reason, No Amount of Money Could Replace Those in British Storehouses.

The great national storehouses of art treasures are not insured, writes a correspondent of the London Daily Mail. No compensation would be forthcoming in case of fire or theft. The reason is that the premiums on the millions of pounds' worth of pictures in the National gallery, antiquities in the British museum, and exhibits in the Victoria and Albert museum, for instance, would amount to a very large sum.

"If art galleries and museums insured they would have to pay out far larger sums than they receive in admittance charges," said an official of the National Portrait gallery. "The latest apparatus for preventing and detecting fire is employed, and night watchmen are present."

An official of the British museum said: "We have very thorough systems of patrolling, and special firemen of our town, who formerly served in the London fire brigade."

The Illusions.

For years we have been searching high and low for that hero of the movies who appears always at the right moment and hoists the villain. The other day we found him selling collars at a shirt place.

We have wanted to meet the villain face to face—that black scoundrel of the plains, sinful, profane, death-defying. We found him the other day, too, carrying out dead dishes in a restaurant.

And the lovely girl, the creature of emotions and eyelashes, the dream of our summers, who is always sitting easily in a magnificent couch chair, taking tea from an obsequious butler. We found her, too. She was selling tickets through the window as we came out from the show.—Richmond Times-Dispatch.

No Need for Further Speculation as to Why Some Men Have Received Medals.

"Here is another list of medal recommendations, and I've worn out my blue pencil! What in the world shall I do?" the great official exclaimed in despair.

"I have sharpened another blue pencil for you, sir," the faithful secretary responded promptly.

"You are wonderful; you think of everything!" the great official declared, seizing the new pencil eagerly. "What would I do without you? But your services to your country shall not go unrewarded," he added, his face lighting up with a happy thought, and striking out the first name on the list before him, he wrote in its place that of the faithful clerk.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

UP AGAINST TOUGH PROBLEM

Small Jane's Scruples Prevented Her From Eating the Candy That Had Been "Lent."

Little Jane's mother brought home a box of candy given to her by an Episcopal friend shortly before Easter, and passed around some of its contents to her children, explaining that Mrs. Cox's children had given up eating candy until after Easter, "so they cannot eat any now, as it is Lent."

Little Jane's brothers promptly ate their pieces, but she stood looking at the candy in her hand with a puzzled air.

"Why don't you eat it, Jane?" her mother asked.

"Because," she explained, "then how could I give it back if it's just lent?"

About Flies.

"I wonder where all the flies come from," grumbled Mrs. Jones as she swatted around the dining room.

"Well, mom," said the young joker of the family, "the cyclone makes the house fly, the blacksmith makes the fire fly, the jockey makes the horse fly, and I heard you tell pa at supper last night that us children make the butter fly."

A Real Benefit.

"How I envy you your group of children," remarked the bachelor to his long-married friend.

"Children certainly do brighten the home," replied the other, gratified.

"What? Oh, yes, yes, of course. But what I was thinking of—look at the tax exemption you can claim on them."

When I said I would die a bachelor I did not think I should live till I were married.—Shakespeare.

The Old Carriage Maker Had an Important Truth

"To make each part as strong as the rest," was his way of "building a wonderful, one-horse chaise that wouldn't wear out till judgment day."

This illustrates a fact that is keeping many doctors busy these days—human bodies, like chaises, break down because some part isn't as strong as the others.

Very often it's because of ill-balanced food, lacking in some important element of nutrition. This is especially true of ills developed in childhood, and carried on through life.

Grape-Nuts, that world-famous, ready-to-eat cereal, brings the plan of building each part as strong as the rest—to serve human need. Grape-Nuts contains all the nutriment of those best of the field grains, wheat and barley, including the vital mineral elements, and it is a wonderful food for building and sustaining health and strength.

The delicious flavor and crispness of Grape-Nuts make it a welcome dish whenever you're hungry.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof, which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded, in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages, on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon, by said mortgage secured, which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninety-six cents ($2763.96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155), North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75.00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

St. Paul, Minn.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a tired, worn-out feeling and painful periods. I used to get up with a pain in my head and pains in my lowerparts and back. Often I was not able to do my work. I read in your little book about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it. I feel so well and strong and can do every bit of my work and not a pain in my back now. I recommend your medicine and you can use this letter as a testimonial." — Mrs. PHIL. MASER, 801 Winslow St., St. Paul, Minn.

Just another case where a woman found relief by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many times these tired, worn-out feelings and pains about the body are from troubles only women have. The Vegetable Compound is especially adapted for just this condition. The good results are noted by the disagreeable symptoms passing away—one after another.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is a Woman's Medicine for Women's Ailments. Always reliable.

If Tale Is True, Peking Merchant Was More Than Ordinary "Childlike and Bland."

Dr. Wellington Koo, the brilliant young Chinese diplomat, said at a dinner party in New York:

"Some men seem to think that we Chinese are a very childlike and very innocent people. They think we all exactly resemble the Peking merchant of the story.

"According to this story—and it is a gem—a Peking merchant took a rather notorious foreigner to board with him at a rate of $20 a week. Six months passed, and the rather notorious foreigner had not yet let his host once see the color of his money.

"So, at the end of the six months, the Peking merchant thought the matter over very thoughtfully and reduced the foreigner's board from $20 to $10. He explained that thus, if the foreigner never paid him, he would not lose so much money."

Solution of "Lake of Mystery" Sought.

An attempt to solve the secret of Lake Eyre, called the "mystery lake," in the interior of Australia, soon will be made by a scientific expedition. The lake is 400 miles from the nearest settlment. Seven rivers from the hills, miles away, penetrate Australia's great interior desert and tumble their contents into the lake. In rainy season these rivers become enormous flooded areas. Without any apparent outlet, Lake Eyre, an inland sea as the result of the flooded rivers, contracts and becomes a lake again in a surprisingly short time.

The Real Fact.

> "YOUNG MAILLARD!"
> SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer. Gramont's chauffeur, Hammond, sergeant in the A. E. F., lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for financial gain, Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed.

—7—

"Well, I was followed today; at least, I think I was. And let me tell you something about that same quiet little man! His name is Jachin Fell."

"Heluva name," commented Hammond, and wrinkled up his brow. "Jachin, huh? Seems like I've heard the name before. Out o' the Bible, ain't it? Something about Jachin and Boaz?"

"I imagine so." Gramont smiled as he replied. "This chap Fell is sharp, confoundedly sharp!" he went on, while the chauffeur listened with frowning intentness. I think that he is on to me, and is trying to get the goods on me."

"Oh!" said Hammond. "And someone was trailin' you? Think he's put the bulls wise?"

Gramont shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know. He almost caught me last night. We'll have to get rid of that aviator's suit at once, and of the loot also. I suppose you've reconciled yourself to returning the stuff?"

Hammond stirred uneasily, and laid down his pipe.

"Look here, cap'n," he said, earnestly. "I wasn't runnin' a holdup game because I liked it, and I wasn't doing it for the fun of the thing, like you are. I was dead broke, I hadn't any hope left, and I didn't care a d—n whether I lived or died—that's on the dead! Right there, you come along and picked me up.

"You give me a job. What's more, you've treated me white, cap'n. You've given me something decent to live for—to make good because you got some faith in me! Why, when you went out on that first job of ours, d'you know it like to broke me up? It did. Only, when we got home that night and you said it was all a joke, and you'd send back the loot later on, then I began to feel better about it."

Gramont nodded in comprehension of the other's feeling.

"It's not been altogether a joke, sergeant," he said, gravely. "To tell the truth, I did start it as a joke, but soon afterward I learned something that led me to keep it up. I kept it up until I could hit the Maillard house. It was my intention to turn up at the Comus ball, on Tuesday night, and there make public restitution of the stuff—but that's impossible now. I dare not risk it! That man Fell is too smart."

"You're not goin' to pull the trick again, then?" queried Hammond, eagerly.

"No. I'm through. I've got what I wanted. Still, I don't wish to return the stuff before Wednesday—Ash Wednesday, the end of the carnival season. Suppose you get out the loot and find me some boxes. And be sure they have no name on them or any store labels."

Hammond leaped up and vanished in the room adjoining. Presently he returned, bearing several cardboard boxes, which he dumped on the center table. "I'm blamed glad you're done, believe me!" he uttered, fervently, glancing up at Gramont. "Far's I'm concerned I don't care much, but I'd sure hate to see the bulls turn in a guy like you, cap'n. Here we are. Want me to keep each bunch separate, don't you?"

"Sure, I'll be writing some notes to go inside."

Gramont went to a buhl writing desk in the corner of the room, and sat down. He took out his notebook, tore off several sheets, and from his pocket produced a pencil having an extremely hard lead. He wrote a number of notes, which, except for the addresses, were identical in content:

"Dear Sir:

"I inclose herewith certain jewelry and articles, also currency, recently obtained by me under your kind auspices.

"I trust that you will assume the responsibility of returning these things to the various guests who lost them while under your roof. I regret any discomfort occasioned by my taking them as a loan, which I now return. Please convey to the several owners my profound esteem and my assurance that I shall not in future appear to trouble anyone, the carnival season having come to an end, and with it my little jest.

"THE MIDNIGHT MASQUER."

Gathering up these notes in his hand, Gramont went to the fireplace. He tossed the pencil into the fire, following it with the notebook.

"Can't take chances with that man Fell," he explained. "All ready, sergeant. Let's go down the list one by one."

From the trunk Hammond produced ticketed packages, which he placed on the table. Gramont selected one, opened it, carefully packed the contents in one of the boxes, placed the proper addressed note on top, and handed it to the chauffeur.

"Wrap it up and address it. Give the return address of John Smith, Bayou Teche."

One by one they went through the packages of loot in the same manner. Before them on the table, as they worked, glittered little heaps of rings, brooches, watches, currency; jewels that flashed garishly with colored fires, historic and famous jewels plucked from the aristocratic heart of the southland, heirlooms of a past generation side by side with platinum crudities of the present fashion.

IRWIN MYERS

"All Wasted—the Whole Effort!" He Murmured.

There had been heartburnings in the loss of these things, Gramont knew. He could picture to himself something of what had followed his robberies: family quarrels, new purchases in the gem marts, bitter reproaches, fresh mortgages on old heritages, vexations of wealthy dowagers, shrugs of unconcern by the nouveaxx riches; perchance lives altered—divorces—

"There's a lot of human life behind these baubles, sergeant," he reflected aloud, a cold smile upon his lips as he worked. "When they come back to their owners, I'd like to be hovering around in an invisible mantle to watch results! Could we only know it, we're probably affecting the lives of a great many people—for good and ill. These things stand for money; and there's nothing like money, or the lack of it, to guide the destinies of people."

"You said it," and Hammond grinned. "I'm here to prove it, ain't I? I ain't pulling no more gunplay, now I got me a steady job."

"And a steady friend, old man," added Gramont. "Did it occur to you that maybe I was as much in need of a friend as you were?"

He had come to the last box, now, that which must go to Joseph Maillard. On top of the money and scarfpins which he placed in the box he laid a thin packet of papers. He tapped them with his finger.

"Those papers, sergeant! To get them, I've been playing the whole game. To get them and not to let their owner suspect that I was after them! Now they're going back to their owner."

"Who's he?" demanded Hammond.

"Young Maillard—son of the banker. He roped me into an oil company; caught me, like a sucker, almost the first week I was here. I put pretty near my whole wad into that company of his."

"You mean he stung you?"

"Not yet." Gramont smiled coldly, harshly, "I fell right enough—but I'll come out on top of the heap."

The other frowned. "I don't get you, cap'n. Some kind o' stock deal?"

"Yes, and no." Gramont paused, and seemed to choose his words with care. "Miss Ledanois, the lady who was driving with us this afternoon, is an old friend of mine. I've known for some time that somebody was fleecing her. I suspected that it was Maillard the elder, for he has had the handling of her affairs for some time past. Now, however, those papers have given me the truth. He was straight enough with her; his son was the man.

"He worked on his father, made his father sell land owned by Miss Ledanois, and he himself reaped the profits. There are notes and stock issues among those papers that give his whole game away, to my eyes. By the way, get that tin box out of my trunk, will you? I want to take my stock certificates with me in the morning, and must not forget them."

Hammond disappeared into the adjoining room.

Gramont sat gazing at the boxes before him. He shook his head gloomily, and his eyes clouded.

"All wasted—the whole effort!" he murmured. "I thought it might lead to something, but all it has given me is the reward of saving myself and possibly retrieving Lucie. As for the larger game, the bigger quarry—it's all wasted. I haven't unraveled a single thread; the first real clue came to me tonight, purely by accident. Memphis Izzy Gumberts! That's the lead to follow! I'll get rid of this Midnight Masquer foolishness and go after the real game."

Gramont was to discover that it is not nearly so easy to be rid of folly as it is to don the jester's cap and bells; a fact which one Simplicissimus had discovered to his sorrow three hundred years earlier. But, as Gramont was not versed in the line of literature, he yet had the discovery ahead of him.

Hammond re-entered the room with the tin box, from which Gramont took his stock certificates issued by Bob Maillard's oil company. He pocketed the shares.

"I'll go to Maillard the banker—Joseph Maillard—first thing in the morning, and offer him my stock. He'll be mighty glad to get it at a discount, knowing that it is in his son's company. You see, the son doesn't confide in the old man particularly. I'll let the father win a little money on the deal with me, and by doing this I'll manage to save the greater part of my investment—"

"Holy mackerel!" Hammond exploded in a burst of laughter as he caught the idea. "Say, if this ain't the richest thing ever pulled! When the crash comes, the fancy kid will be stinging his dad good and hard, eh?"

"Exactly; and I think his dad can afford to be stung much better than I can," agreed Gramont, cheerfully. "Now let's take those packages and stow them away in the luggage compartment of the car. I'm getting nervous at the thought of having them around here, and they'll be perfectly safe there overnight—safer there than here, in fact. Tomorrow you can take the car out of town and send the packages by parcels post from some small town.

"In that way they ought to be delivered here on Wednesday. You'd better wear one of my suits, leaving your chauffeur's outfit here, and don't halt the car in front of the post office where you mail the packages—"

"I get you," assented Hammond, sagely. "But what about them aviator's clothes?"

"Take them with you—better get them wrapped up here and now. You can toss them into a ditch anywhere."

Hammond obeyed.

Ten minutes afterward the two men left the room, carrying the packages of loot and the bundle containing the aviator's uniform. They descended to the courtyard in the rear of the house. Here was a small garden, with a fountain in its center. Behind this were the stables, which had long been disused as such, and which were now occupied only by the car of Gramont.

It was with undisguised relief that Gramont now saw the stuff actually out of the house. Within the last few hours he had become intensely afraid of Jachin Fell. Concentrating himself upon the man, picking up information guardedly, he had that day assimilated many small items which increased his sense of peril from that quarter. Straws, no more, but quite significant straws. Gramont realized clearly that if the police ever searched his rooms and found this loot, he would be lost. There could be no excuse that would hold water for a minute against such evidence.

BOWRON SOUGHT RELIEF 40 YEARS

Tanlac Restores Los Angeles Man to Splendid Health After Everything Else Had Failed.

"Tanlac has done me more good than all other medicines and treatments combined, and that's saying a great deal, for I was a sufferer from indigestion forty years and have tried every kind of medicine that came my way," said R. H. Bowron, 1635 W. 17th St., Los Angeles, Cal.

"I could hardly stand the bad spells I frequently had with my stomach. I was weak and nervous, had no appetite, and I felt miserable generally. Nothing I took gave me more than temporary relief and I gradually grew worse.

"About two years ago Tanlac put me in splendid condition and it has been my standby ever since. Whenever I get to feeling a little off, a bottle or two puts me in fine shape. I eat heartily now, sleep fine, have no distress after meals, and, in fact, am enjoying splendid health. Tanlac is just the thing for those who suffer as I did."

VAST RICHES OF OLD SPAIN

Luxury Surrounding Grandees of Three Centuries Ago Can Hardly Be Imagined.

The luxury displayed at the present age by the great of Spain can in no way compare with that of their ancestors of three centuries ago.

The duke of Albuquerque, we were told recently by the marquess of San Simon, can boast of being the owner of many pieces of furniture made of silver left to him by his father.

In order to weigh and make the inventory of the silver and gold tablesets which were left, it was necessary to devote two hours per day for a period of six weeks. There were 1,400 dozens of dinner plates, 500 large platters and 700 smaller ones, all else being in proportion to this magnificence. Among other relics he has 40 silver step-ladders which were used to ascend to the tops of the cupboards which held these treasures.

The duke of Alba, who says that his father was not the richest, had left him 600 dozens of dinner plates and 800 platters made of wrought silver.

Conscientious.

At one o'clock in the morning the conscientious Smith college freshman tiptoed downstairs and knocked loudly on the housemother's door. Grabbing kimono and slippers in great haste the housemother ran to the door to see what all the excitement was about. A loud knock at 1 a. m. surely meant nothing less than a fire. "Oh, Mrs. Henry," said the conscientious freshman excitedly. "I sneezed a couple of times and think I must be getting a cold. You know Doctor Gilman said in hygiene lecture that the minute we felt a cold coming on we must tell the housemother about it!"

Grammar Doesn't Improve.

With all the money spent on public education the standard of public speech does not seem to improve much. At a recent ball game when a man fainted the announcer paraded in front of the grandstand calling loudly, "Are there a doctor in the audience?" At the circus the ballyhoo man for the tattooed advised the world, "Have your work did here." And the police department still paints on the streets, "Drive careful." — Detroit News.

Classy Dressers in 1776.

The following was the uniform for the officers of the corps, by order of the "Marine Committee," dated September 5, 1776: "A green coat faced with white, round cuff, slashed sleeves and pockets, with buttons round the cuff, skirts turned back, buttons to suit the facings; white waistcoat and breeches edged with green, black gaiters and garters." The order also stated that green shirts were ordered for the men "if they can be procured."

"POSSUM AND TATER TIME"

Georgia Editor Also Writes of Other Good Things to Eat and Drink in Seasons.

Persimmon beer is here. That season in which this moderate type of "home brew" is being served from large barrels at the country farmhouses. Really this drink, when properly made, is delicious, is suggestive of a few other things that a tired, hungry editor longs to see. It is suggestive, first of all, of the ginger cakes, like our "mammy" used to bake—large, dark-brown home affairs that really had a flavor of ginger in them—ginger that must have been gathered when the ginger crop was at its best. It suggests the season of the "possum and tater" feasts—times when the community life is astir by the fumes from the baking pan. Did you know that "possum am good?" It is, when properly prepared, a meat that is unequaled, especially if you barricade the brown ribs and fleaks of flesh with several big yellow yams—yams that can be seen partly in and partly out of the rich, brown gravy. Hold on a minute. Don't do anything rash. This is enough to sharpen the appetite of any man, we admit, but never cross the bridge until you get to it.—Walton (Ga.) News.

Elaborate Responsibility.

"It's a busy life," remarked the man who was waving a palm leaf fan.

"How have you been occupying yourself?"

"Voting. It's everybody's duty to vote. In addition to voting for state, county and town officers, I voted in the primaries, got elected as a delegate and voted over and over in the convention. Of course, I'm going to vote in the fall election, and I only hope they'll let me round out my record by putting me in the electoral college."—Detroit News.

Rochester—William A. Nolan of Grand Meadow, state senator from the Fifth district and of state-wide prominence in public affairs, died at the Colonial hospital here from injuries and shock suffered in an automobile accident.

Redwood Falls—At the annual convention of the Marshall district Epworth League here, Rev. B. L. Main, of Redwod Falls, was elected president and Pipestone was selected as the place for holding the next convention.

St. Paul—Large savings to farmer members and more effecient handling of their products are reported in statements issued by the Minnesota Cooperative Creameries association and the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation.

Red Wing—City Attorney C. R. Hall and Justice of the Peace F. A. Carlson are trying out a new cure for autoists who persist in driving cars while intoxicated. Straight jail sentences of 15 days are now the rule, and two prisoners are now in the county jail serving time.

Minneapolis—Winding up a search of ruins of the Lafayette club at Minnetonka Beach, Lake Minnetonka, destroyed by fire early June 18, for the body of the second of two women burned to death, Sheriff Earle Brown said that hope of finding the body had been abandoned.

Montevideo—Elsie Sallsbury, under indictment on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of Oscar Erickson, April 25, last, has been released on $10,000 bail, to appear for trial during the December term of the district court here.

Minneapolis — With approximately two thousand tourists already registered and tagged at the Welcome Bureau's headquarters, auto club officials declared that it estimates that approximately twelve thousand persons will have registered with the bureau by the end of the season, November 1.

St. James—St. James has been turned over to the southwest Minnesota Grand Army of the Republic members and delegates of the Women's Relief Corps, here for their annual encampment.

Minneapolis—Farm products in the Northwest are moving to market in greater volume than normal and at rising prices, while manufacturing and building operations have increased, giving practically full employment to labor, according to the monthly letter of John H. Rich, chairman of the board of directors of the Ninth Federal Reserve ba-

The Young Mother.

THE ILLS OF INFANTS AND CHILDREN should be so well known to the youngest of mothers that a reminder or a repetition of the symptoms of illness seems unnecessary, yet there are some mothers who overlook a feverish condition, a little colic, or a disposition to be irritable. If not corrected they may lead to serious sickness. And to correct them, to bring Baby back to its happy self, is so easy by the use of Castoria—a medicine prepared just for infants and children. It will regulate the bowels (not force them), aid digestion and so bring quiet and rest.

Fletcher's Castoria has been doing this for over 30 years; regulating the stomach and bowels of infants and children. It has replaced the nauseating Castor Oil, so-called Soothing Syrups, poisonous Paregoric and other vicious concoctions in the homes of true and honest mothers—mothers who love their children.

Those mothers will give their babies foods and medicines especially prepared for infants and children.

A Word About Truth.

"Great is Truth, and mighty above all things." So says the Old Testament, yet it is equally true to-day. Truth shows no favors, fears no enemies.

From the inception of Fletcher's Castoria, Truth has been the watchword, and to the conscientious adherence to this motto in the preparation of Fletcher's Castoria as well as in its advertising is due the secret of its popular demand.

All imitations, all substitutes, all just-as-good preparations lack the element of Truth, lack the righteousness of being, lack all semblance even in the words of those who would deceive.

And you! Mothers, mothers with the fate of the World in your hands, can you be deceived? Certainly not.

Fletcher's Castoria is prepared for Infants and Children. It is distinctly a remedy for the little-ones. The BABY'S need for a medicine to take the place of Castor Oil, Paregoric and Soothing Syrups was the sole thought that led to its discovery. Never try to correct BABY'S troubles with a medicine that you would use for yourself.

MOTHERS SHOULD READ THE BOOKLET THAT IS AROUND EVERY BOTTLE OF FLETCHER'S CASTORIA

GENUINE CASTORIA ALWAYS Bears the Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof; which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon by said mortgage secured which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two Thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninty-six cents ($2763 96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155) North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75.00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

PEAT EXPERIMENTL FIELD

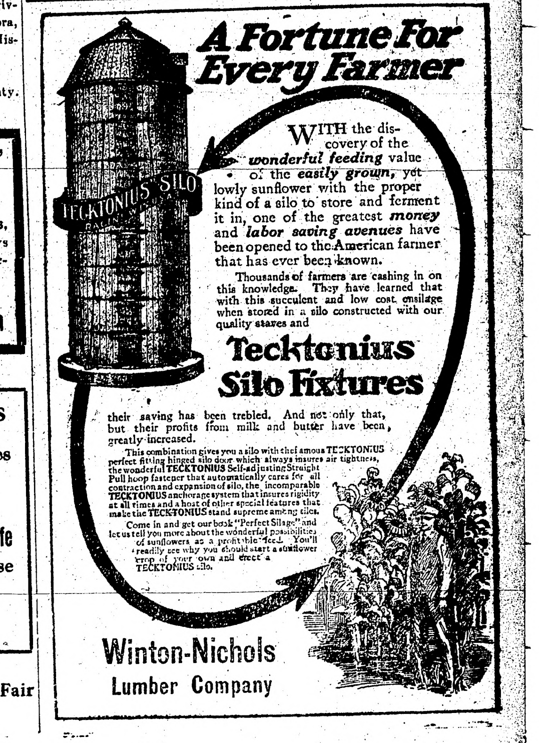
Visiting Day July 22

Saturday, July 22, has been decided upon as visiting day for 1922. All farmers and others interested in the cultivation of peat soils are urged to inspect the experimental plots on that day. Those who cannot visit the plots at that time are invited to visit them at their convenience.

The experimental field is located one mile east of the Golden Valley postoffice. Guides will be at the field both forenoon and afternoon to show the different plots and explain the work.

Crops are very promising this year. Winter rye and clover are particularly good

There will be a picnic dinner at 12:30 in the grove on the Dahl farm just south east of the post office. Those who cannot bring their dinner will be able to get coffee and sandwiches.



A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been, greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

WAS A BROKEN-DOWN WOMAN

Then I Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Medicines

Donaldsonville, La.—"I write with pleasure to praise your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—which has done so much to restore my health. I was a broken-down woman until my husband brought me a bottle of your Vegetable Compound and one of Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine. I had been having pains every month and at intervals between, was weak and seemed to be smothering at times, but in a week I felt like another woman. I also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. It did me a lot of good too. I cannot praise your medicines too much and will be more than glad to recommend them to any woman who is suffering from female troubles. You may print my testimonial, as it is true."—Mrs. T. A. LANDRY, 612 Miss. St., Donaldsonville, La.

Note Mrs. Landry's words—"as it is true." Every letter recommending Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is genuine. It is a statement telling the merits of these medicines just as the women in your own neighborhood tell each other about them. For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has sold on merit.

Have You a Bad Back?

Are you lame every morning? Do you drag through the day with a steady, nagging backache—evening find you "all played out"? Probably your kidneys are to blame. Hurry, worry, lack of rest and a heavy diet, all tend to weaken the kidneys. Your back gives out; you feel depressed and suffer headaches, dizziness and kidney irregularities. Don't go from bad to worse. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Thousands recommend them. Ask your neighbor!

Doan's Kidney Pills relieved me completely."

BEN CHACHERRE.

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer. Gramont's chauffeur, Hammond, sergeant in the A. E. F., lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for financial gain, Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. Gramont and Hammond put the jewels and money in individual packages to be returned the next day.

In the garage Hammond switched on the lights of the car. By the glow they disposed their burdens in the luggage compartment of the tonneau, which held them neatly. The compartment closed and locked, they returned into the house and dismissed the affair as settled.

Upon the following morning Gramont, who usually breakfasted en pension with his hostess, had barely seated himself at the table when he perceived the figure of Hammond at the rear entrance of the dining room. The chauffeur beckoned him hastily.

"Come out here, cap'n!" Hammond was breathing heavily, and seemed to be in some agitation. "Want to show you somethin'!"

Gramont rose and followed Hammond out to the garage, much to his amazement. The chauffeur halted beside the car and extended him a key, pointing to the luggage compartment.

"Here's the key—you open her!"

"What's the matter, man?"

"The stuff's gone!"

Gramont seized the key and opened the compartment. It proved empty indeed. He stared up into the face of Hammond, who was watching in dogged silence.

"I knew you'd suspect me," broke out the chauffeur, but Gramont interrupted him curtly.

"Don't be a fool; nothing of the sort. Was the garage locked?"

"Yes, and the compartment, too! I came out to look over that cut tire, and thought I'd make sure the stuff was safe—"

"We're up against it, that's all. Someone must have been watching us last night, eh?"

"The guy that trailed you yesterday, most like," agreed Hammond, dourly. "You think they got us, cap'n? What can we do?"

"Do?" Gramont shrugged his shoulders and laughed. "Nothing except to wait and see what happens next! Don't touch that compartment door. I want to examine it later."

Hammond gazed admiringly after him as he crossed the garden. "If you ain't a cool hand, I'm a Dutchman!" he murmured, and followed his master.

CHAPTER VI.

Chacherre.

At ten o'clock that Monday morning Gramont's car approached Canal street, and halted a block distant. Gramont left the car, and turned to speak with Hammond.

"I've made out at least two finger-prints on the luggage compartment," he said, quietly. "Drive around to police headquarters and enter a complaint in my name to a robbery of the compartment; say that the thief got away with some valuable packages I had been about to mail. They have a process of transferring fingerprints such as these; get it done. Perhaps they can identify the thief, for it must have been some clever picklock to get into the compartment without leaving a scratch. It was someone sent by that devil Jachin Fell, and I'll land him if I can!"

"Then Fell will land us if he's got the stuff!"

"Let him! How can he prove anything, unless he had brought the police to open up that compartment? Get along with you!"

Hammond grinned, saluted, and drove away.

Slowly Gramont edged his way through the eddying crowds to Canal street, and presently gained the imposing portals of the Exeter National bank. Entering the building, he sent his card to the private office of the president; a moment later he was ushered in, and was closeted with Joseph Maillard.

The interior of the Exeter National reflected the stern personality that ruled it. The bank was dark, old-fashioned, conservative, guarded with much effrontery of iron grills and bars against the evil doer.

The window men greeted their customers with infrequent smiles, with caution and reserve so great that it was positively chilly. Suspicion seemed in the air. The bank's reputation for guarding the sanctity of wealth seemed to rest heavily upon each pair of bowed shoulders.

The business customers of this bank found their affairs handled coldly, efficiently, with an inhuman precision that was admirable. It was good for business, and they liked it. There were no mistakes.

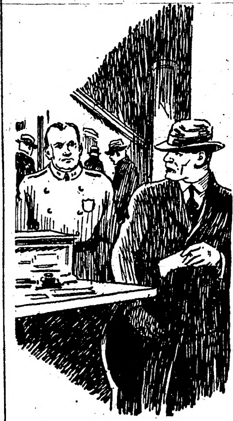
People who were accustomed to dealing with bankers of cordial smile and courteous word, people who liked to walk into a bank and to be met with a personal greeting, did not come here, nor were they wanted here. Chance customers who entered the sacred portals were duly cowed and put in their proper place. Most of them were, that is. Occasionally some intrepid soul appeared who seemed impervious to the gloomy chill, who seemed even to resent it. One of these persons was now standing in the lobby and staring around with a cool impudence which drew unfavorable glances from the clerks.

He was a decently dressed fellow, obviously no customer of this sacrosanct place, obviously a stranger to its interior. Beneath a rakishly cocked soft hat beamed a countenance that bore a look of self-assured impertinent deviltry. After one look at that countenance the assistant cashier crooked a hasty finger at the floor guard, who nodded and walked to the intruder with a polite query.

"Can I help you, sir?"

The intruder turned, favored the guard with a cool stare, then broke into a laugh and a flood of Creole dialect.

"Why, if it isn't old Lacroix from Carencro! And look at the brass buttons—diable! You must own this place, hein?—the cat's tail grows in time, I see! You remember me?"



"Go to the Devil, Then," Snapped Chacherre, and Turned Away.

"Ben Chacherre!" exclaimed the guard, losing his dignity for an instant. "Why—you vaurien, you!"

"So you turn up your sanctified nose at Ben Chacherre, do you?" exclaimed that person jauntily. "A vaurien, am I? Old peacock! Lead me to the man who cashes checks, lackey, brass buttons that you are! Come, obey me, or I'll have you thrown into the street!"

"You—you wish to cash a check? But you are not known here—"

"Bah, insolent one! Monkey in the calabash that you are! Do you not know me?"

"Heaven preserve me! I will not answer for your accursed checks."

"Go to the devil, then," snapped Chacherre, and turned away.

His roving eyes had already found the correct window by means of the other persons seeking it, and now he stepped into the small queue that had formed. When it came his turn, he slid his check across the marble slab, tucked his thumbs into the armholes of his vest, and impudently stared into the questioning, coldly repellent eyes of the teller.

"Well?" he exclaimed, as the teller examined the check. "Do you wish to eat it, that you sniff so hard?"

The teller gave him a glance. "This is for a thousand dollars—"

"Can I not read?" said Chacherre, with an impudent gesture. "Am I an ignorant 'Cajun? Have I not eyes in my head? If you wish to start an argument, say that the check is for a hundred dollars. Then, by heaven, I will argue something with you!"

"You are Ben Chacherre, eh? Does anyone here know you?"

Chacherre exploded in a violent oath. "Dolt that you are, do I have to be known when the check is indorsed under my signature? Who taught you business, monkey?"

"True," answered the teller sulkily. "Yet the amount—"

"Oh, bah!" Chacherre snapped his fingers. "Go and telephone Jachin Fell, you old woman! Go and tell him you do not know his signature—well, who are you looking at? Am I a telephone, then? You are not hired to look but to act! Get about it."

The enraged and scandalized teller beckoned a confrere. Jachin Fell was telephoned. Presumably his response was reassuring, for Chacherre was presently handed a thousand dollars in small bills, as he requested. He insisted upon counting over the money at the window with insolent assiduity, flung a final compliment at the teller, and swaggered across the lobby. He was still standing by the entrance when Henry Gramont left the private office of the president and passed him by without a look.

Toward noon Gramont arrived afoot at his pension. Behind the garage, in the alley, he discovered Hammond busily at work cleaning and polishing the engine of the car.

"Hello!" he exclaimed, cheerily. "What luck?"

"Pretty good, cap'n." Hammond glanced up, then paused.

A stranger was strolling toward them along the alleyway, a jaunty individual who was gayly whistling and who seemed entirely carefree and happy. He appeared to have no interest whatever in them, and Hammond concluded that he was innocuous.

"They got them prints fine, cap'n. What's more, they think they've located the fellow that made 'em."

"Ah, good work!" exclaimed Gramont. "Some criminal?"

Hammond frowned. The stranger had come to a halt a few feet distant, flung them a jerky, careless nod, and was beginning to roll a cigarette. He surveyed the car with a knowing and appreciative eye. Hammond turned his back on the man disdainfully.

"Yep—a sneak thief they'd pinched a couple of years back; didn't know where he was, but the prints seemed to fit him. They'll come up and look things over sometime today, then go after him and land him."

Gramont gave the stranger a glance, but the other was still surveying the car with evident admiration. If he heard their words he gave them no attention.

"Who was the man, then?" asked Gramont.

"A guy with a queer name—Ben Chacherre." Hammond pronounced it as he deemed correct—as the name was spelled. "Only they didn't call him that. Here, I wrote it down."

He fished in his pocket and produced a paper. Gramont glanced at it and laughed.

"Oh, Chacherre!" He gave the name the Creole pronunciation.

"Yep, Sasherry. I expect they'll come any time now—said two bulls would drop in."

"All right." Gramont nodded and turned away, with another glance at the stranger. "I'll not want the car today nor tonight that I know of. I'm not going to the Proteus ball. So your time's your own until tomorrow; make the most of it!"

He disappeared, and Hammond returned to his work. Then he straightened up, for the jaunty stranger was bearing down upon him with evident intent to speak.

"Some car you got there, brother!" Ben Chacherre, who had overheard most of the foregoing conversation, lighted his cigarette and grinned familiarly. "Some car, eh? All she needs is some good tires, a new coat of paint, a good steel chassis, and a new engine—"

"Huh?" snorted Hammond. "Say, you 'bo, who sold you chips in this game? Move along!"

Ben grinned anew and rested himself against a near-by telephone pole.

"Free country, ain't it?" he inquired lazily. "Or have you invested your winnings and bought this here alley?"

Hammond reddened with anger and took a step forward. The next words of Chacherre, however, jerked him sharply into self-control.

"Seen anything of an aviator's helmet around here?"

"Huh?" The chauffeur glared at his tormentor, yet with a sudden sick feeling inside his bosom. "Who you kiddin' now?"

"Nobody. I was asking a question, that's all. I was flyin' along here last night in my airplane, and I lost my helmet overboard. Thought maybe you'd seen it. So long, brother!"

What Is It Worth to Change a Tire?

On the road changing a tire is not an especially pleasant task.

The dust or mud, the grease and grime, the tedious delay—all are things we like to avoid.

But the time to think about these things is when you buy the tire—not after the blow-out occurs.

For some tires blow out much more easily than others.

Outward appearance counts for little.

It is the material in the tire and the construction of it that determines its strength.

Goodyear recognizes these facts and all Goodyear Tires are made of long staple cotton.

Take the 30 x 3½ Cross Rib Clincher Tire here illustrated, for example.

It is made of Arizona cotton, the fibres of which average 1½ inches long.

Many 30 x 3½ clincher tires are made of short staple cotton from ½ inch to 1⅛ inches long.

This means less strength and greater danger of blow-outs—more tire troubles.

Yet this high grade guaranteed Goodyear Tire costs only $10.95.

You can buy some tires for even less than this but none with the fine materials and construction of this one.

Can you afford to take a chance on more frequent tire troubles for the sake of the slightly lower price of cheaper tires?

Duluth—Howard Porter, 23, was shot through the abdomen when an "empty" revolver exploded in the hand of Alec Conlon, a companion.

Minneapolis—One million dollars in school bonds will be placed on sale August 9 when the Board of Estimate and Taxation convenes.

Minneapolis—Eighty-five Elks from this city, St. Paul, Montana and North Dakota lodges left for Atlantic City to attend the B. P. O. E. national convention.

Foley—Having realized about $1,000,000 in cash from the sale of potatoes in 1921, and with a goodly acreage in spuds this year, Benton county truck gardeners are now raising cabbages and beans in larger quantities than ever before. A pickling and preserving company has plans perfected for the erection of a large kraut factory here, and beans have been found to be a paying crop.

Rochester — Rochester's gigantic Fourth of July celebration under auspices of the American Legion, attended by thousands, failed to materialize at the last moment when a large supply of fireworks failed to arrive. Thousands crowded the park where the pyrotechnic display was to be, but they waited in vain.

Hibbing—Only four jurors have been selected in the Frank Nosie murder case, under way in district court before Judge Martin Hughes. Nosie is charged with the murder of William Ruzic, a motorcab driver of Virginia, last fall.

Osseo—Osseo village and friends gathered at Weaver lake to commemorate the day 70 years ago when Pierre Bottineau, brought from out of the wilderness the French-Canadian settlers who were to found the town.

Minneapolis—Gaining entrance to a wholesale house by explaining that he wanted to fix the burglar alarm, reported out of order, a man robbed the T. W. Stevenson & Co. establishment of $385 in furs and a pistol.

Currie—Jack Groves, who has pulled a throttle on the Currie branch of the Omaha since the line was built in here, 27 years ago, has been retired and placed on the engineers pension list. Groves has been an engineer on the Omaha system for 39 years.

Grand Meadow—Harry E. Wilson, defeated candidate for nomination for state senator in the Fifth district, comprising Dodge and Mower counties, has started action to have his name inserted on the ballot in the November election in place of Senator W. A. Nolan, who died following the primaries.

Crosby—Charles Burkman, globe trotter of Halifax, Can., reached Crosby on his trip around the globe. He left Halifax Oct. 14, last to attempt to walk around the world for a prize of $29,000, subscribed by sportsmen of the provinces.

Crookston—The Industrial Commission of Minnesota, has opened a free employment bureau at Crookston, Minn., primarily for the purpose of supplying the farmers of the Red River valley with farm help during the coming harvest, as well as supplying help of all kinds to employers generally in that section of the state. The Crookston office will be under the supervision of Theo. Garvik, county commissioner of Polk county, who has a wide acquaintance in that district and is thoroughly familiar with the industrial situation.

Minneapolis—Wholesalers and manufacturers of Minneapolis and St. Paul have united to conduct a joint Market Week in the Twin Cities July 31 to August 5. During that week the Executive Committee has announced that special attractions will be held out to merchants of the Northwest who will be invited to view the offerings of the Twin City wholesale market. An entertainment program has been arranged to make the visit enjoyable. There will be a fare and a half rate on all railroads to the Twin Cities July 29 to August 7.

Austin — Division Superintendent Meyer and other operating officials of the Milwaukee road in Austin are among those who have put on overall suits and are working to keep the trains running into and out of this city on time since the strike was declared.

St. Paul—Governor Preus can now add an imported and very fashionable walking stick to his street dress. The cane, with silver tip and solid silver handle, engraved J. A. O. P., is direct from Vienna and was presented to the Governor by Otto Adler, St. Paul, who has just returned from a tour of Europe.

NEGRO'S MEMORY A PUZZLE

Of Limited Educational Attainments, Colored Man Has Wonderful Fund of Useful Information.

Jim Gilmore, a negro aged fifty-six, who lives in the town of Greenville, Tex., is said by scientists who have examined him, to possess one of the most remarkable memories known. With apparently a small amount of educational training Gilmore is able to quote any verse in the Bible suggested to him. He answers any questions pertaining to the Civil war, the Spanish-American war and the late World war, giving dates of all outstanding historical events. He can name every station and water tank from San Francisco to New York on the principal transcontinental railroads.

There seems to be no limit to the amount of poetry Gilmore can quote. "The Sinking of the Titanic," numbering 40 verses, and "The World War From Beginning to End," in 60 verses and three parts, is another literary achievement of which he can boast. He has traveled extensively and possesses an excellent vocabulary for one of limited education.—Exchange.

Part of a Collection.

"Just a moment," interrupted the defendant's lawyer. "You say you despise this man you are suing for $50,000, yet you bring his alleged love letters into court carefully tied up with a pink ribbon."

"There is no sentiment in that," replied the fair plaintiff, haughtily. "I merely used a pink ribbon to distinguish his from the others."

FUNERAL BEARERS ON STRIKE

Incident That Enlightened British Public Concerning Profession About Which Little Is Known.

The strike of funeral bearers in Hull calls attention to a profession of which comparatively little is known.

People are apt to look upon the somber figures who walk beside the hearse and carry the coffin to the graveside as simply a part of the undertaker's outfit, but in reality these men are a profession to themselves. Usually they are small tradesmen, writes a correspondent, or out of work, ready to earn a few shillings in this way. Every undertaker has his own little band who can be relied upon to come whenever a funeral is on. Generally the undertaker provides the tall hats, a fact which accounts for the grotesque fitting of some of the hats, but the black suit must be provided or borrowed by the man himself. The fee varies from 75 cents to $1.25, according to the district, and there are men who can make $5 a week and upwards out of this line. At Hull the fee has been $1.25. Now the undertakers wish to drop it to $1 a funeral, and hence the strike of the bearers.—Manchester Guardian.

Oratory.

"You have never tried to shine as a great orator?"

"No," replied Senator Sorghum. "My idea of a great orator is a man who has a vast audience unanimously with him at the meeting and then loses every one who goes home and remembers enough of the speech to think it over."

WAS UNDER NO OBLIGATION

Transaction of Youthful Newspaper Proprietor Had Been on a Strictly Business Basis.

George developed a journalistic instinct at the early age of fifteen. With the consent of his father and some assistance from the same cource he bought an "amateur printing outfit" and started the Klinkerville Monthly Journal, subscription price 50 cents a year, payable in advance.

"I suppose you call yourself the editor and proprietor of this office," remarked an envious young associate who dropped in at his "sanctum" in the basement of the paternal dwelling one day.

"Of course I do," responded the youthful journalist. "I don't owe a cent on it."

"Proprietor! Umph. Everybody knows you got $25 from your father to start it with."

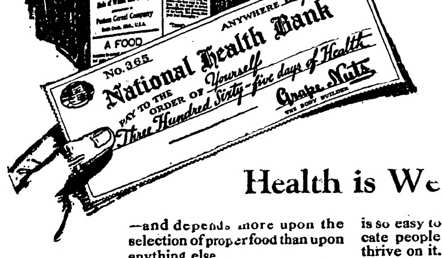
"Yes, sir!" stoutly rejoined George. "And his subscription for the Journal is marked paid fifty years ahead on my books!"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Uncle Eben.

"Of course, you wants to look at de bright side," said Uncle Eben, "but ain' much comfort in standin' outside lookin' at de 'lectric lights, when you wants to go inside an' look at de pictures."

There may be plenty of room at the top, but victims of that tired feeling never reach it.

A corner in grain isn't necessarily on the square.



Health is Wealth Itself

—and depends more upon the selection of proper food than upon anything else.

The reason is simple—the right kind of food digests promptly and is absorbed into the blood for building sound tissue; while food that digests slowly may ferment and lead to serious conditions.

Grape-Nuts — the delicious cereal food made from whole wheat flour and malted barley—is so easy to digest that even delicate people and young children thrive on it.

This is only natural, because Grape-Nuts is baked for 20 hours, which transforms and partially pre-digests the starch elements, resulting in easy digestion and quick assimilation.

Served with milk or cream Grape-Nuts is a complete food—and along with its nutritive qualities is that wonderful flavor!

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage, executed by A. S. Chase, Mortgagor, to John C. Arvidson, Mortgagee, dated on the 1st day of January, 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 84, of Mortgages on Page 262 thereof.

That such default consists in the non-payment, when due, of the principal sum of Seventeen Hundred, ($1700.00) Dollars, which fell due January 1st, 1922, and the interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1921 and interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1922. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is the sum of Nineteen Hundred Sixty and 63-100 ($1960.63) Dollars.

That the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in Marshall County, Minnesota, and described as follows: The South Half of Southeast Quarter (S1-2SE1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-eight (28) and the West Half of the Southwest Quarter, (W1-2 SW1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-seven (27), all of the above being in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North of Range Numbered Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian and containing One Hundred Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government Survey thereof.

That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Marshall County, Minnesota, at the West front door of the Marshall County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 1st day of August, A. D., 1922, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five ($75.00) Dollars Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage.

Dated June 10th, 1922.

Mortgage Foreclosure Sale.

Notice is hereby given that default has been made in the conditions of that certain mortgage executed and delivered by Torald Tharaldson, a single man, mortgagor, to Northwestern Trust Company, a corporation, of St. Paul, Minnesota, mortgagee, dated October 19th., 1916, with power of sale therein contained, recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County, Minnesota, October 25th, 1916, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 82 of Mortgages on page 579 thereof; which mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company to Kate W. Lee by written assignment, dated November 10th, 1916, and recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds November 21st, 1916, at 9:00 o'clock A. M., in Book 85 of Mortgages on page 164; that the said Kate W. Lee thereafter died and Letters of Administration of her estate were granted to Northwestern Trust Company by the Probate Court of Ramsey County, Minnesota, said Letters being filed with said Register of Deeds on February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book K of Miscellaneous records on page 566; that the mortgage together with the debt secured thereby was duly assigned by said Northwestern Trust Company, Administrator of the Estate of Kate W. Lee, Decedent, by written assignment, to Northwestern Trust Company, dated October 14th, 1921, recorded in the office of said Register of Deeds February 17th, 1922, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 104 of Mortgages on page 641; which default consists in the failure of the said mortgagor to make payment of the sum of $126.00 interest coupon by said mortgage secured which by its terms became due and payable October 1st, 1919, and in the payment of other interest and principal falling due since. And whereas there is actually due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice the sums of $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1919, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1920, and $126.00 interest coupon with interest at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and $2100.00 principal by said mortgage secured with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 1st, 1921, and the sum of $158.23 taxes paid by the mortgagee under the terms of the mortgage upon said land with interest thereon at 6 per cent per annum since October 15th, 1921, being a total due and claimed to be due and payable at the date of this notice Two Thousand seven hundred sixty-three dollars ninty-six cents ($2763 96) and said mortgage containing a power of sale and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise having been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage or any part thereof; now therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises described in and conveyed by said mortgage, to-wit: the Southwest quarter (SW 1-4) of Section Twenty (20) in Township One hundred fifty-five (155) North of Range Forty-two (42) West in the County of Marshall, State of Minnesota, which sale will be held by the Sheriff of said Marshall County at the front door of the courthouse in the City of Warren in said County and State on the 24th day of July, 1922, at 10:00 o'clock A. M., at public vendue to the highest bidder for cash to pay said debt of $2763.96 and interest from date hereof and taxes, and an attorneys fee of $75.00 as stipulated in and by said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption at any time within one year from date of said sale as provided by law.

Word From Morck Family

Williston, N. D., 7-8-22

We were asked by several of the Holt people to write them in regard to our trip.

Leaving Grand Forks Saturday afternoon we took the Theodore Roosevelt trail and arrived at Devils Lake Saturday evening, without the least bit of trouble and camped there for the night.

Devils Lake provides a very pleasant camping ground for tourists as do all the other cities along the trail. The following morning was a liitle threatening but proved to be a perfect day. We made 208 miles going thru Minot and camped at Palermo for the night.

Monday morning we got an early start and arrived at eleven o'clock, (mountain time.)

We had our dinner at a very accommodating park here.

We have found the trail in splendid condition save a stretch of a hundred miles or so, on either side of Minot. We saw wonderful wheat fields all along. Ninety percent of the crops are in splendid shape and promise an abundant yield. The optimism thru out is good.

We expect to reach Glendive this evening providing the roads are as good as we have found them thus far and of course if the "Fords" prove as faithful as up till now.

Best Wishes
S. Morck and Family.

Mrs. Axel Nelson received a letter Tuesday from Billings, Mont., written by Mrs. Morck on July 16th.

She had been in a hospital a week then and had not completely recovered. It seems they had a very bad accident on July 6, when something went wrong with one of the rear wheels and their auto went into the ditch. Mrs. Morck had a rib broken, her arm bably cut from elbow to shoulder, the bone over one of her eyes was broken, and she was unconscious from Thursday until Sunday. The little boy was cut in the back of his head but not seriously. Nothing was said about the others being hurt, and as soon as she was out of danger, the family resumed their journey by auto, Mrs. Morck going by rail the rest of the way when she is able.

Mrs. Richard Kautz of Sarles, N. Dak., came Saturday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Bjerk.

We understand Mrs. Erik Johnson fell and hurt her arm very badly one day this week, but the doctor found no bones broken.

"I would not take $1,000 for what that wonderful Tanlac medicine has done for me," said Mrs. Mattie Lutes, of Lexington, Kentucky. Sold by C. H. Gunheim.

Estray: A milch cow came to my place on June 28th. Owner please prove property, pay for this notice and care of cow and take her away.

Obituary

O. E. Silverness was born in Norway July 4th. 1838. He was married in Norway and came with his family to America in 1881 and settled in Olmstead county, Minn.

In 1883 they moved to Marshall county and in 1884 he settled on the old homestead where his wife died the same year.

Thirteen years ago Mr. Silverness had a stroke of paralysis and had not been well since then. He has been steadily failing since last February and peacefully passed away on July 12th.

The funeral was held in Newfolden on Monday, Rev. Myhrer officiating and interment was made in Bethlehem cemetery beside his wife.

Card of Thanks

We hereby wish to thank friends and neighbors who were so kind as to visit and bring cheer to our father during his long illness, also those, who brought flowers and were present at the funeral. We especially wish to thank Mrs. T. B. Folden for her kind assistance, both during father's last moments and also at the funeral. Thank you one and all.

Mrs. Arnold Folden.
E. A. and G. A. Silverness.

Mrs. G. Sanoden entertained the W. C. T. U. Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Newton and baby visited Sunday at Selmer Refsnes's.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans C. Hanson of Warren visited Wednesday with Mr. and Mrs. Paul Olson.

The ladies gave Mrs. Bjerk a birthday surprise party Tuesday night and everybody present had a pleasant time.

Minnesota has a million and a half of dairy cows and ranks third among the states having the largest number of cows.

Mr. and Mrs. Abel Anderson of Lockhart were here Friday looking after their farm, and made a short visit at C. W. Christianson's.

Although a powerful reconstructive tonic; Tanlac contains no harmful ingredients, minerals or opiates, which are so often found in other medicines. It can therefore be taken by delicate children with splendid results. C. H. Gunheim.

The Thief River Falls circuit of Norwegian Lutheran churches held their annual picnic in Holt Wednesday. Eight ministers and their families enjoyed picnic dinner and supper in the church basement and all present had a good time.

PEAT EXPERIMENTL FIELD

Visiting Day July 22

Saturday, July 22, has been decided upon as visiting day for 1922. All farmers and others interested in the cultivation of peat soils are urged to inspect the experimental plots on that day. Those who can not visit the plots at that time are invited to visit them at their convenience.

The experimental field is located one mile east of the Golden Valley postoffice. Guides will be at the field both forenoon and afternoon to show the different plots and explain the work.

Crops are very promising this year. Winter rye and clover are particularly good

There will be a picnic dinner at 12:30 in the grove on the Dahl farm just south east of the post office. Those who can not bring their dinner will be able to get coffee and sandwiches.

TECKTONIUS SILO
RACINE

A Fortune For Every Farmer

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

INSURANCE MAN IS ENTHUSED OVER IT

Gains 14 Pounds Taking Tanlac and Is Restored to Finest Health.

"Tanlac has restored my health and built me up fourteen pounds in weight," said H. W. Morrison, 4768 Thrush Ave., St. Louis, Mo., agent for the National Life Insurance Co.

"Two years ago my stomach went wrong and I could not eat anything without suffering agony afterwards from heart palpitation and shortness of breath. Some nights I was in so much misery my wife had to get up and try to get me some relief. My health got to be so poor I had to stay in bed for weeks at a time.

"What Tanlac has done for me is nothing short of wonderful. I now eat anything I want, sleep fine, and am working full time every day; in fact, I'm in splendid health. I can't praise Tanlac too highly."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

"A CARNIVAL JOKE"

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer. Gramont's chauffeur, Hammond, sergeant in the A. E. F., lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for financial gain, Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. Gramont and Hammond put the jewels and money in individual packages to be returned the next day. An explanation is inclosed in each.

Hammond stood staring after the swaggering figure; for once he was speechless. The jaunty words had sent terror thrilling into him. He started impulsively to pursue that impudent accoster—then he checked himself. Had the man guessed something? Had the man known something? Or had those words been only a bit of meaningless impertinence—a chance shaft which had accidentally flown home?

The last conjecture impressed itself on Hammond as being the truth, and his momentary fright died out. He concluded that the incident was not worth mentioning to Gramont, who surely had troubles enough of his own at this juncture.

As for Ben Chacherre, he sauntered from the alley, a careless whistle upon his lips. Once out of Hammond's sight, however, he quickened his pace. Turning into a side street, he directed his step toward that part of the old quarter which, in the days before prohibition, had been given over to low cabarets and dives of various sorts. Coming to one of them, which appeared more dirty and desolate than the rest, Chacherre opened a side door and vanished.

He entered what had once been the Red Cat cabaret. At a table in the half-darkened main room sat two men. One of them, who was the proprietor, jerked his chin in an invitation to join him.

A man famous in the underworld circles, a man whose renown rested on curious feats and facts, this proprietor; few crooks in the country had not heard the name of Memphis Izzy Gumberts. He was a grizzled old bear now, but in times past he had been the head of a far-flung organization which, on each pay day, covered every army post in the country and diverted into its own pockets about two-thirds of Uncle Sam's payroll—a feat still related in criminal circles as the ne plus ultra of success. Those palmy days were gone, but Memphis Izzy, who had never been "mugged" in any gallery, sat in his deserted cabaret and still did not lack for power and influence.

The man at his side was apparently not anxious to linger, for he rose and made his farewells as Chacherre approached.

"We have about eighteen cars left," he said to Gumberts. "Charley the Goog can attend to them, and the place is safe enough. They're up to you. I'm drifting back to Chi."

"Drift along," and Gumberts nodded, a leer in his eyes. His face was broad, heavy-jowled, filled with a keen and forceful craft. "It's a cinch that nobody in this state is goin' to interfere with us. About them cars from Texas—any news?"

"I've sent orders to bring 'em in next week."

Gumberts nodded again, and the man departed. Into the chair which he had vacated dropped Ben Chacherre, and took from his pocket the money he had obtained at the bank. He laid it on the table before Gumberts.

"There you are," he said. "Amounts you want and all. The boss says to gimme a receipt."

"Wouldn't trust you, eh?" jeered Gumberts. "Why wouldn't the boss leave the money come out of the takin's, hey?"

"Wanted to keep separate accounts," said Chacherre.

Gumberts nodded and produced two large sealed envelopes, which he pushed across the table.

"There's a rakeoff for week before last," he announced. "Last week will be the big business, judgin' from early reports."

Chacherre pocketed the envelopes, lighted a cigarette, and leaned forward.

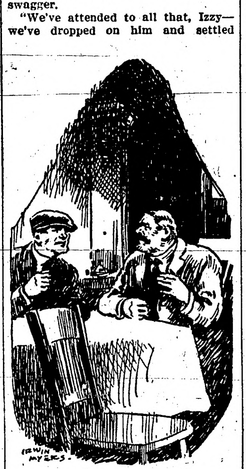
"Say, Izzy! You got to send a new man down to the Bayou Latouche right away. Lafarge was there, you know; a nigger shot him yesterday. The nigger threatened to squeal unless he got his money back—Lafarge was a fool and didn't know how to handle him. The boss says to shoot a new man down there. Also, he says, you'd better watch out about spreadin' the lottery into Texas and Alabama, account of the government rules."

The heavy features of Gumberts closed in a scowl.

"You tell your boss," he said, "that when it comes to steerin' clear of federal men, I don't want no instructions from nobody! We got every man in this state spotted. Every one that can be fixed is fixed—and that goes for the legislators and politicians clear up the line! Tell your boss to handle the local gov'ment as well as I handle other things, and he'll do all that's necessary. What he'd ought to attend to, for one thing, is this here guy who calls himself the Midnight Masquer. I've told him before that this guy was playing h—l with my system! This Masquer gets no protection, see? The quicker Fell goes after him the better for all concerned—"

Chacherre laughed, not without a swagger.

"We've attended to all that, Izzy—we've dropped on him and settled him! The guy was doin' it for a carnival joke, that's all. His loot is all goin' back to the owners today. It needn't worry you, anyhow! There was nothin' much to it—jewelry that couldn't be disposed of, for the most part. We couldn't take chances on that sort o' junk."



We've Attended to All That, Izzy—We've Dropped on Him and Settled Him!"

"I should say not." Gumberts regarded him with a scowl. "You've got the stuff?"

"The boss has. Look here, Izzy, I want you to use a little influence with headquarters on this deal—the boss doesn't want to show his hand there," and leaning forward, Ben Chacherre spoke in a low tone. Then, Gumberts heard him out, chuckled, and nodded assent.

At two that afternoon Henry Gramont was summoned to the telephone. He was greeted by a voice which he did not recognize, but which announced itself promptly.

"This is Mr. Gramont? Police headquarters speakin'. You laid a charge this morning against a fellow named Chacherre?"

"Yes," answered Gramont.

"Must ha' been some mistake, then," came the response. "We thought the prints fitted, but found later they didn't. We looked up the Chacherre guy and found he was workin' steady and strictly O. K. What's more to the point, he proved up a dead sure alibi for the other night."

"Oh!" said Gramont. "Then there's nothing to be done?"

"Not yet. We're workin' on it, and maybe we'll have some news later. Goodby."

Gramont hung up the receiver, a puzzled frown creasing his brow. But, after a minute, he laughed softly—a trace of anger in the laugh.

"Ah!" he murmured. "I congratulate you on your efficiency, Mr. Fell! But now wait a little—and we'll meet again. I think I'm getting somewhere at last, and I'll have a surprise for you one of these days!"

CHAPTER VII.

In the Open.

In New Orleans the carnival season is always opened by the ball of the Twelfth Night Revelers soon after Christmas, and is closed by that of the Krewe of Comus on Mardi Gras night. Upon this evening of "Fat Tuesday," indeed, both Rex and Comus hold forth. Rex is the popular ball, the affair of the people, and is held in the Athenaeum. From here, about midnight, the king and queen proceed to Comus ball.

Comus is an assembly of such rigid exclusiveness that even the tickets to the gallery are considered social prizes. The personae of the Krewe, on this particular year, as in all previous ones, would remain unknown; there is no unmasking at Comus. This institution, a tremendous social power and potentially a financial power also, during decades of the city's life, is held absolutely above any taint of favoritism or commercialism. Even the families of those concerned might not always be certain whether their sons and brothers belonged to the Krewe of Comus.

Henry Gramont did not attend the ball of Proteus on Monday night. Instead, he sat in his own room, while through the streets of the French quarter outside was raging the carnival at its height. Before him were maps and reports upon the gas and oil fields about Bayou Terrebonne—fields where great domes of natural gas were already located and in use, and where oil was being found in some quantity. Early on Wednesday morning Gramont intended to set forth to his work. He had been engaged to make a report to Bob Maillard's company, and he would make it. Then he would resign his advisory job, and be free. A smile curled his lips as he thought of young Maillard and the company.

"The young gentleman will be sadly surprised to discover that I've gotten out from under—and that his respected father holds my stock!" he reflected. "That was a good deal; I lost a thousand to old Maillard in order to have the balance of thirty thousand!"

A knock at his door interrupted the thread of his thought. Gramont opened, to find the concierge with a note which had been left at the door below by a masked Harlequin, who had then disappeared without awaiting any reply.

Gramont recognized the writing on the envelope, and hastened to the note inside. His face changed, however, as he read it:

"Please call promptly at eleven tomorrow morning. I wish to see you upon a matter of business.

"LUCIE LEDANOIS."

Gramont gazed long at this note, his brows drawn down into a harsh line. It was not like Lucie in its tone, somehow; he sensed something amiss, something vaguely but mostly decidedly out of tune. "Eleven tomorrow morning, eh?" he murmured. "That's queer, too, for she's to be at the Proteus ball tonight. Most girls would not be conducting business affairs at eleven in the morning, after being up all night at Proteus! It must be something important. Besides, she's not in a class with anyone else. She's a rare girl; no nonsense in her—full of a deep, strong sense of things—"

He forced himself from thoughts of Lucie, forced himself from her personality, and returned to his reports with an effort of concentration.

When Gramont went to bed that night it was with a startling and audacious scheme well defined in his brain; a scheme whose first conception seemed ludicrous and impossible, yet which, on second consideration, appeared in a very different light. It deserved serious thought—and Gramont had made his decision before he went to sleep.

The following day was Tuesday—Mardi Gras, Shrove Tuesday, the last day before Lent began, and the final culminating day of carnival. Henry Gramont, however, was destined to find little in its beginning of much personal pleasure.

At eleven in the morning Hammond drove him to the Ledanois home, where Gramont was admitted by one of the colored servants and shown into the parlor. A moment later Lucie herself appeared. At first glance her smiling greeting removed the half-sensed apprehensions of Gramont. Almost immediately afterward, however, he noted a perceptible change in her manner, as she led him toward the rear of the room, and gestured toward a mahogany tilt-top table which stood in a corner.

"Come over here, please. I have something which I wish to show you."

She needed to say no more. Gramont, following her, found himself staring blankly down at the symbol of consternation which overwhelmed him. For upon that table lay all those boxes which he himself had packed with the loot of the Midnight Masquer—the identical boxes, apparently unopened, which had been stolen from his automobile by the supposed thief, Chacherre!

"Tell me, Henry Gramont, what mad impulse brought you to all this?"

SUCH PAINS AS THIS WOMAN HAD

Two Months Could Not Turn in Bed. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Finally Restored Health

Seattle, Washington.—"I had dragging pains first and could not stand on my feet, then I had chills and fever and such pains in my right side and a hard lump there. I could not turn myself in bed and could not sleep. I was this way for over two months, trying everything any one told me, until my sister brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it regularly until all the hard pains had left me and I was able to be up and to do my work again. The hard lump left my side and I feel splendid in all ways. I know of many women it has helped."—Mrs. G. RICHARDSON, 4640 Orcas St., Seattle, Washington.

This is another case where Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought results after "trying everything any one told me" had failed.

If you are suffering from pain, nervousness and are always tired; if you are low spirited and good for nothing, take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. You may not only relieve the present distress, but prevent the development of more serious trouble.

STEADY LINE OF PROMOTION

From Despised "Whiteseed" Visitor's Flowers Advanced to Dignity of "Lovely Marguerites."

One morning a summer resident started from Coolbeigh with a bunch of flowers in her hand.

"Going to tote that whiteseed into the city?" inquired the man who drove her to the station, with evident scorn.

"Yes," said the young woman, quite unmoved by his opinion.

On the train she was joined by another young woman, who had formerly lived in the city, but had married a Coolbeigh man a few years before.

"Those are pretty daisies you have," she said tolerantly.

"Yes, I think they are," said the summer visitor, smiling to herself.

An hour later she handed the flowers to a friend in a busy city office.

"Oh, what lovely marguerites," cried the recipient.—Exchange.

A Thousand a Day Now Buy Chevrolet
The New Superior Chevrolet is the most satisfactory low priced, fully equipped, most economically operated automobile in the world today.
This year's motor car buyers have recognized this fact to such an extent that 1922 has seen Chevrolet become the largest producer of high-grade automobiles in the world.
The New Superior Chevrolet has many improved features. It has a new front axle assembly, a new rear axle assembly including spiral ring and pinion gears. The clutch has been improved. In addition to its service brake, a hand-lever emergency brake has been provided. The front and rear springs have been re-graded to give easier riding.
With such improvements the New Chevrolet is indeed superior—superior in first price because no car of similar equipment and quality can be bought for less—superior in maintenance cost because it has the lowest cost of operation of any car built.
Comparisons Sell Chevrolet

RESUME RAIL ROAD PARLEY

Peace Negotiations Halted Over Week End But Renewed With Much Vigor.

STATEMENT REFUSED

Early Peace is Looked for in Railway Strike—Shopmen Are Out in Two North Dakota Towns.

Chicago—Peace negotiations, halted over the week-end, were resumed by members of the United States Railroad Labor board in an effort to bring about an early settlement of the railway shopmen's strike.

W. H. Finley, president of the Chicago and Northwestern and W. G. Bierd, president of the Chicago and Alton, were among the railway chiefs who visited the offices of the labor board during the day for conferences with Ben Hooper, chairman of the board, while Walter L. McMenimen, a labor member of the board, met several high operating executives.

While none of those present would make any statement regarding the subjects discussed, it was intimated some basis for agreement on the five demands presented by B. M. Jewell, leader of shopment, to Mr. Hooper, at a conference between the two last week was sought as preliminary to the calling of a new formal hearing of all parties before the labor board.

Quit at Mandan.

Twenty-one stationary firemen, engineers and oilers stopped work in the Northern Pacific shops here.

N. D. ABLE TO FURNISH COAL

Williston District Alone Can Supply Coal Needs for Entire Northwest.

Williston—Williston district alone can on short notice supply the coal needs of the entire Northwest.

A survey here established that if existing mines in this immediate vicinity were worked to capacity, thousands of tons of lignite could be shipped from here daily.

Maximum production could be maintained for years, because the coal resources of this district are practically unlimited. Every acre contains thousands of tons of coal. Only the upper veins of which have been touched.

Little Operation On.

In addition to the government mine, the product of which is used exclusively for operating the power plant of the United States reclamation service, there is only one mine of importance being operated here at the present time—the Williston Coal and Ice Company mine with facilities for mining and shipping 500 tons of coal a day.

The Black Diamond coal mine turned over to a few miners is turning out from 20 to 25 tons a day for local use.

Could Operate Full Bast.

N. B. Ludowese, president of the company says that within 60 days it could be operating at a full capacity and it undoubtedly contains millions of tons of fuel. Plans are being made for reopening of the Brueger mine at Avoca, closed for six yeas for lack of capital. The coal will be briquetted. The property consists of 240 acres convenient to the Great Northern railroad. The Ellithrope mine, operating at a capacity of 50 tons daily, could be increased to 100 tons. Square Deal now produces 25 tons daily.

4 ARE KILLED IN GUNFIGHT

Civilians Fight With Officers; Many Are Hurt; Four Killed.

Wellsburg, W. Va.—With 43 prisoners in custody, three in Wheeling hospitals, 15 in the Ohio county jail there, and 25 in jail here, deputy sheriffs armed with 200 "John Doe" warrants charging murder are scouring the county as far as the Pennsylvania border, and a large force of state police and deputies guarding the striking miners' tent colony at Cliftonville, where a battle between a sheriff's force and a large crowd of men resulted in the death of at least four men and the wounding of others, the situation in Brooke county was tense.

The gun fight raged for more than an hour at daybreak around the Clifton mine of the Richland Coal company at Cliftonville, 10 miles from here.

Sheriff H. H. Duval, who led his little band of deputies against a large crowd of men, said to have crossed from the union coal field of Pennsylvania, was among those dead. The others are: Francis Millch, Monnessen, Pa.; Crook; an unidentified man.

Bandit Gang Is Broken.

St Paul—With the shooting of one bandit and the capture of another during an attempt to blow the safe of the Park theater, at Park and Snelling avenues, St. Paul, police believe they have broken up a gang of shotgun bandits which for the past month has been staging raids in the twin cities almost nightly. The wounded bandit, who was identified as J. C. Ryan, was shot by Patrolman Ethan Allen, who has been stationed in the theater with a sawed off shotgun.

Children Cry For Fletcher's CASTORIA
Special Care of Baby.
That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.
Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.
A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.
Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

HAPPY IN THEIR IGNORANCE

Tribe of South American Indians Don't Know Meaning of the Words "Worry" or "Care."

No one with authority, no apparent government, no ceremonies, no religion, a carefree people, always smiling, jolly, with nothing to be jolly about. These are some of the main characteristics of a newly discovered pygmy race of naked red-skinned South American Indians, four feet high, who inhabit the mountain border of Colombia and Venezuela.

Details of this strange tribe are given in the World's Work by George P. Busch, who, with a party of oil prospectors, were the first white men —with the exception of a Spanish padre—ever seen by the tribe.

Of the world outside they know nothing and have no curiosity.

The bow and arrow is their only weapon, carried by the men wherever they go, because they never go anywhere except to get food. Wading into the water, they wait for a fish to hover near; like a flash, they pierce it with an arrow.

Being a dead one is a slow way of getting a living.

The New Version.

A very sarcastic spinster and her niece were passing the theater when "The Man From Home" was being shown not long ago. The niece stopped a minute to look at the pictures and the aunt sharply asked her what was the matter. "Oh, I wished to see who played the leading part," she said.

"Booth Tarkington, of course," the spinster snapped back.

But the niece shook her head. "I thought he wrote it," she said. "I'm sure he did."

"Of course he did," her aunt snapped. "Didn't you ever know he wrote the scenario so that he'd have a chance to get on the stage?"

The niece was silent.—Indianapolis News.

No Artists Wanted.

Throughout Old Lyme and Hamburg, Conn., you are welcome to wander over farm property—unless you are an artist. Signs everywhere forbid artists to trespass; the reason given is that many cows have been poisoned by paint-incrusted rags thrown away by the colorists.—Scientific American.

Notice of Mortgage Foreclosure Sale

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage, executed by A. S. Chase, Mortgagor, to John C. Arvidson, Mortgagee, dated on the 1st day of January, 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 84, of Mortgages on Page 262 thereof.

That such default consists in the non-payment, when due, of the principal sum of Seventeen Hundred, ($1700.00) Dollars, which fell due January 1st, 1922, and the interest thereon, of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1921 and interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1922. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is the sum of Nineteen Hundred Sixty and 63-100 ($1960.63) Dollars.

That the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in Marshall County, Minnesota, and described as follows: The South Half of Southeast Quarter (S1-2SE1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-eight (28) and the West Half of the Southwest Quarter (W1-2 SW1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-seven (27), all of the above being in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North of Range Numbered Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian and containing One Hundred Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government Survey thereof.

That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Marshall County, Minnesota, at the West front door of the Marshall County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 1st day of August, A. D., 1922, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five ($75.00) Dollars Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage.

H. M. Olson left Friday for Callo, N. Dak., to work during harvesting and threshing.

Miss Swanhild Rasmussen of Fargo came Monday to visit Miss Hilma Nyberg.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden entertained three auto loads of relatives from Fertile Sunday.

Don't fail to attend the county fair at Thief River Falls next week. They promise a fine program.

No man is stronger than his stomach. Tanlac will make your stomach strong. C. H. Gunheim.

Chas. Horien and little girl and his sister, Blanche of Strathcona visited home folks last week Thursday.

Mrs. Paul Lund and baby returned to Detroit Monday after a visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Olson.

Racine Olson, Ole Hamernes, Oliver Davidson, Hans Hanson and Jesse Sorum attended the fair at Grand Forks Monday.

O. C. Johnson accompanied by his cousin, Olaf Hanson of Badger, went to Detroit Tuesday for a weeks stay in camping and fishing.

Holt is to be visited Monday afternoon and evening by a traveling show that claims to furnish good clean entertainment for both old and young.

Mrs. T. Hofek and two children returned Monday to the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Torger Ness, after spending sometime in Thief River Falls.

Good sized crowds were out Monday afternoon and evening to attend the demonstrations given by the state public health nurse, Miss Westehoff.

John Hagberg came home from Grand Forks Friday as the big state mill he had been working on is now completed. On Wednesday he went to Badger to do some carpenter work on an elevator in that little city.

Mrs. Burr and two little sons of Spokane, Wash. and Mrs. Green of Lovel, Wyoming came Friday to visit their brother, Ludwig Monson and family. All of them went to Randen Sunday to visit their father, Ed. Monson and family.

Visiting Day at the Golden Valley experimental peat farm gave people plenty of opportunity to see the advantage of using phosphate.

Dr. Alway said that from 400,000 to 600,000 acres of peat lands in Northern Minnesota will be reclaimed within a few years. He recommends the keeping of more dairy cows and rotation of crops.

W. C. T. U. Convention

Two auto loads of Holt ladies attended the Woman's Christian Temperance Union Convention at Warren Wednesday afternoon. The day was ideal over head and most of the road was in splendid shape. One of the interesting features of the afternoon was the opportunity and privilege given the ladies to witness the impressive ceremony at the court house, when about forty candidates of Scandinavian, Russian, Polish and Canadian nationality, took the oath of allegiance to the United States. Mrs. Sizer, the State President of the W. C. T. U. gave a fine address to the applicants for citizenship as did also several others of Warren. The convention of Tuesday and Wednesday was full of helpfullness and inspiration for every one present.

The W. C. T. Union of Warren gave the Holt Union a most hearty reception, providing a delicious dinner on our arrival and later icecream and cake was served which everyone appreciated. The next annual district convention will be held at Thief River Falls.

Holt is going to have a tent show next Monday afternoon and night.

Mrs. M. T. Strom has been on the sick list but is slowly getting better.

J. M. Swan shipped a car of sheep from Steiner and a car of cattle from Holt Saturday to market.

Next week Wednesday, Thursday and Friday are the days of the big fair in Thief River Falls. Let's go.

The safest and surest way back to health, strength and happiness is by the Tanlac route. C. H. Gunheim.

A big well drilling machine was shipped here Friday and workmen have commenced drilling the well for the railroad comprny.

We can get our subscribers The Youth's Companion for three months ("the Lucky Thirteen" weeks) for fifty cents, for new subscribers, but all subscriptions must commence on August 1st.

Among those who were awarded citizenship papers at Warren Wednesday were: Mr. and Mrs Joseph Jarland and Algot Skoglund of Holt, Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Moberg, Oscar Norbeck and Carl Johnson of Mud Lake.

The Interstate Commerce Commission declares an emergency exists, because of the rail and coal strikes, and have imposed war time regulations on transportation of the necessities of life. This practically gives the government control of the railroads, and they are likely to take charge of the coal mines, if the strike is'nt soon settled.

An unsigned item has been mailed us stating "There will be services in the East Valley school house Sunday July 30th, at 11 o'clock, by Rev. Clinton Cook of Thief River Falls." Please bear in mind that all items for publication should be signed to show the good faith of the writer, but the writers name will not be printed.

Eighteen passenger trains were taken off Minnesota railroads last week by the Great Northern. Monday they commenced running mixed trains on this division. These mixed trains are run on the regular freight schedule and it is not always certain just when they are going to arrive at the stations.

The coal strike and the consequent shortage of coal, as much as the railroad strike, has caused the curtailment of train service all over the United States.

A Fortune For Every Farmer

TECKTONIUS SILO

WITH the discovery of the wonderful feeding value of the easily grown, yet lowly sunflower with the proper kind of a silo to store and ferment it in, one of the greatest money and labor saving avenues have been opened to the American farmer that has ever been known.

Thousands of farmers are cashing in on this knowledge. They have learned that with this succulent and low cost ensilage when stored in a silo constructed with our quality staves and their saving has been trebled. And not only that, but their profits from milk and butter have been greatly increased.

This combination gives you a silo with the famous TECKTONIUS perfect fitting hinged silo door which always insures air tightness, the wonderful TECKTONIUS Self-adjusting Straight Pull hoop fastener that automatically cares for all contraction and expansion of silo, the incomparable TECKTONIUS anchorage system that insures rigidity at all times and a host of other special features that make the TECKTONIUS stand supreme among silos.

Come in and get our book "Perfect Silage" and let us tell you more about the wonderful possibilities of sunflowers as a profitable feed. You'll readily see why you should start a sunflower crop of your own and erect a TECKTONIUS silo.

WILL ANSWER ANY WOMAN WHO WRITES

Woman Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Makes This Offer

Cumberland, Md.—"My mother gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was between thirteen and fourteen years old and was going to school, because I suffered with pains and could not rest. I did not have any more trouble after that until I was married, then I always was troubled in my back while carrying a child and could not do my work until I took the Vegetable Compound. I am strong, do all my washing and ironing and work for seven children and feel fine. I always have an easy time at childbirth and what it did for me it will do for other women. I am willing to answer any woman if she will write asking what it did for me."—Mrs. JOHN HEIER, 53 Dilley St., Cumberland, Md.

During girlhood and later during motherhood Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought relief to Mrs. Heier. Her case is but one of many we constantly publish recommending our Vegetable Compound. She is willing to answer your letter. Write to her.

ARE YOU GIVING OUT?

Does every day mean just another day of suffering? Are you lame, stiff and achy—tortured with a nerve-racking backache? Surely there's a reason why you feel so badly and likely it's weakened kidneys. When the kidneys fail, poisons accumulate and upset the whole system. That's why you have constant backache and sharp, stabbing twinges. You may have headaches, nervous and dizzy spells with annoying bladder irregularities. Don't risk serious kidney disease. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

"UPON MY HONOR!"

SYNOPSIS.—During the height of the New Orleans carnival season Jachin Fell, wealthy though somewhat mysterious citizen, and Dr. Ansley, are discussing a series of robberies by an individual known as the Midnight Masquer, who, invariably attired as an aviator, has long defied the police. Joseph Maillard, wealthy banker, is giving a ball that night, at which the Masquer has threatened to appear and rob the guests. Fell and Ansley, on their way to the affair, meet a girl dressed as Columbine, seemingly known to Fell, but masked, who accompanies them to the ball. Lucie Ledanois, recently the ward of her uncle, Joseph Maillard, is the Columbine. At the ball, Bob Maillard, son of the banker, again proposes to her and is refused. He offers to buy some of her property. A Franciscan monk interests her. He turns out to be Prince Gramont. In his library Joseph Maillard and a group of his friends are held up and robbed by the Midnight Masquer. Lucie Ledanois, the last of an old family, is in straitened circumstances. Joseph Maillard's handling of her funds has been unfortunate. Fell is an old friend of her parents and deeply interested in the girl. Henry Gramont, really the Prince de Gramont, is enamored of Lucie. Lucie talks with Fell about her affairs and the Masked Masquer. Gramont's chauffeur, Hammond, sergeant in the A. E. F., lives with him. He was the original Midnight Masquer, and Gramont had assumed the role. Where Hammond had been a robber for financial gain, Gramont, of course, is not. He arranges to return the "loot" to those whom he has robbed. Gramont and Hammond put the jewels and money in individual packages to be returned the next day. An explanation is inclosed in each. Ben Cacherre, an individual of unsavory character, appears to be associated with Jachin Fell. He has a peculiar interview with one Memphis Izzy Gumberts, notorious influential crook, in which there is significant reference to a mysterious "boss." Lucie summons Gramont to her home.

For a moment Gramont found himself unable to speak. He was thunderstruck by the sight of those unmistakable boxes. A glance at the calm features of the girl showed him that there was nothing to be concealed from her, even had he wished it. He was further stunned by this realization. He could not understand how the packages had come here. Recovering his voice with an effort, he managed to break the heavy silence.

"Well? I suppose you know what is in those parcels?"

She nodded. "Yes. One of them was opened, and the note inside was discovered. Of course, it gave a general explanation. Will you sit down, please? I think that we had better talk it over quietly and calmly."

Gramont obeyed, and dropped into a chair.

He was absurdly conscious of his own confusion. How had Lucie come into the affair? This staggered him above all else. Was she behind the theft of the loot? It must be. How long had she suspected him, then? He had thought Jachin Fell the sole danger point—he had never dreamed that this gray-eyed Athene could be tracing down the Masquer! He tried to visualize the situation more clearly and his brain whirled. He knew, of course, that she was fairly intimate with Fell, but he was not aware of any particular connection—

He glanced up at her suddenly, and surprised a glint of laughter in her eyes as she watched him.

"You seem to be rather astonished," she observed.

"I am." Gramont drew a deep breath. "You—do you know that those boxes were taken from my car?"

She nodded again. "Certainly. They were brought to me."

"Then you had someone on my trail?" Gramont flushed a little as he put the question to her.

"No. I have been chosen to settle affairs with you, that is all. It has been learned from the note in the opened box that you were not criminal in what you did."

She leaned forward, her deep eyes searching him with a steady scrutiny.

"Tell me, Henry Gramont, what mad impulse brought you to all this? Was it a silly, boyish effort to be romantic—was it a mere outburst of bravado? It was not for the sake of robbery, as the note explained very clearly. But why, then? Why? There must have been a definite reason in your mind. You would not have taken such dangerous chances unless you had something to gain!"

Gramont nodded slightly. A slight smile touched his lips. "You're not going to send me to prison, I trust?"

"I ought to!" The girl broke into a laugh. "Why, I can hardly yet believe that it was really you who were guilty of those things! It mortified me, it stunned me—until I realized the truth from the note. Even the fact that you did not do it for criminal ends does not relieve the sheer folly of the act. Why did you do it? Come, tell me the truth!"

Gramont shrugged. "The truth? Well, my chauffeur, Hammond, was the original Masquer. I caught him in the act—you remember I told you about him? After taking him into my employ, I became the Masquer."

"Why did you do it?" persisted the girl.

"Call it bravado, my dear Lucie. Call it anything you like—I can't lie to you! I had a motive, and I refuse to admit what it was; that's all."

"Aren't you ashamed of yourself?"

"Not particularly." He smiled. "I had a good end in view, and I accomplished it. Now that I'm all through, now that I've finished playing my little game, you happened to discover it."

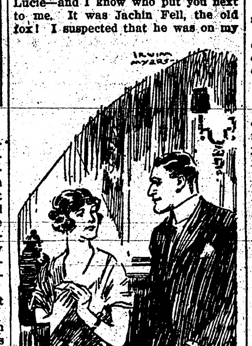
"I think you've been very silly," she said with a disconcerting calmness. He regarded her for a moment, steadily. "And you have displayed a fearful lack of judgment!"

"Silly! Well—perhaps. What are you going to do with those boxes?"

"I'll put them in the mail. I'm going downtown for luncheon, and will do it then. They'll be delivered this afternoon."

He nodded. "I had meant to have them delivered tomorrow; it makes no difference. You're the boss. It will give the good people a little more reason for jubilation tonight, eh?"

A sudden laugh broke upon his lips. "I'm beginning to see the humor of it, Lucie—and I know who put you next to me. It was Jachin Fell, the old fox! I suspected that he was on my trail, and I thought that he had managed the theft of those boxes. In fact, I was preparing to give him a big surprise this afternoon. But tell me, Lucie—are you angry?"



"No—Oil Is No Woman's Game, Unless She Can Afford to Lose."

She looked at him steadily for a space, then a swift smile leaped to her lips and she extended a pardoning hand. Her gesture and words were impulsive, sincere.

"Angry? No. I think you've some good reason behind it all, which you won't confide to me. I can read you pretty clearly, Henry Gramont; I think I can understand some things in you. You're no weakling, no romantic, filibustering crackbrain. And I like you because you won't lie to me. You've a motive and you refuse to tell it—very well! I'll be just as frank and say that I'm not a bit angry. So, that's settled!

"Now what was the big surprise that you just mentioned you were going to give poor Mr. Fell this afternoon?"

Gramont's eyes twinkled. "You remember that I thought he suspected me of being the Masquer? Well, I was going to him to propose that we enter business together."

"Oh! As bandits?"

"No, as oil promoters. I'm out of Maillard's company, or shall be out of it soon. The minute I'm out, I'll be free to go into business for myself. It occurred to me that if Jachin Fell had brains enough to run down the Midnight Masquer, he would be a mighty good business partner; because I'm poor on business detail. Also, I think Fell is to be trusted. He's very strong politically, I have found—although few people know it."

"But he's not interested in oil, is he?"

"I don't know; I take for granted that he's interested in making money. Most men are. The only way to make money in oil is to have money—and he has some! I have a little. I can put in twenty-five thousand. With an equal amount from him, we can sink a couple of wells, perhaps three. If we go broke, all right. If we find oil, we're rich!"

"But, my dear Henry, if he knew you to be the Midnight Masquer, do you think he'd want to go into business with you?"

"Why not?" Gramont laughed. "If he knew that I had brains enough to pull off that stunt and keep all New Orleans up in the air—wouldn't I make a good partner? Besides, I believe I have some notion where to go after oil; I'm going to examine your land first—"

"My good prince, you surely have no lack of audacity!" She broke into a peal of laughter. "Your argument about inducing Mr. Fell to go into business with you is naive—"

"But, as an argument, isn't is quite sound?"

"Possibly. Since it is Lucie Ledanois and not Jachin Fell who has brought you to a confession of your crimes against society—aren't you going to propose that she go into business with you? Doesn't the argument hold good with her?"

"No. Oil is no woman's game, unless she can well afford to lose. I imagine that you cannot, Lucie."

"You're right, I can't put in any money. I'm land poor. Unless I were to sell that Bayou Terrebonne land—it's an old farm, abandoned since before father died—"

"Don't sell it!" he exclaimed, quickly. "Don't consider any dealings with it until I have looked it over, will you?"

"Since you ask it, no. If there's gas near by, there must be oil."

"Who knows?" he shrugged. "No one can predict oil."

"Then you still mean to go to Jachin Fell with your scheme?"

Gramont nodded. "Yes. See here, Lucie—it's about noon! Suppose you come along and lunch with me at the Louisiane, if you've no engagement. We can put those boxes in the mail en route, and after luncheon I'll try and get hold of Fell."

She put her head on one side and studied him reflectively.

"You're sure you'll not kidnap me or anything like that? It's risky to become a friend of hardened criminals, even if one is trying to uplift them."

"Good! You'll come?"

"If you can give me ten minutes—"

"My dear Lucie, you are the most charming object in New Orleans at this minute! Why attempt to make yourself still more attractive? Gilding the lily is an impossible task."

"Well, wait for me. Is your car here? Good! I want to see Hammond's face when he sees us carrying out those boxes."

Laughing, the girl started toward the stairs. At the doorway she paused.

"One thing, M. le prince! Do you solemnly promise, upon your honor, that the Midnight Masquer is dead forever?"

"Upon my honor!" said Gramont, seriously. "The farce is ended, Lucie."

"All right. I'll be right down. Smoke if you like—"

In her own room upstairs Lucie closed the door and sat down before her dressing table. She made no move toward the array of toilet articles, however. Instead, she took a desk telephone from the table, and called a number. In a moment she received a response.

"Uncle Jachin!" she exclaimed. "Yes—it's just as we thought; it's all a joke. No, it was not a joke, either, because he had some motive behind it, but he won't tell me what it was. I'm terribly glad that you opened one of those boxes and found the letter—if you had gone to the police it would have been perfectly dreadful—"

"I never go to the police," said Jachin Fell with his dry chuckle. "You are quite satisfied that there is nothing serious in the affair, then?"

"Absolutely! He told me that he had accomplished his purpose, whatever it was, and that it's all ended. He just gave me his word that the Masquer was dead forever. Now, aren't you glad that you confided in me?"

"Very," said Jachin Fell. "Very glad, indeed!"

"Now you're laughing at me—never mind! We're going to lunch downtown, and we'll mail those boxes on the way, by parcels post. Is that all right?"

"Quite all right, my dear. Did your gown come for tonight?"

"It's to come this afternoon."

> "I don't care to have you offer any reflections on my actions, Maillard," said Gramont, evenly.

STREETS "LIT BY SMOKE."

It was on January 28, 1807, that Pall Mall was lit by gas—the first street in any city in the world to adopt the new illuminant. The cartoonists of the period drew pictures which represented people choked by the fumes of the new illuminant, and all manner of ridiculous stories were circulated about it. Sir Walter Scott wrote from London that "there was a madman proposing to light London with—what do you think?—why, with smoke." Sir Humphry Davy is also credited with giving the opinion that it would be as easy to bring down a bit of the moon to light London as to succeed in doing so with gas.—London Tit-Bits.

DON'T OBSERVE 8-HOUR DAY

Law Is No Longer Popular With Workmen in Hamburg, Germany, Says Writer.

Keener competition is causing a decided swing away from many postwar pet ideas in Germany. Even the eight-hour law is no longer popular, Frederick Simpich writes in Our World. The labor inspection bureau in a recent report pictures the trouble its enforcement is bringing as Hamburg's economic condition improved. Employers complain that laborers of both sexes, after an eight hour day, undertake to do outside work for other people—which cuts down their efficiency on their regular job. Workers, on the other hand, consider it an interference with their personal liberty if their employers try to hold them to the eight-hour plan. Although the law was passed to safeguard the health of the workers, they appear to have lost sight of its real intention, and the authorities show reluctance to prosecute cases of its violation. In the hotels and cafes, especially, it has been difficult to enforce the eight-hour day; waiters are loath to give up their chances for more tips during overtime.

GETS CLOCK, BUT NOT "TIME"

Court Robbed of Imposing Timepiece Under Its Very Eyes and With Its Permission.

Thousands of law-breakers have been given "time" at Berlin's central criminal court in Moabit, but recently an ingenious crook posing as a repair man actually was given the court's official clock and that while a case was being tried.

The sitting was well under way when a man in working clothes entered the courtroom with a long ladder which he calmly placed under the huge, imposing timepiece on the wall. The judge, counsel, accused and spectators were astonished as such an unprecedented interruption. The president stopped the workman's ascent of his ladder long enough to inquire the meaning of his conduct. The visitor explained that he merely wanted to get the clock for repair and that it would take only a moment. The president objected, but consented when the man said he already had called six times and always found the court in session.

The vacant space on the wall surprised the janitor later in the day, and his investigations revealed that the court had been robbed under its very eyes, in fact, with its permission.

ASSYRIANS NOT SO ROUGH

Were More Humane Than Popularly Fabled, Says Professor Who Has Studied Their Laws.

The Assyrian is popularly recalled as coming down "like a wolf on the fold." But one provision of the Assyrian code of laws indicates that the Assyrians are more humane than they are popularly fabled. This requires that the destitute widow be supported by her sons "as the bride whom one loves."

Instead of the Assyrians being wholly abject, their letters, says Prof. A. F. Olmstead, of the University of Illinois, show high officials speaking their minds with the greatest plainness, the kings making pathetic appeals to those whose support they would win. Their imperial free cities were as free as those in western Europe in the Middle ages, with charters of freedom from corners of the earth and to all tongues.

"Yep," replied Sam. "You?"

"Nope," answered Sim. "You're a lucky dog. 'Tain't good for a man to live alone."

"No-o-o," drawled Sam somewhat dubiously. "Prob-ly not, but sometimes I'd be willing to try it."

Back to the Grain Fields for Health

GRAPE-NUTS is a regular "three bags full" of the best food qualities of whole wheat flour and malted barley, carefully mixed and slowly baked—

To develop all their appetizing flavor,

To preserve all their wholesomeness,

And to provide nature's "broom" that keeps the digestive system spick and span.

There's not a bit of artificial sweetening in Grape-Nuts—it just becomes sweet of its own accord in the long baking.

And that enticing flavor—how good it is with good milk or cream! Fruits, too, fresh or cooked, add to the delight of a dish of Grape-Nuts, morning, noon or sundown.

It is a compact, ready-to-eat food—no cooking needed. Why not try it for tomorrow's breakfast?

Notice is hereby given, that default has been made in the conditions of a mortgage, executed by A. S. Chase, Mortgagor, to John C. Arvidson, Mortgagee, dated on the 1st day of January, 1917, and recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds of Marshall County Minnesota, on the 17th day of February, 1917, at 8 o'clock A. M., in Book 94, of Mortgages on Page 262 thereof.

That such default consists in the non-payment, when due, of the principal sum of Seventeen Hundred, ($1700.00) Dollars, which fell due January 1st, 1922, and the interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1921 and interest thereon of One Hundred Two ($102.00) Dollars which fell due January 1st, 1922. That the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at this date is the sum of Nineteen Hundred Sixty and 63-100 ($1960.63) Dollars.

That the premises described in and covered by said mortgage are situated in Marshall County, Minnesota, and described as follows: The South Half of Southeast Quarter (S1-2SE1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-eight (28) and the West Half of the Southwest Quarter (W1-2 SW1-4) of Section numbered Twenty-seven (27), all of the above being in Township numbered One Hundred Fifty-five (155) North of Range Numbered Forty-four (44) West of the Fifth Principal Meridian and containing One Hundred Sixty (160) acres, more or less, according to the United States Government Survey thereof.

That by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by the sale of said premises, at public vendue, to the highest bidder for cash, by the sheriff of Marshall County, Minnesota, at the West front door of the Marshall County Court House in the City of Warren, in said County and State, on the 1st day of August, A. D., 1922, at ten o'clock A. M., to satisfy the amount then due on said mortgage, together with the costs of such sale and Seventy-five ($75.00) Dollars Attorney's fees as stipulated in and by said mortgage.

Dated June 10th, 1922

Thos. Dahm arrived home Monday from Ellendale where he has been having employment. We understand he expects to soon move his family to that place.

Ben Nyberg came home Monday night from Hillsboro for a few days vacation, while waiting for some repairs for the dredge which he is running.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Anderson entertained on Sunday her mother and little brother, of Forest River, N. Dak., also her sister and husband, Mr. and Mrs. Wilson of Minneapolis.

Mr. and Mrs. Selmer Reierson returned home Wednesday night from Minneapolis and McIntosh. Mrs. R. Reierson stopped at Thief River Falls to visit her daughter, Mrs. Andrew Ness.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sorum attended the silver wedding of her sister at Larimore, N. D., Sunday. They also visited at the Tony Anderson home in Arvilla before returning on Monday.

We publish the June report of the Holt creamery, this week, containing the names of sixty-five farmers who sold more than a hundred pounds of butterfat for that month. We wish the list was twice as large as our country needs more dairy cows. Some say that means lots of hard work, and that is true, but ask the farmers of Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa what is the surest crop in their states and they will tell you it is the crop produced by the dairy cow.

"Very well. Do not plan to wear any jewels, Lucie. I have a set to lend you for the occasion—no, not a gift, merely a loan for the sake of Comus. They are very nice pearls; a little old fashioned, because they were mounted for the Princess de Lamballe, but you will find that they fit in excellently with your gown. I'll bring them with me when I call for you—"

"And I'll tender fitting thanks then. One thing more: Henry Gramont is going to see you after luncheon, I think—on business. And I want you to be nice to him, Uncle Jachin."

"Most assuredly," said the other, dryly. "I should like to be associated in business with that young man. The firm would prosper."

Smiling, she hung up the receiver.

Ten minutes later, when Gramont and Miss Ledanois entered the waiting car, Hammond saw the boxes that they carried. He stood beside the open door, paralyzed, his eyes fastened on the boxes, his mouth agape.

"To the post office, sergeant," said Gramont, then affected to observe his stupefaction. "Why, what's the matter?"

Hammond met his twinkling eyes, saw the laughter of Lucie, and swallowed hard.

"I—er—nothing at all, cap'n," he answered, hoarsely. "A—little chokin' spell, that's all. Post office? Yes, sir."

CHAPTER VIII.

Comus.

From the time they left the Ledanois house with Lucie, Gramont had no opportunity of seeing his chauffeur in private until, later in the afternoon, he left the Maison Blanche building. He had enjoyed a thoroughly satisfactory interview with Jachin Fell. The car was waiting for him in Royal street, not far from the Monteleone, and Gramont approached it to find Hammond in deep worry over the outcome of the interview with Fell.

"Well, cap'n!" he exclaimed, anxiously, as Gramont drew up. "You're smilin', so I guess it ain't a pinch!"

"Don't worry. The stuff is returned, and the matter is now closed. We can forget all about the Midnight Masquer. Now, there's another and more important thing that I want to speak with you about, a matter of business—"

"Hold on, cap'n!" interrupted Hammond, quietly, his eye on a spot behind Gramont. "One of your friends is headed over this way, and if I know anything about it, he's got blood in his eye."

Gramont turned, to see Bob Maillard approaching. The latter addressed him without any response to his greeting.

"Have you a moment to spare, Gramont?"

"All afternoon," answered Gramont, cheerfully. He affected not to observe Maillard's air of heavy business, nor the frowning suspicion that lurked half-veiled in the other's glowering features.

The two were standing a bit apart, and Hammond was fussing with one of the headlights, but Gramont suspected that the chauffeur was listening avidly. "I've just come from a talk with dad. How did it happen that you sold him that stock of yours in the company?"

Gramont smiled a little. "I happened to need the money. Why?"

"But why the devil didn't you hang on to that stock? Or if you needed money, why didn't you come to me?" exploded the other, angrily.

"Heavens!" drawled Gramont, who was quite willing to exasperate young Maillard to the limit. "You seem frightfully concerned about it! What's the big idea, anyway? I offered the stock to your father at a discount. He realized that it was a good buy, and took it. What's wrong with that?"

"Nothing wrong, if you put it that way," snapped Maillard, angrily. "But it's a confounded sly way of doing things—"

"Now, just wait right there!" Gramont's easy smile vanished. "I don't take that kind of talk, Maillard. I'm off in the morning to start work on that report I was engaged to make. When the report comes in, my resignation comes with it."

"All right. Let it come here and now, then." Maillard's tone was ugly. "If you're so blamed anxious to get out of the company, get out!"

"Thanks. I'll be glad to be relieved of the job." Gramont turned and addressed his chauffeur. "Hammond, you'll kindly remember this conversation, in case your future testimony is needed—"

"Confound you, what d'you mean talking that way?" broke out Maillard. "Do you suppose I'll deny firing you?"

"I don't care to have you offer any reflections on my actions, Maillard," said Gramont, evenly. "My course in this matter is perfectly open and above board, which is more than you can say for your doings."

"What?" Maillard clenched his stick and took a forward step, anger working in his face. "What the devil d'you mean?"

"Exactly what I say—and perhaps I can prove it. Remember the oil concern to which you persuaded your precious father to sell some of Miss Ledanois' Bayou land? Remember the real estate company to which you persuaded him to sell her St. Landry parish property? You had interests in both concerns; I don't imagine you'd care to have your share in those transactions exposed. Further, I entirely understand your indignation over my getting rid of this stock before the crash, and it ill becomes you to assume any such attitude."

Maillard glared at him for a long moment, a red tide of rage flooding and ebbing from his heavy countenance. Then, mastering himself, he turned away without further speech.

Leaving Hammond to take the car home, Gramont headed for Canal street to mingle with the carnival crowd and revel in his new-found sense of freedom. Now that he was his own master, he felt like a new man. With a boyish abandon he tramped the streets merrily, exchanging jests and confetti, shoves and bladder-blows, laughs and kisses. Madness and reckless gayety were in the very air, and Gramont drank deep of these youthful tonics. When at last he wandered home to his pension, he was footsore, weary, disarranged and tousled—and very happy. The wine of human comradeship is a good wine.

That evening the Comus ball, the most exclusive revel of the most exclusive aristocracy of the southland, crowded the edifice in which it was held to capacity. Here evening dress was prescribed for all the guests. The Krewe of Comus alone were masked and costumed, in grotesque and magnificent costumes which had been in the making for months. The Krewe is to the South what the Bohemian club is to the western coast, with the added enhancement of mystery.

Despite the revels of the Krewe, however—despite the glittering jewels, the barbaric costumes, the music, the excitement—an indefinable air of regret, almost of sadness, pervaded the entire gathering. This feeling was something to be sensed, rather than observed definitely. Some said, afterward, that it was a premonition of the terrible event that was to happen this night. Wrong! It was because, for the first time in many generations, the Comus ball was held in one of the newer public buildings instead of in its accustomed place. Everyone was speaking of it. Even Maillard the banker, that cold man of dollars, spoke uneasily of it when Gramont encountered him in the smoking room.

"What the Devil D'You Mean?"

"It doesn't seem like Comus," said Maillard, with a vexed frown. "And to think that we had just finished redecorating the opera house when it was burned down! Comus will never be the same again."

"I didn't know you could feel such emotion for a ruined building, Maillard," said Gramont, lightly. The banker shrugged a trifle.

"Emotion? No. Regret! None of us, who has been brought up in the traditions of the city, but regarded the French Opera house as the center of all our storied life. You can't understand it, Gramont; no outsider can. By the way, you haven't seen Bob? He's in costume, but he might have spoken to you—"

Gramont answered in the negative, with a slight surprise at the question.

It was not long before he came to comprehend more fully just what the loss of the old French Opera house meant to the assembly. He heard comparisons made on every hand, regretful allusions, sighs for the days that were no more.

This present building, to be sure, was one of the city's finest, up to date in every way, with an abundance of room—and yet everyone said that Comus would never be the same. About the opera house had clung the romance of many generations. About it, too, had clung the affections of the people with a fierceness beyond reason. More famous buildings had been allowed to go to ruin, like the Hotel Royale, but the opera house had been kept in repair for Mardi Gras. It was itself—a landmark. Nothing else would ever be like it.

From his seat in the Lavergne box Gramont contented himself during the early evening with the common role of all the "blackcoats"—that of looking on idly. More than once he saw Lucie Ledanois called out, among others of the fair sex, as a dancing partner for some member of the Krewe. None of the male guests, however, was allowed to participate in the festivity until Rex and his queen should arrive—at midnight; thus, Gramont saw almost nothing of Lucie during the evening.

While in search of smoking companions, Gramont encountered many of his acquaintances, and among them Doctor Ansley and Jachin Fell. The three strolled off together into one of the unused passages leading to other parts of the building. They opened a window and stood watching the crowd that surged in the street below, constantly increasing as the hour grew later, for the procession of Rex would be well worth seeing and nobody meant to miss anything upon this night of nights.

Suddenly, at the sound of an approaching footstep, the three men turned. The electric lights were going in all of the hallways, and they perceived that the individual approaching them was a member of the Krewe of Comus. He was also, it became evident, giving a share of his allegiance to Bacchus, for his feet were obviously unsteady. He was clad in a particolored costume, which was crowned by an exaggerated head of Mephisto.

"Wonderin' who I am, aren't you!" he hiccuped. "Well, don't wonder; 'sall between ol' friends tonight. Tell you what, m' friends—come with me and I'll find you a li'l drink, eh? Real old Boone pinchneck—got it from some boys in Louisville, been savin' it up for tonight."

He wagged his head at them, and pursued his subject in a half-maudlin burst of confidential assurance.

"Havin' a little party in one of the rooms," he continued. "All of us friends—lots more fun than dancin'! And say! I'm going pull something great, positively great; you don't want to miss it, gentlemen! You come along with me and I'll fix it for you. Come on, Gramont, that's a good fellow! You'n I had a dis'greement today—don't matter tonight, nothin' matters tonight, nothin' at all. Mardi Gras only comes once a year, eh? Come along, now."

Jachin Fell very civilly refused the invitation, as did the others. Gramont, who now recognized their accoster, was less civil in his refusal. Mephisto regarded them with vinous regret.

"No 'joyment in you, any more? Better come along. Tell you, I've got the biggest joke of the season ready to pull off—something rich! Gramont, come on!"

"Thanks, no," responded Gramont curtly.

The masquer gave up the struggle and moved on down the empty hallway.

"I wonder who that was, now?" mused Doctor Ansley, frowning. "Evidently someone who knew us; at least, he recognized you, Gramont."

"So it seemed," put it Jachin Fell. His tone, like his eyes, had a somber fire. "A party of them drinking, eh? That will make trouble. The Krewe won't like it. Who was he, Gramont? Sounded like—"

"Young Maillard." At Gramont's response a whistle broke from Doctor Ansley. Jachin Fell nodded assent.

"You took the words out of my mouth. So Bob is drinking again, eh? Hello, Gramont—where to?"

Gramont tossed his cigar through the open window.

"I think I'll make my adieux, Fell. I intend to be up early in the morning and get off to work—"

"What?" protested Ansley in astonishment. "You must stay until Rex comes, at least! Why, that's the event of the carnival! The evening hasn't started yet."

"I'm growing old and sober, doctor," and Gramont chuckled. "What's more, I was drifting with the crowds all afternoon, and I've just begun to realize that I'm dead tired. Rex or no Rex, I'm afraid I'd best say goodnight, gentlemen."

Returning to the auditorium, Gramont sought out his hosts and made his farewells, although not without encountering some opposition. At length he was free, he had obtained his hat and coat, and as he passed out of the building he again met Fell and Ansley, who were finishing their cigars at the entrance. He bade them a final adieu and plunged into the crowd.

It lacked half an hour of midnight. For a little, Fell and Doctor Ansley stood talking, then tossed away their cigars and turned into the building.

They halted in the foyer before the appearance of two men—Joseph Maillard, looking extremely agitated, and behind him old Judge Forester, who wore a distinctly worried expression.

HARDING OFFERS RAIL PEACE PLAN

President Embodies Five Definite Points in His Compromise Proposal.

TWO MEETINGS HELD

Executives in New York and Striking Unions in Chicago Conferences Consider Suggested Concessions for End of Tie-up.

Cincinnati.—Five specific proposals for the settlement of the railroad strike were contained in President Harding's plan, which was submitted to railroad executives in New York and rail union heads in Chicago.

The five specific proposals, according to an official of the shopcrafts union who had advance information, include:

1.—That the employes will abide by the decisions of the United States railroad labor board in the future.

2.—In the matter of seniority the employes who remained on the job during the strike will receive preferential treatment. Men who have been on strike will return with their seniority rights subject to those rights acquired during the strike by men who remained on the job and that the seniority of the new employes will date from the time they entered the service.

3.—The men will accept the recent wage reductions of the railroad labor board pending a further hearing on the matter by the board.

4.—"Farming out" of shop work by the railroads will be discontinued.

5.—Discussion of the establishment of adjustment boards.

Unions Stress Three Points.

Regarding the matter of adjustment boards the officials stated that the unions desire a national board of adjustment while the railroad executives seek either regional or system boards.

Three points were stressed by the general chairman as a basis for settlement: Restoration of full seniority, national boards of adjustment and elimination of "farming out" of work.

It was stated they would oppose curtailment of seniority, agreement to accept in the future decisions of the board other than national boards of adjustment.

Up to Policy Committee.

It was stated that the matter of accepting the proposals of President Harding is entirely up to the policy committee of the railroad department of the American Federation of Labor since that body was the one which sanctioned the strike of the shopmen. The policy committee is composed of 90 men, 30 from each of the three districts, the dividing lines of which are the Mississippi river and the Mason and Dixon line.

Washington Prepares for Peace.

Washington.—Convinced that the railroad strike would be a matter of history within 24 hours after acceptance by railway shopmen and transportation chiefs of President Harding's compromise plan, all of the government's influence was mustered behind the effort to obtain its adoption by the employers' meeting in New York and that of the employes in Chicago.

DAUGHTER BORN TO WIDOW

Day of Accused Murderer's Release on Bail Marked by Birth.

Amidon, N. D.—The day following the release under $12,000 bail of David McCutchan, charged with first degree murder in connection with the fatal shooting of Walter Inman, young Amidon businessman, on March 28 last, a daughter was born to Mrs. Inman, widow of the slain man. The birth, coming four months after the fatal shooting, leaves the widow with four daughters to support.

Bail bond was signed by J. E. Phelan of Bowman and others. It is said to be the understanding that McCutchan remain on the farm, just north of Amidon, where the family is living.

Admittance to bail of a prisoner charged with murder, attorneys explain, is possible under the change in North Dakota laws imposing life imprisonment instead of capital punishment for murder.

The case, taken from Slope to Stark county on a change of venue, probably will come up at the August term of district court for Stark county.

High First Wheat Yield.

Moorhead, Minn.—Forty bushels to the acre is the average yield of wheat on a six-acre tract on the Schroeder brothers' farm, in Glyndon township, Clay county, County Agent Oscar M. Olson reports. This is believed to be the first wheat threshing of the season and the yield is unusually high.

Burke to Practice in Fargo.

Fargo.—John Burke, former United States treasurer, who recently returned to North Dakota, has decided to make his permanent home in Fargo, where he will resume the practice of law. Mr. Burke will come to Fargo from Devils Lake, his former home, to complete the details incident to opening a law office here. He expects to move his family to Fargo from Devils Lake within the next month. Since his return from New York, Mr. Burke has been looking over the various cities of the state for a location.

Columbus' Message Undiscovered.

Christopher Columbus is believed to have been the first captain to try the idea of entrusting a message to the sea. In a storm near Madeira he placed a written statement of his adventures up to that time in a stout wooden cask and cast it overboard in February, 1493, but unfortunately it has not turned up as yet. This would have been the champion maritime trophy of the world, had it ever been picked up. Since then there have been thousands of bottles, tin cans, casks, etc., containing messages for the world cast into the sea.

GIRL NOW WELL AND STRONG

Daughter Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as Mother Advised

Wauseon, Ohio.—"My daughter always had backache and leg-ache at certain periods and could not be on her feet at those times. We read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound doing girls so much good so she began to take it. That is two years ago and she is a different girl since then able to do any work she wants to do—although she is still careful not to do heavy work—and so well and strong. We recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to all mothers with ailing daughters, and I give you permission to publish this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. A. M. BURKHOLDER, Route No. 2, Box 1, Wauseon, Ohio.

Something out of balance will affect the finest clock, causing it to gain or lose. The proper adjustment made, all is well. So it is with women. Some trouble may upset you completely.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct the cause of the trouble and disagreeable symptoms will disappear as they did in the case of Mrs. Burkholder's daughter.

A young man was wheeling a perambulator to and fro in front of his house. He looked hot, but contented.

"My dear!" came a voice from an upper window of the house.

"Now let me alone!" he called back. "We're all right."

An hour later the same voice, in earnest, pleading tones:

"Arthur, dear!"

"Well, what do you want?" he responded. "Anything wrong in the house?"

"No, dear; but you have been wheeling Dora's doll all the afternoon. Isn't it time for the baby to have a turn?"—Chicago Herald.

News Briefs from All the State

Condensed Stories of Happenings of the Week in Minnesota

Red Wing—Because the city council decided to allow the present rate of $1.73 for gas to prevail until Oct. 1, the hope for reduction in price to consumers has vanished.

Red Wing—A swarm of bees, apparently a million strong, alighted on the awning of a hardware store on Main street here. After consultation the authorities called in a bee handler from Welch.

Thief River Falls—While digging at the bottom of an old ditch on the Barsen farm, Ernest Barzen uncovered an old buckskin purse containing $13 in cash. The money was so badly corroded that it is difficult to determine the dates of the silver coinage.

Minneapolis—Chief of Police Jensen called upon S. B. Qvale, state prohibition director, to make a personal investigation of a clash between police and Federal dry agents which led to the arrest of three agents.

Duluth—S. V. Saxby, formerly of Hibbing, was elected secretary of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the directors of the organization.

Red Wing—While L. E. Gallagher was advertising for a lost cow which disappeared some days ago, bossie was lying dead under a cavein at a sandbank.

Minneapolis—Building contractors in Minneapolis are experiencing shortage of all classes of labor, according to Clarence Gunn, secretary of the Minneapolis Builders' Exchange.

Red Wing—That Goodhue county is considered a mecca for railroad damage suits is evidenced again by the filing of a $35,000 damage suit in this county for an accident which occurred at Owasso, Mich., in November of last year.

Red Lake Falls—A. J. Endersby, veteran horseman of Willmar, died from heart disease while driving his horse in a race at the Red Lake county fair. The horse had just won the second heat when the driver toppled over Winona—Twenty bands from neighboring towns are expected to take part in a band tournament here Aug. 27, it was announced by the Association of Commerce. Prizes will be awarded to the best band in each class after each given a brief concert.

Stillwater—The Washington County Holstein Breeders' association picnic held at Crocus Park, was one of the big successes of the summer season, it being estimated that at least 1,500 people were in attedance from all sections of the county.

Red Wing—Statistics compiled by the state dairy and food commissioner, Chris. Heen, showed a wonderful growth in creamery business in Goodhue county and the state during 1921 as compared with 1920.

Fairmont—This city is assured of a good ball team for the balance of the 1922 season. Promises of support from Fairmont business men to support the team for the next two months have relieved the management of financial worries.

Fairmont—President Wade of the Fairmont Rotary Club was presented with the official charter of the organization at Interlaken Inn, after 129 delegates from cities all over Minnesota and the members of the local club had been served one of the Interlaken's famous dinners.

Northfield—Remodeling of the new gymnasium in the I. O. O. F. home here is nearly completed. The Rebekahs of Minneapolis and St. Paul have furnished funds for the remodeling. About 60 orphans are at the home, which is maintained by the I. O. O. F. lodges of Minnesota.

Winona—Scattering reports from southern Minnesota and South Dakota indicate yields of rye, barley, oats and winter wheat well in excess of the average for the last five years, according to the weekly statement issued by the Cihcago and Northwestern railway. Yields range from 20 to 35 bushels an acre, the report says.

Hibbing—Seventy-five men were cut from the village payroll by action of the village council at the regular weekly meeting. Among these were forty village laborers, thirty policemen, three from the engineering department, and two from the health department.

Red Wing—All personal property in Goodhue county, including the city of Red Wing, bears an assessed valuation of $3,846,591 according to figures returned by the county assessors and checked over by the county board of equalization. True value of this same property is listed at $11,691,834. In addition the assessors found that the county had 2,360 persons paying taxes on monies and credits valued at $6,668,732.

Long Prairie—Three hundred armed men, including the Long Prairie company of the Minnesota National guard formed a ring around a woods northeast of this village, and a battle with bank robbers who shot and killed Village Marshal George Williams was expected.

Brainerd—A special train of five coaches, carrying 130 men to work in the shops here, arrived, and the men taken into the Northern Pacific shops. This is the first big importation made by the company since the railway shopmen's strike started.

Stillwater — Marine-on-St. Croix, which claims to be the oldest town in the state is taking on metropolitan ways. Saturday evening, July 29, they celebrated the opening of their new electric lighting system. The town once boasted of one of the first electric plants in the state, but as saw mills moved away the plant was dismantled.

Crookston—The entire scalp of Miss Nan Head, aged 31 years, was torn off when her hair was sucked into a flywheel of a motor engine in the basement of their home at Warren.

Preston—The 4 year old son of Lon Nagel, farmer near here, is in a hospital, recovering from a badly torn cheek. Result of chewing on a torpedo until it exploded.

Minneapolis—It will cost more than $2,500,000 to run the various Hennepin county offices in 1923, according to estimates submitted to the board of equalization.

St. Paul—City government set up at Nashwauk, Itasca county, was held invalid by the Minnesota supreme court and officers were ousted while the community again goes back to the status of a village.

Moose Lake—Professor J. N. Bald died from heart disease at his summer home, near here. For 17 years he was superintendent of schools in North Dakota.

Minneapolis—The city council committee on street railway extensions was guest of 200 reisdents of the 4th ave. s. district beyond 38th st., at Royal Arcanum hall, 3011 1st ave s., in gratitude for the recently granted extenison of the 4th ave. s. carline.

Minneapolis—More than seven hundred city employes have been placed on the pension rolls of the Municipal Employes' Retirement Fund association, Walter Scott, secretary, said.

Moorehead—Frank Amberor, a section man, was sentenced to an indeterminate sentence in Stillwater penitentiary when he pleaded guilty in Clay county district court to assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill.

New Ulm—The Pioneer drug store, the oldest of its kind in this section of the state was damaged by fire to the extent of $7,000. For a time the fire threatened the whole block. The state fire marshal's office is investigating.

Albert Lea—Clark Hord of Alden and his wife were injured when the surrey in which they were riding was hit by an automobile. A baby in the mother's arms was uninjured.

Thief River Falls—The district convention of the auxiliary to the American Legion will be conducted here on Friday. Auxiliaries in the thirteen counties in the ninth district will be represented.

Winona—The Rev. John Meier, pastor of St. Joseph's German Catholic church here, has been invested with the dignity of domestic prelate and the title of Monsignor.

Sandstone—Hans C. Sandwick, aged 58, a merchant here for 14 years, is dead at his home. He came to America from Norway 36 years ago.

Duluth—John Richards, Duluth City attorney, who has conferred with members of the state railroad and warehouse commission, declared that the city of Duluth will be ready for a hard fight against the telephone rate.

Brainerd—Harry O. Toms, driver of the automobile which upset near Brainerd, July 14, and caused the death of Miss Christine McIntosh, of Brainerd, and Wayland Smith of Minneapolis, has been held to the grand jury.

Rochester—Governor Preus, James F. Reed, president of the Minnesota Farm Bureau federation, and several other men prominent in agricultural and civic affairs will participate in a barberry eradication demonstration in fields 25 miles south of here.

Minneapolis—A woman's hat, found in a stolen automobile abandoned at Third and Washington avenues S., coupled with a report that a woman's body had been seen in the street near that point has started a police investigation.

Brainerd—A cavein at the Kennedy iron mine at Cuyuna instantly killed Andrew E. Rossburg, aged 26. His partner, Alex Johnson escaped injury. Rossburg leaves a widow and three children, ranging in age from one to six years.

St. Paul—Every man in Veterans ville, Minn., a town populated by former service men, will have five acres plowed by fall, according to a report made by Major George P. Ehren of the Veterans bureau, Washington, D. C. He just completed an inspection tour of the town. He said the plan of these men is to specialize in Guernsey cattle and to build up a reputation for high grade stock.

Minneapolis—Five Minneapolis post office employes, delegates from their union to the Trades and Labor assembly, are facing dismissal from government service as the result of a resolution adopted by the assembly attacking the Harding administration for its attitude on the railroad shopmen's strike.

Cloquet—Virtually all the cutover and brushland of St. Louis county is rapidly growing valuable timber by natural reforestation, T. S. Hansen, assistant superintendent of the state forestry experimental station at Cloquet, who recently has completed a two year survey of the county, told members of the touring party of agricultural college faculty and farm paper editors here.

Albert Lea—Two of four young men occupants of an automobile were knocked unconscious and badly cut by glass, while the other two were shaken up, when their car ran into a telephone pole and tree near here. The driver tried to light a cigaret from one a man on the rear seat was smoking.

Minneapolis—Efforts in a council committee to obtain adoption of a recommendation to cut wages of common laborers failed again, when a motion by Alderman Josiah Chase to reduce the wages of laborers in the water department was voted down, 4 to 1, at a meeting.

When Baby Complains.

THERE ARE MANY WAYS a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.

Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.

And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.

CASTORIA

Let's Think It Over.

There is such a thing as saying too much on any subject, and the "grand-stand" talker sooner or later becomes a bore. The truth is always welcomed, and the truth reiterated and confirmed is more than welcome—it reaches your innermost soul.

Fletcher's Castoria is all its advertising has claimed for it. Scrutinized by the microscope of public opinion and used for over thirty years it stands without a peer in the hearts of thoughtful, cautious, discerning Mothers. And once used, mother love—there is no substitute for mother love—will scorn to try a "substitute" or a "just-as-good".

Masquerading under many names drugs that are injurious to the tender babe have found their way into some households, but the light of experience soon casts them out. Are they cast out before it is too late?

Building Stimulates Local Prosperity — Materials Plentiful and Prices Down

(Copyright, 1922, by Real Estate News, Chicago.)

Next to farming, local prosperity depends upon building activity. The reason is plain. Building is the country's second largest industry. It employs millions of workers directly, millions to make the materials for building, and hundreds of thousands in lumbering, quarrying and mining.

Everyone knows that a building shortage exists. One way to restore prosperity then, is by a lively resumption of building. Materials and labor now are plentiful. Costs are lower. Cement will serve as a good example because it goes into nearly all building.

For every ton of cement, 1¾ tons of raw materials and coal must be mined, shipped, assembled, dried, ground, weighed, mixed and then fused at about 3,000 degrees to a hard "clinker." This "clinker" must then be ground again, this time to a powder so fine that 78% will pass through a sieve having 40,000 holes per square inch. To make cement, one literally must "tear down a mountain and put it through a sieve." And yet, cement sells at the mill for about $8.00 per ton! These facts caused the United States Geological Survey a few years ago to say that "one could not scrape the free sand from the gutter for much less cost per barrel."

Cement Competition Keen.

That competition has been active is noted in government reports. According to the United States Geological Survey, the production of cement has steadily increased and the price declined. It shows that in 1880, cement sold at $3.00 a barrel average at the mill; in 1920 at $2.02; in 1921, at $1.87. Now it is selling at many large plants as low as $1.50 a barrel, only half the average price in 1880, and less than the average for the 40-year period covered in the government report.

At one of the country's largest cement plants the price now is 48½% higher than in the pre-war year 1913. The latest report of the United States Department of Labor shows the average price of "all commodities" as 51% higher than 1913. Some of the items whose prices enter into this figure of 51% have undergone radical decreases, while others are very much higher than the average of 51%. Few, if any, items of the former class enter into cement manufacturing costs, but several items of the latter class do affect the cement costs. In fact, the principal elements in these costs are labor, freight rates, coal and limestone.

In February, 1922, the cement plant referred to paid for its coal at mines 203% more than in 1913, for limestone at quarries 60% more and for labor 54% more. Freight rate on coal was 107% greater and on limestone 52% greater. A comparison of these increases with the increase of 48½% in cement price and 51% in the price of "all commodities" is enlightening.

Cement is so widely used that users themselves have standardized it. Today every cement maker, regardless of his brand, meets the specifications set jointly by the United States government and the country's leading engineering societies. All brands of cement, therefore, are alike.

Jevon's Economic Law.

Because of this, the prices of various brands of cement in any given market usually are the same. The reason for this puzzles many. But the answer is simple and well stated by W. Stanley Jevons, L. L. D., M. A., F. R. S., in his standard work "The Theory of Political Economy," which says:

"If in selling a quantity of perfectly equal and uniform barrels of flour, a merchant arbitrarily fixed different prices on them, a purchaser would, of course, select the cheaper ones. Hence follows what is undoubtedly true * * that in the same open market, at any one moment, there cannot be two prices for the same article."

Applying Jevon's economic law, a simple illustration of cement competition may be cited thus: A, B and C are cement makers. Each seeks business at M, a town with a 30-cent freight rate from A, 35 cents from B and 40 cents from C. This gives A a 5-cent advantage over B and 10 cents over C. A figures he can sell at, say, a mill price of $1.50, so adds the 30 cents freight and quotes $1.80 at M. Then if B and C want to do business at M they must meet A's price, requiring B to go 5 cents below A in his mill price and C to go 10 cents below A in his mill price. Unless B and C can make the mill price sacrifices required by the market at M as made by A's $1.80 price, then A will monopolize the market at M.

Similar principles apply to other materials. Prices are not arbitrarily made. They are based upon supply and demand and upon the cost of transportation, raw materials and labor. Supply of labor and materials now is plentiful. We cannot afford longer to delay needed building improvements. This is particularly true because building is so entwined with the nation's prosperity that a full revival of building will hasten a revival of other lines of business.
